Foreword

ALTHOUGH the first edition of THE EUROPA YEAR BOOK appeared in 1926, this is the thirteenth annual edition as a two-volume world survey, and it is larger than ever. In Volume II new chapters have been added for Bahrain, Bangladesh, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates, while other chapters have changed their names. Cambodia has now become the Khmer Republic, while the Democratic Republic of the Congo (Kinshasa) has become Zaire and the United Arab Republic has reverted to the former name of Egypt.

The work of compiling the information contained in THE EUROPA YEAR BOOK would be impossible without the continued generous co-operation of many individuals and organizations throughout the world, especially statistical offices, departments of information and diplomatic missions. The editors would also like to thank the International Institute for Strategic Studies, 18 Adam Street, London, WC2N 6AL, for permission to use data on defence manpower and finance from The Military Balance 1971-1972.

Articles 91-98. Life of the House to be four years; the King may dissolve the House and order new elections within 90 days; other provisions relate to termination of membership of the House, by-elections, functions of Senators and members of the House of Representatives (they are representatives of the Thai people and not bound by any imperative mandate).

Articles 99-116. General procedure of each House: appointment and duties of President and Vice-President(s) of each House; presence of not less than one-third of the total membership of each House constitutes a quorum; except in specified cases, majority voting shall prevail, each member having one vote and the presiding officer casting an additional casting vote in the event of a tie; parliamentary privileges; each House to sit simultaneously with the other; one or more ordinary sessions to be held each year, such sessions may be prolonged by the King, who may also call extraordinary sessions.

Articles 117-122. Introduction, approval, rejection or amendment of Bills:

A Bill may be initiated only by the Council of Ministers, a Senator, or a member of the House of Representatives; Money Bills initiated by members of either House must be endorsed by the President of the Council of Ministers.

A Bill of the Council of Ministers and a Bill of the House of Representatives shall be submitted to the House of Representatives, a Bill of a member of the Senate to the Senate; thence the Bill goes to the other House for approval, rejection or amendment; if certain technical provisions relating to the reading of a Bill are not met, the Bill will be deemed to have been read.

Amendments are considered by a Joint Committee of both Houses, which returns the Bill with a report; a rejected Bill of the Senate lapses, while a rejected Bill of the House of Representatives may be re-examined by that House after one year (or in the case of a Money Bill, forthwith) and it will be passed automatically in the event of a majority vote of over half the total members of the House.

Articles 123-124. If the annual budget is not passed by Parliament, the budget of the preceding year shall remain in force; additional State expenditure must be sanctioned by Parliament.

Articles 125-129. Supervisory role of Senate and House of Representatives in regard to administration of State affairs:

Members of each House may question Ministers of State and each House may convene a general debate on the administration; in both cases, the subject may be suppressed in the vital interests of the State, and in the case of the general debate no resolution may be taken on the subject matter of the debate.

Joint meetings of both Houses may hold a general debate to vote non-confidence in Ministers individually or collectively; the vote not to be taken on the same day as the debate.

The Council of Ministers may convene a general debate of both Houses, but no voting is to be taken.

Articles 130-133. Sittings of both Houses generally open to the public, but each House may in certain circumstances sit in camera; rules of procedure of ordinary and special committees of each House; each House has power to make its own rules of procedure.

Legislative Power; Part 4: Joint Sitting of Parliament

Articles 134-136. Occasions include the approval of the Regent or the succession to the Throne, general debates of non-confidence, discussion of Bills not approved by the King, declaration of war and ratification of treaties, amendment and interpretation of the Constitution; rules of procedure of the Senate shall apply.

CHAPTER 7

The Executive

Articles 137-139. The Council of Ministers is appointed by the King and is composed of a President and between 15 and 30 Ministers of State, who must not be members of either House of Parliament.

Articles 140-142. Ministers are entitled to attend and speak at meetings of either House but not to vote; on assuming office, the Council of Ministers must state its policies before Parliament, but a vote of confidence may not then be taken; Ministers are individually and collectively responsible to Parliament.

Articles 143-145. Provisions relating to removal or resignation of Council as a whole or of individual Ministers: e.g., on a vote of no-confidence in Parliament, at the expiry or dissolution of the House of Representatives, on the resignation of the President of the Council of Ministers.

Articles 146-147. Emergency Decrees of the King to have provisional force of law, but such Decrees must be presented to Parliament as soon as possible and must be lapsed if Parliament does not ratify them; emergency fiscal laws may also be promulgated by the King, but the same restriction on their continued operation shall apply where practicable.

Articles 148-156. The Exercise of the King's Prerogative: e.g., declaration of martial law, which may also be declared locally in an emergency by the military authorities; declaration of war, with the previous consent of Parliament; conclusion of Treaties; granting of pardon; issuance of Royal decrees that are not in conflict with the law; the appointment and dismissal of military and civic officials.

CHAPTER 8

Judicial Power

Articles 157-160. Judicial power vested in the Courts exclusively and exercised by the Courts in accordance with the law and in the name of the King; Courts may be established only by an Act; no new Court may be established to try any special case or action, nor may a law be promulgated which changes or modifies the existing constitution or law of procedure of the Courts for the purpose of applying it to try such a case or action.

Articles 161-163. Judges are independent; the King appoints, transfers and dismisses judges, following their approval by the Judicial Commission.

CHAPTER 9

The Constitutional Tribunal

Articles 164-168. Membership: President of the Senate (who is President of the Tribunal); President of the House of Representatives; President of the Dika Court; Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal; Director-General of the Public Prosecution Department; four members, qualified in the law, appointed by each new Parliament (such members may be re-appointed).

CHAPTER 10

Amendment of the Constitution

Article 169. Rules and procedures: motion for amendment may be introduced by the Council of Ministers, members of the Senate and House of Representatives jointly or members of either House numbering no less than one-fifth of the total membership of both Houses; passage of the motion requires three readings, and the first and third readings must be approved by a majority vote of not less than two-thirds of the total membership of both Houses.

THAILAND—(THE CONSTITUTION, THE GOVERNMENT)

Articles 170-172. Should the King consider the amendment to be prejudicial to the State or the people, he may call a plebiscite, whose majority vote will decide whether or not the amendment shall be put into effect.

CHAPTER II

Final Provisions

Article 173. Power to interpret the Constitution vested in Parliament, so far as this interpretation relates to matters within the scope of Parliament's authority; no less than one-half total membership of both Houses needed to form a quorum to interpret the Constitution.

Articles 174-175. Any provisions of law which are contrary to or inconsistent with the Constitution are unenforceable; the Constitutional Tribunal decides whether a law is contrary to or inconsistent with the Constitution.

Article 176. During a state of war or serious emergency, Parliament shall resolve to let the King provisionally exercise the legislative power through the Council of Ministers; Parliament may resolve to abolish this resolution at any time; the King shall assume these powers in such a situation if Parliament is in dissolution or cannot be convened in time.

* Abolished November 17th, 1971 (see below National Executive Council). A new Constitution is to be drafted which will provide for a unicameral legislature comprising elected and nominated members.

Transitory Provisions

Articles 177-183. One hundred and twenty members of the Senate to be appointed within 15 days of date of enforcement of the Constitution, and the number to be increased or decreased after election of the House of Representatives; Senate shall be charged with duties of Parliament until the full Parliament meets; elections of members of House of Representatives to be completed within 240 days from date of enforcement of Constitution; the present Council of Ministers to remain in office until full Parliament assumes functions under the Constitution; transitional membership of Constitutional Tribunal.

ELECTORAL LAW

As the acting legislative body, the Senate passed an Electoral Bill in October 1968, containing the following provisions: Elections to the National Assembly to be held on the basis of constituencies bounded by provincial administrative borders, the number of seats being in proportion to the population; the minimum educational qualifications for candidates for election is Pathom IV (graduation from primary school); candidates may seek election independently, i.e., without being members of political parties.

Chao Nah Chao Rai (Joint Aid to Farmers Party): House of Representatives, Bangkok; 1 seat in House of Representatives.

Free Democratic Party: House of Representatives, Bangkok; 1 seat in House of Representatives.

* All political parties have been dissolved with the inauguration of military rule.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

COURTS OF FIRST INSTANCE

Magistrates' Courts (Sarn Kwaeng): Function is to dispose of small cases with minimum formality and expense. Judges sit singly.

Civil Court (Sarn Paeng): Court of general original jurisdiction in civil and bankruptcy cases in Bangkok and Thonburi. Two judges form a quorum.

Criminal Court (Sarn Aya): Court of general original jurisdiction in criminal cases in Bangkok and Thonburi. Two judges form a quorum.

Provincial Courts (Sarn Changuad): Exercise unlimited original jurisdiction in all civil and criminal matters, including bankruptcy, within its own district which is generally the province itself. Two judges form a quorum. At each of the five Provincial Courts in the South of Thailand where the majority of the population are muslims (i.e., Pattani, Yala, Betong, Satun, and Narathiwat), there are two Dath Yutithum or Kadis (muslim judges). A Kadi sits with two trial judges in order to administer Islamic laws and usages in civil cases involving family and inheritance where all parties concerned are muslims. Questions on Islamic laws and usages which are interpreted by a Kadi are final.

COURT OF APPEALS

Sarn Uthorn: Appellate jurisdiction in all civil, bankruptcy and criminal matters; appeals from all of the Courts of First Instance throughout the country come to this Court. Two judges form a quorum.

SUPREME COURT

Sarn Dika: The final court of appeal in all civil, bankruptcy and criminal cases. The quorum in the Supreme Court consists of three judges. The Court sits in plenary session occasionally to determine cases of exceptional importance and cases where there are reasons for reconsideration or overruling of its own precedents. The quorum for the full Court is half the total number of judges in the Supreme Court.

RELIGION

Buddhism is the prevailing religion. Besides Buddhists, there are some Muslim Malays. Most of the immigrant Chinese are Ancestor Worshipers or Confucianists.

Christianity was first preached in the 16th century by Portuguese missionaries and later on by French Roman Catholics. Christians are found mainly in Bangkok and Northern Thailand and number about 149,655, of whom 116,011 are Roman Catholics.

BUDDHISTS

Supreme Patriarch of Thailand: His Holiness Somdej Phra ARIYAWONGSAKUTTAYARN Phra Sangharaja.

The Buddhist Association of Thailand: 41 Phra Aditya St., Bangkok; under royal patronage; f. 1934; 3,879 mems.; Pres. H.E. SANYA DHARMASAKTI.

ROMAN CATHOLICS

CULTURAL AFFAIRS

One of the main aspects of the Thai cultural background and development has been the Buddhist religion of the majority of the inhabitants. The tolerance shown by Buddhists allowed complete freedom of religion in Thailand; Islam was introduced to the southern part of the country between the fourteenth and eighteenth centuries, Christianity came in the sixteenth century and the many Chinese immigrants brought their own religions of ancestor worship and Confucianism. These various religions, and to a certain extent their cultural traditions, have existed peaceably side by side and the tolerance shown to religions also shows itself towards foreign contacts. Trade contacts began in the middle of the thirteenth century and Europeans established trade contacts early in the sixteenth century. The Thai people have shown a remarkable ability to assimilate other nationalities—especially Chinese, of which Thailand has a large, integrated section—and yet preserve their own nationality, in spite of varying external pressures.

The written language has been influenced by, and in turn has influenced, Mon and Khmer. The influence of Buddhism on Thai life is also seen in the development of the literature of the country, a large proportion of early literary works being Buddhist-inspired. Verse was the general medium of literary expression until the last century, and one of the richest fields is the folk literature, which was passed on only by word of mouth.

Thai theatre has many traditional faces. The most ancient forms are the Hun and the Nang; Hun is a type of elaborate marionette theatre, with the story sung or recited by a singer, with chorus and musical accompaniment; Nang is a shadow drama, again with singer and chorus. Both of these have popular forms, with less elaborate figures and more modern stories. Classical drama originally came to Thailand from India. There are two main categories, the Khon and the Lakhon. The Khon was originally an epic religious manifestation, but it has been adapted to a certain extent; the characters, all men, wear masks and the story is told by a reciter, though a singing chorus is sometimes introduced. The Lakhon characters, men or women, but not acting together, do not wear masks, except when portraying demons, animals, etc.; the action is sung by a chorus, with a leader. Traditional music is closely bound up with Thai drama, with stylized, unvarying "action" and "singing" tunes played by a traditional orchestra of at least five players.

Popular festivals and ceremonies still held today have been a common manifestation of Thai culture for many centuries; the majority are of a religious nature, connected with the various phases of the life of Buddha.

REPUBLIC OF TOGO

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Republic of Togo lies on the coast of West Africa forming a narrow strip stretching north to Upper Volta with Ghana to the west and Dahomey to the east. The climate is hot and humid, temperatures averaging 80° (27°C) on the coast and 97°F (30°C) in the drier north. The official language is French and there are a number of native tongues. The majority of the population follow animist beliefs; there are about 300,000 Christians and 75,000 Muslims. The flag consists of five stripes of alternate green and yellow, with a red section in the upper hoist charged with a white star. The capital is Lomé.

Recent History

Formerly a United Nations Trust Territory administered by France, Togo became an autonomous republic within the French Union in 1956 and achieved independence in 1960.

The leading political figure and first President of Togo, Sylvanus Olympio, was assassinated by military insurgents early in 1963 and Nicolas Grunitzky returned from exile to become President. In May 1963 a popular referendum approved his appointment and elected a new National Assembly from a single list of candidates. Togo is a member of the United Nations, the Organization for African Unity, OCAM and the Conseil de l'Entente. An army coup d'état took place in January 1967. A new government under Colonel Dadjo was appointed after the voluntary withdrawal from office of President Nicolas Grunitzky. In April 1967 Lt.-Gen. Etienne Eyadema took over the Presidency. In November 1969 a new party, the Togolese People's Rally, was founded with Gen. Eyadema as President. This party called for a referendum for the President of the Republic and this, held in January 1972, produced an overwhelming vote in favour of Gen. Eyadema. A Government reshuffle followed reflecting Gen. Eyadema's efforts to maintain stability.

Government

Following the army coup d'état of January 1967, the constitution was suspended. Executive power is in the hands of a President and a Cabinet, and elections to a new Parliament were promised as soon as possible. The country is divided into four Regions each administered by an Inspector assisted by an elected council.

Defence

Togo's Armed Forces total about 2,000, including an Infantry Battalion and a small naval force. Under military agreements with France, Togo is helped with training and equipment.

Economic Affairs

Togo's considerable natural resources are still largely undeveloped. The economy is agricultural, the chief crops being manioc, palm kernels, coffee, groundnuts, cocoa and cotton. Many of the forests and mineral reserves still have to be surveyed, but phosphates are being mined in increasing quantities and now form the country's principal export. In 1967 major iron ore deposits were discovered in the North-Central region. It is intended to set up industries, mainly for food processing.

Transport and Communications

There are 498 km. of railways, including three lines running inland from Lomé and a coastal line which joins with the Dahomey system. There are 7,125 km. of roads, of which about 1,300 km. are all-weather roads. There are several airfields in Togo, and an international airport at Lomé served by Air Togo, Air Afrique and U.T.A.

Social Welfare

Medical services are provided by the Government and there is a General Hospital and 13 auxiliary hospitals.

Education

About half the schools provide free education and there are places for 40 per cent of children of school age. Mission schools are important and educate about half of the pupils. Scholarships are available to French universities.

Tourism

Big game hunting and fishing are the main attractions. There are a number of picturesque waterfalls.

Visas are not required to visit Togo by nationals of Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo People's Republic, Dahomey, France, Gambia, Federal Republic of Germany, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Madagascar, Mauritania, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Upper Volta and Zaïre.

Sport

There is little organized sport but football and lawn tennis are popular.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), May 11 (Ascension Day), May 22 (Whit Monday), August 15 (Assumption), November 1 (Memorial Day), December 25 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), January 13 (Liberation Day), April 23 (Easter Monday), April 27 (Independence Day).

THE CONSTITUTION

(Approved by popular referendum, September 1963)

Preamble

History of the Front for National Liberation (FLN). Fundamental objectives of the Republic. Need for single-party rule.

Articles 1-11; Main Aims and Principles

Algeria is a Democratic and Popular Republic. It forms part of the Arab Maghreb, the Arab World and of Africa. Islam is the official religion, but the State guarantees freedom of opinion and belief and free expression of religion. Arabic is the official language of the State. The capital of Algeria is Algiers, headquarters of the National Assembly and the Government. The National Popular Army ensures the defence of territory and takes part in the country's social and economic activities. The basic administrative unit of the Republic is the Commune.

The main aims of the Republic are to safeguard national independence, territorial integrity and national unity; to exercise power by the people; to build a socialist democracy; to guarantee the right to work and to free education; to eliminate the vestiges of colonialism; to defend individual freedoms; to fight discrimination, in particular that based on race or religion; to strive for peace in the world. The Republic conforms to the Universal Declaration of the Rights of Man.

Articles 12-22; Fundamental Rights

All citizens of both sexes have the same rights and the same duties. All citizens over 19 years have the right to vote. The domicile cannot be violated and secrecy of correspondence is guaranteed to all citizens. No one can be arrested or tried except for legal offences and according to legal procedure. All have a right to a decent life and a fair share of the national income. The Family, main unit of society, is under State protection. Education is compulsory and is offered to all. The Republic guarantees freedom of the Press and other means of information, freedom of association, freedom of speech and public discourse and freedom to hold meetings. Trade unionism, the right to strike, and the participation of workers in the administration of business will be upheld within the framework of the relevant laws. The Republic guarantees political asylum to all who fight for freedom.

The rights and freedoms referred to may not be used to hinder national independence, or to affect territorial integrity, national unity, the institution of the Republic, the socialist aims of the people or the principle of unity of the F.L.N.

Articles 23-26; The National Liberation Front (F.L.N.)

The F.L.N. is the only avant-garde party in Algeria. It outlines policy and controls the activity of the National Assembly and the Government. It reflects the deep aspirations of the masses. It educates and leads them. It achieves the objectives of the revolution and establishes socialism in Algeria.

Articles 27-38; Sovereign Rights—The National Assembly

Sovereign rights belong to the people. They are exercised by representatives in the National Assembly, nominated by the F.L.N. and elected for five years by direct and secret ballot. The method of election, number of representatives, and conditions of eligibility are fixed by law and reviewed by a Commission.

ALGERIA—(THE CONSTITUTION)

The Assembly meets within two weeks of election of its members and confers power on them. It then elects its President, Bureau, and Special Committees. The President of the National Assembly occupies the second highest position in the State.

The President of the Republic and Members of the Assembly have the power to initiate laws. All members of the Government have the right to attend debates and to address the Assembly. Control over Government acts is exercised by: hearings of Ministers in Committees; written questions; oral questions with or without debate.

Articles 39-59: The Executive

The executive power lies with the Head of State, the President of the Republic. He is nominated by the Party, and is elected by universal direct and secret ballot, for a five-year term. Any Moslem of Algerian origin having all civil and political rights and being 36 years of age or older, may be elected President of the Republic. The President is sworn in by the National Assembly. Foreign diplomats are accredited to the President. The President, on the advice of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, appoints Algeria's Ambassadors and Envoys.

The President: signs, ratifies (in consultation with the Assembly), and ensures the execution of Treaties and other International Agreements; is Supreme Leader of the Armed Forces; declares war and draws up terms for peace, with the approval of the National Assembly; presides over the Higher Councils of Defence and the Law; exercises the right to grant a legal reprieve; nominates Ministers, of whom two-thirds must be members of the Assembly; has sole responsibility before the Assembly; defines and directs Government policies; proclaims and publishes Laws and ensures that they are executed; appoints all civil servants and defence personnel.

The President must promulgate Laws within ten days of their formal transmission by the National Assembly. Within this time limit the President can ask the Assembly to deliberate a second time, and this request cannot be refused. The period of ten days can be reduced at the request of the Assembly in matters of urgent necessity. If the President of the Republic does not proclaim the Laws within the time limit, the President of the Assembly shall do so.

A motion of censure may be tabled against the President if signed by one-third of the members of the Assembly. A majority vote in the Assembly on such a motion shall entail the resignation of the President and the automatic dissolution of the Assembly. This vote by public ballot shall take place after five clear days have expired from the time of tabling the motion. In the case of resignation, death or incapacitation of the President, the President of the Assembly shall carry out the duties of President of the Republic with the assistance of the heads of permanent committees of the Assembly. He shall arrange within two months elections for a new President, and if necessary for a new National Assembly.

The President of the Republic may ask the Assembly to give him the power to make Laws by Decree for a limited period. Such Decrees shall be taken in the Council of Ministers and submitted for ratification by the Assembly within three months. In the case of emergency, the President can take exceptional measures to safeguard national independence and the Institutions of the Republic. The National Assembly then has the full right to meet automatically.

Articles 60-62: Justice

Justice is done in the name of the Algerian People. The right to defence before the law is recognised and guaranteed. Judges obey only the Law and the interests of the Socialist Revolution. Their independence is guaranteed by Law and by the existence of a Higher Council of Law.

Articles 63-64: The Constitutional Council

The Constitutional Council consists of the President of the Supreme Court, the Presidents of the Civil and Administrative Chambers of the Supreme Court, three nominated members of the National Assembly and a member nominated by the President of the Republic. The members of the Constitutional Council elect their own President, who has no casting vote. Either the President of the Republic or the President of the Assembly may ask the Constitutional Council to judge the validity of Laws and Decrees.

Articles 65-70: Higher Organizations

The Higher Council of the Law consists of the President, the Minister of Justice, the President and Attorney General of the Supreme Court, a Lawyer of the Supreme Court, two Magistrates, one of whom is a judge, elected by their colleagues, and six Members of the Assembly elected by the permanent Committee of Justice.

The Higher Council of Defence consists of the President, the Ministers of National Defence, the Interior, and Foreign Affairs, the President of the Assembly's Commission for National Defence, and two Members nominated by the President of the Republic.

The Higher Economic and Social Council consists of five Members of the Assembly, the Director of Economic Planning, the Governor of the Central Bank of Algeria, members of the national organizations and representatives of major national economic and social activities appointed by the President. It elects its own President.

Articles 71-74 Constitutional Alterations

The initiative for altering the Constitution lies jointly with the President of the Republic and the National Assembly. Two readings and two votes with absolute majority must be given at an interval of two months, to draft any bill. This draft shall then be submitted for approval to the People by referendum. A bill approved by the People shall be proclaimed Law within eight days of the referendum.

Articles 75-78: Temporary Measures

The national hymn is Kassamen until such time as an extra-constitutional law shall fix a new national hymn.

The use of French in education shall continue only until the realisation of all-Arabic education becomes possible.

After approval of the Constitution by popular referendum it shall be promulgated within eight days. The election of the President of the Republic shall take place within one month of the approval of the Constitution.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

General Elections were held in September 1964 when a single list of candidates presented by the F.L.N. was returned unopposed. The Assembly has not met since 1966.

In October 1969 President Boumedienne announced that a general election would be held during 1970; none was in fact held, and by early 1972 no firm date for an election had been announced.

There are twelve Permanent Commissions.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Government is based on a one-party system.

Front de Libération Nationale (F.L.N.): place Emir Abdelkader, Algiers; f. 1954; socialist in outlook, the party is divided into a Secretariat, a Central Committee, Federations, Dairas and Kasmaz; Secretariat: Secretary AHMED KAID.

There are several small opposition groups; all are proscribed and in exile in France or in other Arab countries.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The highest court of justice is the Supreme Court in Algiers. Justice is exercised through 132 courts grouped on a regional basis. Three special Criminal Courts have been set up in Oran, Constantine and Algiers to deal with economic crimes against the state. From these there is no appeal. A "Revolutionary Court" was established late in 1968 with jurisdiction over political offences.

President of Supreme Court: M. GATY.

Procurator-General: M. MOSTEFAL.

RELIGION

Islam is the official religion and it is estimated that 12 million Algerians are Muslims. The Europeans, and a few Arabs, are Christians, mostly Roman Catholics.

Archbishop of Algiers: H.E. Cardinal LEON-ETIENNE DUVAL; 13 rue Khelifa Boukhalfa, Algiers.

ANTARCTIC TREATY CONSULTATIVE MEETINGS

Meetings of delegations from all the signatory nations of the Antarctic Treaty are held from time to time to discuss scientific and political matters. The representatives elect a Chairman and Secretary. Committees and Working Groups may be established as required.

MEETINGS

First Meeting: Canberra, July 1961.
Second Meeting: Buenos Aires, July 1962.
Third Meeting: Brussels, June 1964.
Fourth Meeting: Santiago, Nov. 1966.
Fifth Meeting: Paris, 1968.
Sixth Meeting: Tokyo, 1970.

SUMMARY OF TREATY

Article 1. Antarctica shall be used for peaceful purposes only.

Article 2. Freedom of scientific investigation and co-operation.

Article 3. Exchange of information and personnel.

Article 4. 1. Nothing contained in the present Treaty shall be interpreted as:

- (a) a renunciation by any Contracting Party of previously asserted rights of or claims to territorial sovereignty in Antarctica;
- (b) a renunciation or diminution by any Contracting Party of any basis of claim to territorial sovereignty in Antarctica which it may have whether as a result of its activities or those of its nationals in Antarctica, or otherwise;
- (c) prejudicing the position of any Contracting Party as regards its recognition or non-recognition of any other State's right of or claim or basis of claim to territorial sovereignty in Antarctica.

2. No acts or activities taking place while the present Treaty is in force shall constitute a basis for asserting, supporting or denying a claim to territorial sovereignty in Antarctica or create any rights of sovereignty in Antarctica. No new claim, or enlargement of an existing claim, to territorial sovereignty in Antarctica shall be asserted while the present Treaty is in force.

ARGENTINA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Republic of Argentina occupies almost the whole of South America south of the Tropic of Capricorn. It has a long Atlantic coastline stretching from Uruguay and the River Plate to Tierra del Fuego. To the west lie Chile and the Andes mountains, to the north are Bolivia, Paraguay and Brazil. Argentina also claims the Falkland Islands, the Falkland Island Dependencies and part of Antarctica. The climate varies from sub-tropical in the north to sub-arctic in Patagonia, generally with moderate summer rainfall. The language is Spanish. Nearly 90 per cent of the population are Roman Catholic and about 2 per cent Protestant. The flag has three horizontal stripes, light blue, white and light blue (for military and government use the central stripe is charged with a gold sun in splendour). The capital is Buenos Aires.

Recent History

In 1946, Gen. Juan Perón, a member of a military junta that had been in control since 1943, was swept to power as President by well organized workers' support. He established a highly authoritarian and nationalistic dictatorship based on this support, until 1955, when he was deposed by a military coup. Perón sought exile in Spain, but his influence remains strong in Argentine politics. Gen. Pedro Aramburu was provisional President until elections in 1958, when Arturo Frondizi took power. His government fell in 1962, and in 1963 Arturo Illia was elected President. Under Illia, supporters of Perón were permitted to vote for the first time since his downfall, and it was apparent that his influence was still strong. In 1966, however, a right-wing military coup brought Lt.-Gen. Juan Onganía to power and the brief period of freedom under Illia was brought to an end: congress was dissolved and political parties abolished. Since 1969 the Republic has been beset by internal disorder, especially in Córdoba where workers and students frequently cause disruptions in civil and industrial life. In this year at least six underground movements began to operate, making spectacular robberies and kidnappings. In June 1970 former President Aramburu was kidnapped and killed. This murder remains unsolved. In June 1970 Brigadier General Roberto Levingston replaced General Onganía in a bloodless coup. He himself was forced to give way to General Alejandro Lanusse in March 1971. General Lanusse has promised elections for March 25th, 1973, and has legalized political parties. Agreement was reached with Britain on the reopening of air and sea links between Argentina and the Falkland Islands, but neither side has altered its position on the sovereignty of the islands. A right-wing officers' coup in October 1971 was put down without difficulty and General Lanusse has felt strong enough politically to try to integrate the Peronistas into the political system. His visits abroad to the reformist heads of state in Peru and Chile and to the conservative President of Brazil have shown the General's wish to widen the base of his political support at home and to break Argentina's diplomatic isolation of recent years.

Government

Argentina is a Republic composed of a Federal District, twenty-two States and the National Territory of Tierra del Fuego, Antarctica and the South Atlantic Islands. The Federal Government has a separate executive, legislature and judiciary similar to that of the U.S.A. Executive power is vested in the President. The Congress has been suspended since 1966. The Supreme Court exercises judicial power.

Each State has its own elected Governor and Legislature. Their authority extends to all matters not delegated to the Federal Government.

Defence

A period of national service is compulsory between the ages of 20-45 years, of which one year is spent in the Army or Air Force and two years in the Navy. The total strength of the regular Armed Forces is 137,000 of which the Army has 85,000 with a further 250,000 trained reservists, the Navy has 28,500 and the Air Force 17,000 men. The defence budget for 1970 amounted to 1,800 million pesos.

Economic Affairs

Argentina is primarily an agricultural country and her prosperity rests on livestock, wool and cereals. Meat production is geared to the needs of Western Europe, and about 9½ million cattle and 7½ million sheep are slaughtered annually. The main crops are wheat (Argentina is the world's fourth largest exporter), maize, oats and linseed. Argentina is one of the world's largest producers of wine, and export markets are now being sought in the United Kingdom and the U.S.A. Industry is mainly concerned with meat processing, meat packing and other animal by-products. There has been rapid growth in the plastics, textile, steel, engineering and chemical industries. Oil and natural gas provide the great bulk of the country's energy. Other minerals produced include sulphur and tin, areas in the Andean zones are to be prospected for copper, and aluminium production is scheduled to begin in January 1974, with a plant to be located at Puerto Madryn. Reserves of coal are estimated at 400 million tons. Several hydroelectric schemes are under construction, the most important being the Choeón-Cerros Colorados scheme, which will cost some U.S. $387 million and is due for completion in 1978. The government's greatest economic problem is inflation and stagnation. Inflation was running at the rate of 40 per cent in 1971, while unemployment is at record levels. Repeated devaluations and an inability to meet export targets has made it necessary for Argentina to seek to renegotiate her foreign debts of $4,000 million, mainly short term liabilities. Argentina is a member of the Latin American Free Trade Association and the Inter-American Development Bank.

Transport and Communications

Argentina's transport network is concentrated in the east central provinces of Buenos Aires, Santa Fe, Córdoba, San Luis and Entre Ríos. Main railways connect with Chile, Bolivia and Paraguay and are paralleled by branches of the Pan American Highway. There are

ARGENTINA—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY)

201,059 km. of roads of which 16.6 per cent are paved and 137 km. are motorway. A five-year plan for highway construction is in hand. A new bridge, part of the Inter-American highway, is to be built between Puerto Unzué and Fray Bentos in Uruguay: 4.8 km. long and 42 metres above the river Uruguay. River steamers operate on the Plate, Paraguay, Paraná and Uruguay rivers. Internal air services are well developed and five Argentine lines, and many foreign ones, operate international schedules.

Social Welfare

Social welfare benefits are provided to wage-earners through trade unions and employers' associations. In 1967 all welfare services were co-ordinated under the National Council of Social Welfare, and a new Pensions Law was introduced.

Education

The adult literacy rate of about 90 per cent is regarded as the highest in Latin America. Education is free from pre-school to university level, and compulsory for all children at primary and intermediate levels, from the ages of six to fourteen. Secondary education covers a five-year period, and university courses range from one to six years. There are over 30 universities with about 200,000 students. In 1968 a plan for educational reform was approved, which dispensed with the entrance examination for secondary schools and outlined a new programme for teacher training which, with the abolition of the Escuelas Normales, has been raised to the level of higher education. The reform is to lead gradually to a centralized system of education; detailed planning of new curricula took place during 1970, and a few schools are to be selected for experimental application of the new programme.

Tourism

Argentina has yet to exploit fully her superb tourist attractions. The principal ones are the Andes mountains, the lake district of Bariloche, where there is a National Park, the Atlantic beaches, the Iguazú falls, the Pampas and the city of Buenos Aires.

Visas are not required to visit Argentina by nationals of the following countries: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, German Federal Republic, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom, and all American countries except Cuba.

Sport

The most popular sport is football, followed by horse racing, polo, rugby, motor racing and basket-ball.

Public Holidays

1971: May 1 (Labour Day), May 25 (Anniversary of the 1810 Revolution), June 20 (Flag Day), July 9 (Independence Day), August 17 (Death of General San Martín), October 12 (Discovery of America), December 25 (Christmas Day), also important religious festivals.

1972-3 (the following are optional holidays on which only banks and public offices are obliged to close): January 1 (New Year's Day), January 6 (Epiphany), March 5, 6 (Carnival Monday and Tuesday), April 19, 20 (Maundy Thursday and Good Friday), June 10 (Corpus Christi), August 15 (Assumption), November 1 (All Saints' Day), December 8 (Immaculate Conception).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The principal unit of currency is the peso, which is divided into 100 centavos. On January 1st, 1970, the Argentine Government introduced a new "heavy" peso equivalent to 100 units of the former currency. New notes and coins are being issued but overprinted old notes will be in circulation for some time.

Coins: 1, 5, 10, 20, 50 centavos.

Notes: 1, 5, 10, 50, 100, 500, 1,000 pesos.

Commercial rate: 5.00 pesos=U.S. $1

THE CONSTITUTION

THE Constitution of 1853 establishes a federal republican and representative form of government. The following are its main points:

Each province has the right to exercise its own administration of justice, municipal system and primary education. The Roman Catholic religion, being the faith of the majority of the nation, shall enjoy State protection; freedom of religious belief is guaranteed to all other denominations. All the inhabitants of the country have the right to work and exercise any legal trade; to petition the authorities; to leave or enter the Argentine territory, to use or dispose of their properties, to associate for a peaceable or useful purpose; to teach and acquire education, and to express freely their opinion in the press without censorship. The State does not admit any prerogative of blood, birth, privilege or titles of nobility. Equality is the basis of all duties and public offices. No citizen may be detained, except for reasons and in the manner prescribed by the law; or sentenced other than by virtue of a law existing prior to the offence and by decision of the competent tribunal after the hearing and defence of the person concerned. Private residence, property and correspondence are inviolable. No one may enter the home of a citizen or carry out any search in it without his consent, unless by a warrant from the competent authority; no one may suffer expropriation, except in case of public necessity and provided that the appropriate compensation has been paid in accordance with the provisions of the laws. In no case may the penalty of confiscation of property be imposed.

The National Constitution states, in its preamble, that its benefits will be extended to "all men, from all parts of the world, who wish to live on Argentine soil".

The Constitution may be amended in part or in its entirety if the Congress so decides by a two-thirds majority, in which case a constitutional assembly must be convened.

Congress. The Constitution provides for a bi-cameral legislature: a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies. Deputies are elected for four years, by a majority of votes, and are eligible for re-election; but half the Chamber shall be renewed every two years.

The Senate is composed of two members for each province, elected by majority of votes; and two members for the capital, elected in the same way as the President of the Republic. Their term of office is nine years and they are eligible for re-election, but a third of the Senate shall be renewed every three years.

The ordinary sessions of Congress take place from May 1st to September 30th. The President may extend the sessions or convene extraordinary sessions.

The powers of Congress include regulating foreign trade; fixing import and export duties; levying taxes for a specified time whenever the defence, common safety or general welfare of the State so require; contracting loans on the nation's credit; regulating the internal and external debt and the currency system of the country; fixing the budget and providing for whatever is conducive to the prosperity and well-being of the nation. Congress also approves or rejects treaties, authorises the Executive to declare war or make peace, and establishes the strength of the armed forces in peace and war.

The Executive Power is vested in the President, who must be Argentine-born and of the Roman Catholic faith. He and the Vice-President are elected from the two candidates who shall have gained the largest number of votes if no candidate obtains an absolute majority in the elections. They are nominated for a term of six years and may not be re-elected immediately, but only after the lapse of one term.

The President is Commander-in-Chief of all the armed forces. The general administration of the country is in his hands, and he appoints, with the approval of the Senate, the judges of the Supreme Court and all other competent tribunals, ambassadors and ministers plenipotentiary, senior officers of the armed forces and bishops. He may also appoint and remove, without reference to another body, his cabinet ministers, consular officials and employees of the administration whose appointment is not otherwise governed by the Constitution. He issues the instructions and rulings necessary for the execution of the laws of the country, and himself takes part in drawing up and promulgating those laws.

The Judicial Power is exercised by the Supreme Court and all other competent tribunals. The Supreme Court is responsible for the internal administration of all tribunals and for the nomination of its junior members.

Provincial Government. The 22 States retain all the power not delegated to the Federal Government. They are governed by their own institutions and elect their own governors, legislators and officials.

AUSTRALIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Commonwealth of Australia occupies the whole of the island continent of Australia in the South Pacific and the offshore island of Tasmania to the south-east. Its External Territories are: Papua; Norfolk Island in the Pacific; the 27 Cocos (Keeling) Islands and Christmas Island in the Indian Ocean; Australian Antarctica, Heard Island and McDonald Islands, Coral Sea Islands Territory, MacQuarie Island and Ashmore and Cartier Islands. New Guinea (the eastern half of the island) is administered as a UN Trust Territory. Australia's nearest neighbour is Indonesia, covering the long archipelago to the north and north-west. The Australian climate is hot and dry with average temperatures of about 80°F (26.8°C) rising to over 120°F (49°C) in the interior. Over half the country is desert or semi-desert with little rainfall. English is the official language. An estimated 122,000 people have 50 per cent or more Aboriginal blood. The population is Christian: Anglicans 34 per cent, Roman Catholics about 26 per cent, the remainder belonging mainly to other denominations. The flag is blue with a Union Jack in the upper hoist, a white star in the lower hoist and five white stars in the form of the Southern Cross in the fly. The capital, Canberra, lies in a small enclave of Federal Territory known as the Australian Capital Territory.

Recent History

Since the war Australia has taken an important place in Pacific and Asian affairs and has strengthened her political and economic ties with India, S.E. Asia and Japan. The country co-operates more closely than formerly with the U.S.A., and contributed troops to the war in Viet-Nam until 1970. As a founder-member of the Colombo Plan she has given much aid, in money, materials and training, to Asian countries. In January 1966 Sir Robert Menzies resigned after sixteen years as Prime Minister, and was succeeded by Mr. Harold Holt. Mr. Holt's Liberal-Country Party Coalition was returned to office with an increased majority at elections in November 1966. In 1967 Senator J. G. Gorton became Prime Minister following the presumed death of Mr. Holt in a swimming accident. In March 1971 Mr. Gorton resigned on a vote of no confidence and Mr. William McMahon became Prime Minister.

The former trust territory of Nauru achieved independence from Australia on January 31st, 1968.

Government

Australia is a Federation of six States, forming the Commonwealth of Australia. Queen Elizabeth II is Queen of Australia and is permanently represented there by a Governor-General and by a Governor in each of the six States. The Federal Government consists of two elected Houses, the Senate in which the States have equal representation, and the House of Representatives where representation is based on population.

The State Governments are autonomous except for certain powers placed under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government. All, except Queensland, have an Upper House, the Legislative Council, and a Lower House, the Legislative Assembly or House of Assembly. The chief ministers of the States are known as Premiers, as distinct from the Federal Prime Minister.

Defence

Australia's defence policy is based on collective security and she is a member of the British Commonwealth Strategic Reserve, the ANZUS Council (Australia, New Zealand and U.S.A.) and the South East Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO). Australia's armed forces numbered 88,280 in 1971 (Army 47,076, Navy 17,820, Air Force 22,700). About 19 per cent of Australia's Budget is allocated to Defence. In June 1965 a system of compulsory selective service was introduced.

Economic Affairs

Australia's traditional reliance on the agricultural sector has been eroded by the phenomenal oil and mineral discoveries of recent years. Agriculture now contributes under 10 per cent of domestic production, but the share of agricultural products in total export trade, although declining, is still about 70 per cent, and wool, wheat, meat, sugar and dairy products remain major export items. Gold, silver, lead, zinc and copper have long been exploited, but recent discoveries of vast deposits of oil, natural gas, coal, nickel, iron ore and bauxite have transformed the economy; many of these minerals are being exploited as raw materials for Japan's industries. The pattern of Australia's dependence on foreign trade has thus undergone a change, with Japan overtaking Western countries as the major market. Manufacturing industries contribute over 28 per cent of the G.N.P. each year and employ some 1.3 million people, mainly in iron and steel and engineering. Other important industries are food processing, machinery, motor vehicles, chemicals, electrical and electronic equipment. Domestic sources of energy are coal gas, thermal- and hydro-electricity. Oil and natural gas production totalled 30.7 million barrels and 27,541 cu. ft. respectively during 1969-70.

Australia faces difficulties and uncertainties in economic affairs; these derive from such factors as the increased defence spending, the uncertainties facing primary products in world markets, high transport and labour costs, and the difficulties of overall policymaking arising from the autonomy in industrial and mineral development enjoyed by the States. However, on June 7th, 1971, Australia became a member of OECD.

Transport and Communications

For her population, Australia has a well developed transport system with 25,000 miles of railway, 560,000 miles of roads and 82,000 miles of scheduled air routes. Until recently railways in some States were of different gauges, but a standard gauge system now covers almost all of the country. In the thinly populated areas of Central and Western Australia air transport is extremely important and Australia has pioneered services such as the Flying Doctor Service to overcome the problems of distance. Many of the larger sheep stations have their own aircraft. Australia is well served by international shipping and air lines.

AUSTRALIA—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY)

Social Welfare

Australia introduced Old Age Pensions in 1909 and has since added invalid, maternity, sickness and unemployment benefits and children's allowances. Reciprocal welfare agreements operate between Australia and New Zealand and the United Kingdom. About 21 per cent of Federal Budget expenditure is allocated to Welfare.

Education

Education is the responsibility of each of the six States. It is free and compulsory from the ages of six to fifteen at least. Special services have been developed to meet the needs of children living in the "outback". Some 20,000 are enrolled in correspondence classes and in 1950 the first School of the Air was established, using two-way receiver sets. Australia has fifteen universities with about 117,000 students (1970)

Tourism

Australian tourism is developing with quicker and cheaper air transport. The main attractions are swimming and surfing on the Pacific beaches, sailing from Sydney and other harbours, skin-diving along the Great Barrier Reef, and winter and summer sports in the Blue Mountains.

Visas are not required by citizens of Ireland or South Africa, or by United Kingdom subjects of European descent.

Sport

Australians excel at sport, especially tennis and cricket. They play a number of codes of football and are enthusiastic followers of horse-racing. They also pursue water sports.

Public Holidays

1972: June 13 (Queen's Birthday)*, December 25-26 (Christmas)†.

1973: January 1, January 26 (Australia Day), April 20-22 (Easter), April 25 (Anzac Day).

There are also a number of State holidays.

* Except in Western Australia.

Weights and Measures

Length: 1 yard = 3 feet = 36 inches = 0.914 metres

1 mile = 1.609 kilometres

Areas: 1 mile = 640 square acres = 0.40468 hectares

Weight: 1 ton = 20 cwt. = 2,400 lbs. = 1,016.05 kilograms

Capacity: 1 Imperial gallon = 8 pints = 4.5459 litres

Currency and Exchange Rates

On February 14, 1966, decimal currency was introduced, based on a dollar worth ten A/shillings.

Notes: A$ 1, 2, 5, 10, 20.

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50 cents.

Exchange rate: A$ 2.16 = £1 sterling

A$ 0.82 = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

PARLIAMENT

The legislative power of the Commonwealth is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the Queen, represented by the Governor-General, a Senate, and a House of Representatives. The Governor-General may appoint such times for holding the sessions of the Parliament as he thinks fit, and may also from time to time, by Proclamation or otherwise, prorogue the Parliament, and may in like manner dissolve the House of Representatives. This power is limited by strict although unwritten constitutional understanding, and it is seldom that decisions on these matters would be made at the discretion of the Governor-General. After any general election Parliament must be summoned to meet not later than thirty days after the day appointed for the return of the writs. Parliament must meet at least once every year.

THE SENATE

The Senate is composed of ten Senators from each State, directly chosen for a period of six years by the people of the State, voting as one electorate. The Senators are elected by proportional representation. They are chosen for a term of six years and retire by rotation, half from each State on 30 June of each third year. The Senate may proceed to the dispatch of business notwithstanding the failure of any State to provide for its representation in the Senate.

If a Senator vacates his seat before the expiration of his term of service, the houses of Parliament of the State for which he was chosen shall, in joint session, choose a person to hold the place until the expiration of the term or until the election of a successor. If the State Parliament is not in session the Governor of the State appoints a Senator to hold office until Parliament reassembles, or until a new Senator is elected.

At least one-third of the members of the Senate must be present for the exercise of its powers.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

In accordance with the Constitution, the total number of members of the House of Representatives must be as nearly as practicable double that of the Senate. The number in each State is in proportion to population, but under the Constitution must be at least five. At present the House of Representatives is composed of 124 members which includes 2 members for the internal Territories. Until recently these members, though able to join in all debates, were entitled to vote only on matters affecting their territories; full voting rights were extended to the member for the Australian Capital Territory in 1967 and to the member for the Northern Territory in 1968.

Members are elected by universal adult suffrage and voting is compulsory. Qualifications for Commonwealth franchise are possessed by any British subject, not under 21 years of age and not disqualified on racial or other ground, who has lived in Australia for six months continuously. Members of the Australian task force in Vietnam were made eligible to vote in the 1966 Federal elections, though voting was not compulsory. This empowered Australians under 21 to vote for the first time.

Members are chosen by the electors of their respective electorates by the preferential voting system.

The duration of the Parliament is limited to three years, unless dissolved by the Governor-General.

Qualification for membership of the House of Representatives are possessed by any British subject 21 years of age or over who has resided in the Commonwealth for at least three years and who is, or is qualified to become, an elector of the Commonwealth.

THE EXECUTIVE GOVERNMENT

The executive power of the Commonwealth is vested in the Queen, and is exercised by the Governor-General, assisted by an Executive Council of Ministers of State. These Ministers are, or must become within three months, members of the Commonwealth Parliament.

THE JUDICIAL POWER

The judicial power of the Commonwealth is vested in the High Court of Australia, in such other Federal Courts as the Commonwealth Parliament creates, and in such other courts as it invests with Federal jurisdiction.

The High Court consists of a Chief Justice and not less than two other Justices, appointed by the Governor in Council. (There are at present a Chief Justice and six other Justices.) It has both an original and an appellate jurisdiction.

The High Court's original jurisdiction extends to all matters arising under any treaty, affecting representatives of other countries, in which the Commonwealth or its representative is a party, between States or between residents of different States or between a State and a resident of another State, and in which a writ of Mandamus, or prohibition, or an injunction is sought against a Commonwealth officer. It also extends to matters arising under the Constitution or involving its interpretation, and to any other matter as empowered by the Commonwealth Parliament.

The appellate jurisdiction extends to appeals from all judgments, decrees, orders and sentences of its own Justices exercising original jurisdiction, of any other Federal Court or court exercising Federal jurisdiction and of the Supreme Court of any State or any other State court from which an appeal lies to the Queen in Council. In 1968 appeals from the High Court to the Queen in Council were abolished.

An amendment of the Conciliation and Arbitration Act assented to on June 30th, 1956 altered the structure of the arbitration machinery by separating the judicial and arbitral functions. The Commonwealth Industrial Court was set up to deal with judicial matters under the Act and the Commonwealth Conciliation and Arbitration Commission to handle the function of conciliation and arbitration.

The Commonwealth Industrial Court is composed of a Chief Judge and three other Judges. The Commonwealth Conciliation and Arbitration Commission comprises a President, not less than two Deputy Presidents, a Senior Commissioner, not less than five Commissioners, and a number of Conciliators. Also, since 1928, jurisdiction in bankruptcy and insolvency is administered by Commonwealth Bankruptcy Courts. There is a Federal Supreme Court in the Australian Capital Territory and in the Northern Territory. State courts, usually courts of summary jurisdiction, are invested with Federal judicial power, principally to deal with offences created by Federal statutes.

THE STATES

The Commonwealth Constitution safeguards the Constitution of each State by providing that it shall continue as at the establishment of the Commonwealth, except as altered in accordance with its own provisions. When a State law is inconsistent with a law of the Commonwealth, the latter prevails, and the former is invalid to the extent of the inconsistency. However, the legislation of the Commonwealth Parliament is limited to those matters which are listed in Section 51 of the Constitution, while the States possess, as well as concurrent powers in those matters, residual legislative powers enabling them to legislate in any way for "the peace, order and good Government" of their respective territories.

The States may not raise or maintain naval or military forces, or impose taxes on any property belonging to the Commonwealth, nor may the Commonwealth tax State property. The State may not coin money.

The Commonwealth may not make any law for establishing any religion or for prohibiting the exercise of any religion, and no religious test may be imposed as a qualification for any office under the Commonwealth.

The Commonwealth is charged with protecting every State against invasion, and, on the application of a State Executive Government, against domestic violence.

Provision is made under the Constitution for the admission of new States and for the establishment of new States within the Commonwealth.

ALTERATION OF THE CONSTITUTION

Proposed laws for the alteration of the Constitution must be passed by an absolute majority of each House of Parliament, and not less than two or more than six months after its passage the proposed law must be submitted in each State to the qualified electors.

In the event of one House twice rejecting a proposed law which has already received an absolute majority in the other House, the Governor-General may submit the proposed law to the electors. If, in a majority of the States a majority of the electors voting approve the proposed law and if a majority of all the electors voting also approve, it shall be presented to the Governor-General for Royal Assent.

No alteration diminishing the proportionate representation of any State in either House of the Parliament, or the minimum number of representatives of a State in the House of Representatives, or increasing, diminishing or altering the limits of the State, or in any way affecting the provisions of the Constitution in relation thereto, shall become law unless the majority of the electors voting in that State approve the proposed law.

A committee was set up in 1956 to review the Commonwealth Constitution. The report of the Committee was submitted to the House of Representatives on October 1st, 1958, but its main proposals have yet to be approved. In 1967 a Bill was introduced into both Houses of Parliament which was subsequently passed. It was submitted to a Referendum in May 1967 and approved overwhelmingly. This constitutional provision lays down that the aboriginal people be included, for the purposes of calculation, in the total population of the Commonwealth and the use of certain words in relation to the aboriginal race (held to be discriminatory) have been declared illegal.

NEW SOUTH WALES

Formal possession of the east coast of Australia was taken in 1770. The first settlement was founded in 1788, and a responsible government was elected in 1856. It federated with the other States to form the Commonwealth in 1901.

The executive power is in the hands of a Governor, appointed by the Crown, who is assisted by a Cabinet.

The Legislative Power is vested in a Parliament of two Houses, the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. The former consists of sixty members, elected at a joint sitting of both Houses of Parliament, for a term of twelve years, fifteen members retiring every three years. The Legislative Assembly consists of ninety-four members, and sits for three years.

VICTORIA

Formerly a portion of New South Wales, Victoria was proclaimed a separate colony in 1851 and accorded responsible self-government four years later.

The legislative authority is vested in a bicameral Parliament: the Upper House, or Legislative Council, of thirty-four members, elected for six years, and the Lower House, or Legislative Assembly, of sixty-six members, elected for three years. One-half of the members of the Council retire every three years.

In the exercise of the executive the Governor is assisted by a Cabinet of responsible Ministers. Not more than five members of the Council and not more than twelve members of the Assembly may occupy salaried office at any one time.

QUEENSLAND

Queensland was formerly a part of New South Wales. It was formed into a separate colony with responsible government in 1859.

Legislative power rests with a unicameral Parliament composed of seventy-eight members elected from seventy-eight districts for a term of three years.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA

South Australia was formed into a British Province by Letters Patent of February 1836. The Constitution of October 24th, 1856 vests the legislative power in a Parliament elected by the people and consisting of a Legislative Council and a House of Assembly. The Council is composed of twenty members, one-half of whom retire every three years. Their places are filled by new members elected from each of the five districts into which the State is divided for this purpose. The executive has no authority to dissolve this body.

The thirty-nine members of the House of Assembly are elected for three years from thirty-nine electoral districts.

The executive power is vested in a Governor, appointed by the Crown, and an Executive Council consisting of ten responsible Ministers.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA

Formal possession of the country around King George Sound was taken in 1891. In June 1892 Captain James Stirling founded the Swan River Settlement, now the Commonwealth State of Western Australia.

Large grants of land were made to early settlers, and agricultural and pastoral occupations were pursued by a small population. In 1850, when the State was in a poor condition, the inhabitants' petition that it might be made a penal settlement was acceded to. In the following eighteen years, 9,718 convicts were sent out. Transportation ceased in 1868.

In 1890 the administration was vested in the Governor, a Legislative Council and a Legislative Assembly. The Council was, at first, nominated by the Governor, but it was provided that in the event of the population of the colony reaching 60,000 it should be elective. This figure was reached in 1893.

According to the present Constitution, the Legislative Council consists of thirty members, each of the ten provinces returning three members, one of whom retires biennially.

The Legislative Assembly consists of fifty members, elected for three years, each representing one electorate.

The entire management and control of the unalienated lands of the Crown in Western Australia is vested in the State Legislature.

TASMANIA

Tasmania was discovered in 1642 and became a British settlement in 1803 as a dependency of New South Wales. Responsible government was established in 1856.

The administration is vested in a Governor acting upon the advice of a Legislative Council and House of Assembly. The Council consists of nineteen members who sit for six years, retiring in rotation. There is no power to dissolve the Council. The House of Assembly has thirty members elected for five years.

AUSTRALIA—(THE CONSTITUTION, THE GOVERNMENT)

NORTHERN TERRITORY

The Northern Territory covers 520,280 square miles, of which 94,025 square miles is reserved for aboriginals. Population, excluding full-blood aboriginals, is about 62,000, and there are estimated to be 18,000 full-blood aboriginals.

The Territory was incorporated in New South Wales in 1825, but in 1863 was added to South Australia. It was transferred to the Commonwealth in 1911. By a Federal Act of 1947 a Legislative Council (sitting at Darwin) was set up, consisting of the Administrator, 7 official members and 6 elected members. At present the Council consists of an elected President, the Administrator, 6 nominated official members, 3 non-official nominated members and 8 elected members. The Northern Territory is administered on behalf of the Commonwealth Government by the Department of the Interior, Canberra, with the help of the Administrator and the Legislative Council. The creation of the Northern Territory as Australia's seventh self-governing State was approved by the Federal Government in 1958, but no date for its establishment has been given.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Liberal Party of Australia, The: Federal Secretariat, National Headquarters Building, Blackall and Macquarie Sts., Barton, Canberra, A.C.T.; f. 1944; features of Party Policy are loyalty to the throne and the maintenance of the political and economic unity of the Commonwealth; the Party is absolutely opposed to socialism and supports freedom of enterprise and initiative. The maintenance of adequate defence forces is also prominent in the policy, together with uncompromising opposition to Communism, the prevention of industrial disturbance, the maintenance of full employment and the extension of social services. Since the Party has been in office, a long-range plan of national development and productive expansion has been pursued. The Leader of the Party is the Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. WILLIAM MCMAHON, C.H. M.P.; the Leader in the Senate, Minister for Health, Senator Hon. Sir. KENNETH MACCOLL ANDERSON K.B.E.; the Federal President is R. J. SOUTHEY, C.M.G.

Australian Country Party, The: John McEwen House, National Circuit, Canberra, A.C.T. 2600; f. 1916; the principal objectives of the Party are the betterment of conditions in rural and agricultural communities through improved marketing facilities, more effective Parliamentary representation of country people, the encouragement of desirable immigrants, and the promotion of the study of all matters relating to agricultural and primary production. The Party upholds the integrity of the Commonwealth; Federal Parliamentary Leader Hon. J. DOUGLAS ANTHONY; Federal Dir. P. P. WARRICK; publ. The Countryman.

Australian Labour Party: Ainslie Bldg., 39 Ainslie Avenue, Canberra, A.C.T. 2600; f. 1891, for the socialization of industry, production, distribution and exchange; Leader of the Federal Parliamentary Labour Party, E. G. WHITLAM, Q.C.; Leader of the Federal Parliamentary Labour Party in the Senate, Senator LIONEL MURPHY; President of the Federal Executive, Senator J. B. KEFFE; Federal Secretary, M. J. YOUNG.

Australian Democratic Labour Party: 561-7 George St., Sydney; formed 1955 following a split in the Australian Labour Party; Pres. J. D. BROSNAN; Gen. Sec. JOHN KANE; Parliamentary Leader Senator the Hon. V. C. GAIR; Deputy Leader Senator F. P. MCMAHON.

Australia Party: 8 Holland St., Chatswood, N.S.W. 2067; f. July 1969 "to satisfy an urgent need for an alternative in the political management of Australia"; successor to the Australian Reform Movement; on Defence and Foreign Affairs the party advocates an independent Australia adequately armed for defence but opposed to intervention in the internal affairs of other countries, and the development of friendly relations with all countries, especially in Asia, backed by aid and trade; on domestic issues the party's policies include a re-structured education system financed by increased Federal expenditure, parliamentary reform based on longer sessions and the establishment of standing committees along American lines, encouragement of entry of immigrants meeting specified educational standards within quota limits; mems. 800 (January 1971); National Convenor GORDON BARTON; National Sec. Mrs. MARY McNISH; publ. Reform (fortnightly journal).

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The judicial power of the Commonwealth is vested in a Federal Supreme Court, the High Court of Australia, consisting of a Chief Justice and six Justices and such other courts as the Commonwealth Parliament may create. Parliament can also vest certain federal jurisdiction in State courts. The High Court has original jurisdiction in all matters arising under treaties or affecting representatives of other countries, and in certain matters in which the Commonwealth or the States are concerned. It also hears and determines appeals from judgments of its own Justices exercising original jurisdiction, and from judgments of any other Federal Court or of the Supreme Court of any State. In 1968 appeals from the High Court to the Queen in Council were abolished.

THE PRESS

Australia's legislation relating to the Press is partly based on modified British legislation, but as each state enacts its own laws, the form and severity thereof may vary.

Under the law concerning contempt of court, since the court takes jurisdiction from the time the accused is arrested, to publish names or photographs before proceedings begin may draw heavy penalties. Though accurate reporting of a case while it is being tried is privileged, and has been known to extend to a degree of scandal, a judge is empowered to ban all reports until the conclusion of the case. Though this legislation is intended to protect the interest of the accused, it frequently hinders the journalist.

Each state has its legislation against obscene publications, which is particularly severe in the state of Queensland, whose broadly defined Objectionable Literature Act of 1954 covers a wide range of offences.

The libel law, closely related to British law, ranges from seditious libel for matter liable to cause a breach of the peace, or for excessive abuse of government officials, to defamatory libel, knowing and plain. The most frequently cited defences are "fair comment and criticism" and "true and public benefit". Certain government agencies have privilege.

All newspapers in the state capitals are owned by limited companies. The trend towards concentration of ownership has led to the development of four principal groups of newspapers. Economic conditions have necessitated the extension of the activities of newspaper companies into related spheres, magazine and book publishing, radio and television, etc. The main groups are as follows:

The Herald and Weekly Times Group: 44 Flinders St., Melbourne; Chair. Sir PHILIP JONES; controls The Herald and Sun News-Pictorial (Melbourne), The Advertiser (Adelaide), The Courier Mail, The Telegraph, and Sunday Mail (Brisbane), West Australian Daily News (Perth), and also has holdings in several magazines and radio and television companies.

The John Fairfax Group: Broadway, Sydney; Chair. Sir WARWICK FAIRFAX; with its subsidiary Associated Newspapers Ltd., controls The Sydney Morning Herald, The Sun, National Times, Australian Financial Review and the Sun-Herald (Sydney), The Canberra Times and the National Times together with four large magazines, and has interests in The Age (Melbourne); also has radio and television interests.

Consolidated Press Group: 168 Castlereagh St., Sydney; controls The Daily Telegraph and Sunday Telegraph (Sydney), and The Maitland Mercury, and magazines including The Australian Woman's Weekly and The Bulletin.

News Ltd.: 2 Holt St., Surrey Hills, Sydney 2010; Chair. Sir NORMAN YOUNG; Man. Dir. RUPERT MURDOCH; controls Adelaide News and Sunday Mail (Adelaide), The Australian, Sunday Australian, Daily Mirror and Sunday Mirror (Sydney), The News (Darwin), Sunday Sun (Brisbane), and Sunday Times (Perth); also has interests in magazines and radio companies.

The total circulation of Australia's 52 daily newspapers (18 metropolitan and 34 provincial) is very high at about 3,680,000 million copies, or one for every three citizens. Weekly papers are even more popular as they more successfully penetrate to the remoter parts of the country, whereas metropolitan dailies meet competition from small local papers. The circulation of newspapers has traditionally been almost entirely confined to the state in which each is produced. The only exceptions, which may fairly claim a national circulation, are the dailies The Australian, which made history at its inception in 1964, and the Australian Financial Review, and the weeklies, the Sydney Bulletin, the National Times and the fortnightly Nation.

The main newspaper centres are Sydney, where the morning Daily Telegraph competes with the Morning Herald, and the evening Daily Mirror competes with The Sun, and Melbourne, where The Age competes with The Sun News-Pictorial, both morning papers. Perth, Adelaide and Brisbane each have only one major morning and one major evening paper.

Among the daily papers most respected for their serious news treatment should be mentioned the Sydney Morning Herald and The Age (Melbourne), which has its own Literary Review, and The Australian, which has three pages of foreign affairs and five pages devoted to finance, The Canberra Times and the Australian Financial Review. The most popular dailies in order of circulation include Melbourne's Sun News Pictorial (646,868) and Herald (500,000), Sydney's Daily Telegraph (360,000), Sun (380,000) and Daily Mirror (350,000), Sydney Morning Herald (295,000) and Brisbane's Courier Mail (250,000), and Adelaide's Advertiser (220,000).

RAILWAYS

The Federal Government operates the railways in Commonwealth Territories and also the Commonwealth Railways between Port Pirie in South Australia and Kalgoorlie in Western Australia, together with the Central Australia Railway between Port Augusta, South Australia, and Alice Springs in the Northern Territory.

The majority of railways in Australia are at present operated by the respective State Governments, and due to a total lack of co-ordination during the latter half of the nineteenth century a number of different rail gauges were adopted. A standardization programme is nearly complete. Early in 1970 the first trans-continental rail services began operation.

Commonwealth Railways: 325 Collins St., Melbourne; Commissioner K. A. SMITH; Sec. H. N. TURNER; a statutory Authority; operates 2,248 miles of railways of 4 ft. 8½ in. and 3 ft. 6 in. gauge; a standard gauge 520-mile railway line, between Alice Springs and Tarcoola, S.A., is planned; operates Trans-Australian, Central Australia, North Australia and Australian Capital Territory Railways.

New South Wales Government Railways: 19 York Street, Sydney, operates 6,061 miles of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge; Sec. for Railways, D. H. WATSON.

Queensland Railways: Adelaide Street, Brisbane; operates 5,698 miles of 3 ft 6 in. track.

South Australian Railways: G.P.O. Box 1825, Adelaide, S.A. 5001; Railway Building, North Terrace, Adelaide; f. 1856; operates 1,570 miles of 5 ft. 3 in. gauge and 597 miles of 3 ft. 6 in. gauge; 246 miles of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge; Railways Commissioner R. J. FITCH.

Tasmanian Railways: Box 624F, G.P.O., Hobart, Collins Street, Hobart; 500 miles of 3 ft. 6 in. gauge; Assoc. Commissioner and Gen. Man. C. G. COLLINS; Sec. R. G. BARBER.

Victorian Railways: 67 Spencer St., Melbourne 3000; f. 1856; operates 4,167 miles of 5 ft. 3 in., 4 ft. 8½ in. and dual gauge and 8.48 miles of 2 ft. 6 in. gauge; Chair. of Commissioners G. F. BROWN; Deputy Chair. E. P. ROGAN; Commissioner I. G. HODGES.

Western Australian Government Railways: Perth, W.A.; operates passenger and freight transport services throughout the south of Western Australia; 3,703 route miles of 3 ft. 6 in. gauge, 376 route miles of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge, 73 miles of dual gauge and 4,044 route miles of road services; Commissioner R. J. PASCOE; Sec. K. D. REEVES.

ADMINISTRATION AND GOVERNMENT

The Territory of Papua-New Guinea is administered by the Australian Government through the Papua and New Guinea Act 1949-1968. There is an Administrator and, since 1964, there has been a House of Assembly of elected and nominated official members to replace the former Legislative Council. There is also an Administrator's Executive Council which enables certain elected members to participate in the executive government of the Territory.

For administrative purposes the Territory is divided into 18 Districts each administered by a District Commissioner. To assist the development of self-government and the performance of functions of local administration, Local Government Councils have been established in many areas of the Territory. At 30 June 1970 there were 145 such councils, 122 of them multi-racial, representing some 2,050,000 of the total 2,312,000 persons in the Territory.

In 1971 in response to a request by the House of Assembly, the Australian Government undertook to prepare a programme for movement to full internal self-government during the lifetime of the 1972-76 House of Assembly, should the people want it at that time. Preliminary work is proceeding in readiness for negotiations with the political leaders after the elections to the House of Assembly, held between 19 February and 11 March, 1972.*

Besides the elected 100 Members, four Official Members and up to three Members nominated by the House will comprise the 1972-76 House of Assembly. Seventeen of the 100 Members will be chosen by the House as Ministers.

* Results are to be declared.

Judges: The Hon. Mr. Justice CLARKSON, The Hon. Mr. Justice PRENTICE, M.B.E., The Hon. Mr. Justice KELLY, The Hon. Mr. Justice RAINE, E.D.

The Supreme Court is the highest judicial authority in the Territory. Appeals may be made from decisions of a single judge to the Full Court and from the Full Court to the High Court of Australia by leave of the High Court. District Courts deal with summary and non-indictable offences. In addition, Local Courts have been established to deal with minor offences, including matters regulated by native custom and are open to all races. They have limited jurisdiction in land matters. Wardens Courts have been established with jurisdiction over civil cases respecting mining or mining lands and offences against mining laws. Cases involving land are heard by the Land Titles Commission from which appeals lie to the Supreme Court. Children's Courts deal with cases involving minors.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

TRADE

Trade forms an integral part of Papua-New Guinea's development and exports play an important part in the economic growth and prosperity of the country and its 2.3 million people.

The Territory earns most of its export income from the sale of tropical commodities on world markets. The main exports are coconut products, coffee, cocoa, timber and rubber. Other export commodities include groundnuts, pyrethrum, passion fruit juice and crocodile skins.

The majority of exports go to Australia, Western Europe, the U.S.A. and Japan. Those areas also supply most of the Territory's import requirements.

MANUFACTURING

Initially manufacturing was confined largely to the processing of local raw materials for export. There is now a growing trend towards industries established to serve the internal market. The major manufacturing industries are generally those processing local raw materials largely for export, e.g. the production of coconut oil and copra by-products, plywood, desiccated coconut and pyrethrum. Nevertheless, industries serving the internal market and using mainly imported materials are numerically predominant. These industries include manufacture of cigarettes, twist tobacco, wire products, building materials, tyre re-treading and re-lugging, concrete products, oil drums, paint, beer, furniture, glass bottles, packaging materials, assembly of electrical appliances and boat building.

In 1968-69 there were 614 factories in Papua-New Guinea and the value of factory production was $A35 million, compared with 130 factories and a value of factory production of $6.1 million in 1958-59.

CO-OPERATIVES

There are more than 300 co-operatives with over 130,000 members and a total annual turnover of about $A7 million. Officers of the Department of Business Services provide extension services, helping with business expertise as required.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND

Christmas Island covers an area of about 52 square miles and lies 224 miles south of Java, between Fremantle and Singapore. (This island is not the Christmas Island in the Pacific Ocean where nuclear tests have been conducted.)

Administration was transferred from Singapore to Britain on 1 January 1958, pending final transfer to Australia. It became an Australian territory on 1 October 1958. The Island has no indigenous population. At 30 June 1969 the total population was 3,439 (2,024 Chinese, 1,079 Malays, 271 Europeans and 65 others). Nearly all the residents are employees of the Phosphate Commission, and their families. The recovery of phosphates is the sole economic activity, and exports were 1,121,176 tons of phosphates and 102,513 tons of phosphate dust for the year ending 30 June 1969.

Administrator: J. S. WHITE.

Supreme Court: Judge: The Hon. Mr. Justice E. A. DUNPHY.

Christmas Island Phosphate Commission: 515 Collins St., Melbourne, Victoria, Australia. Australian Commissioner: Sir ALLEN BROWN, C.B.E. New Zealand Commissioner: R. B. TENNENT, C.B.E. Joint Commissioner: J. A. BISSETT, C.M.G.; on behalf of the Government of Australia and New Zealand the Commissioners control the working of phosphate deposits at Christmas Island.

Transport: A regular shipping service to Singapore at 2-week intervals. Charter services to Fremantle and other Australian ports.

NORFOLK ISLAND

NORFOLK ISLAND is about 5 miles long and 3 wide and was discovered by Captain Cook in 1774. The island was used as a penal settlement from 1788 to 1813 and again from 1825 to 1855. It was a separate Crown Colony until 1896 when it became a Dependency of New South Wales. In 1913 it was transferred to the Australian Government. Population (1970): 1,240.

THE GOVERNMENT

ADMINISTRATION

Administrator: Air Commodore R. N. DALKIN, D.F.C.
Official Secretary and Deputy Administrator: G. HIREN.

The Administrator is appointed by the Governor-General of Australia. In April 1960 the Norfolk Island Council was set up, which acts as an advisory body to the Administrator. The eight members are elected by adult franchise and certain financial matters and proposed legislation must be referred to the Council for its advice.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Supreme Court of Norfolk Island appeals lie to the High Court of Australia.

Judges: The Hon. Mr. Justice P. JOSKE, C.M.G., The Hon. Mr. Justice E. A. DUNPHY.

PRESS AND RADIO

Norfolk Islander: "Greenways Press", Queen Elizabeth Ave.; f. 1965; weekly; circ. 950; Co-Editors Mr. and Mrs. T. LLOYD.

Norfolk Island Broadcasting Service: Norfolk Island Administration.

ECONOMIC ACTIVITIES

The climate is suitable for the cultivation of a variety of crops and for grazing; the volcanic soil is chemically rich but presents many difficulties to the farmer, especially the steep terrain and the porosity of the soil. The situation is aggravated by over-cultivation, over-grazing and erosion. About 1,000 acres are arable. The main crops are bean seed, cereals, vegetables and fruit. Some flowers and plants are grown commercially. The Administration is increasing the forestry estate in Norfolk Island pine and hardwoods. Seed of the Norfolk Island pine is widely exported.

Imports (June 30th, 1970): $3,186,533, mainly from Australia.

Exports (1970): $279,201. A small quantity of frozen fish fillets is exported.

Budget (June 30th, 1970): Revenue $598,653; Expenditure $568,438.

Banking: There are branches of the Commonwealth Trading Bank and the Commonwealth Savings Bank of Australia.

Trade Association: Norfolk Island Chamber of Commerce.

TRANSPORT

There are about 50 miles of roads, including 8 miles of sealed road. A bi-weekly air service from Sydney and Auckland. There is a regular three-weekly shipping service from Sydney en route to New Caledonia and a six-weekly service from Sydney, en route to the British Solomon Islands and other islands.

COCOS (KEELING) ISLANDS

The Cocos (KEELING) ISLANDS are 27 in number and lie about 200 nautical miles south-west of Java Head. The islands, which have an area of 5 sq. miles, form a low-lying coral atoll, densely covered with coconut palms. The population on 30 June 1969 was 607, comprising 127 Europeans and 480 Cocos Malays. Only two islands in the group are inhabited, these being West Island (Europeans) and Home Island (Cocos Malays and 3 Europeans).

The islands were declared a British possession in 1857 and came successively under the authority of the Governor of Ceylon (1878) and the Governor of the Straits Settlements (1886); they were annexed to the Straits Settlements and incorporated with the Settlement (later Colony) of Singapore in 1903. Administration of the islands was transferred to the Commonwealth of Australia in November, 1955.

Official Representative: C. W. SUTHERN.

Under instructions from the Minister for External Territories in Canberra the Official Representative administers the islands.

Supreme Court Cocos (Keeling) Islands: The Hon. Mr. Justice E. A. DUNPHY.

The main economic activity is the production of copra (annual exports about 200 tons). An airfield forms an important link between Australia and Asia.

An airmail and passenger flight from Australia to Cocos and return takes place every three weeks. Vessels from Australia visit the islands at regular intervals.

OTHER TERRITORIES

AUSTRALIAN ANTARCTIC TERRITORY

The AUSTRALIAN ANTARCTIC TERRITORY was established by Order in Council, dated 7 February 1933 and covers lands (other than Adélie Land) situated south of the 60th parallel of south latitude and lying between the 160th and 45th meridians of east longitude. The area is estimated at 2,472,000 sq. miles. In 1954 the Australians set up Mawson Base for scientific research. In 1957 a scientific research station was erected at Davis as part of Australia's contribution to the International Geophysical Year. This was closed down temporarily from 1965. In 1959 Australia assumed custody of Wilkes Station, built by the U.S.A. on the Budd Coast. A new station is being built nearby which will eventually replace it.

HEARD ISLAND AND McDONALD ISLANDS

These islands are situated south-east of the Kerguelen Islands and have been administered by the Commonwealth of Australia since December 1947, when an Australian Scientific Station was set up on Heard Island. The area is 159 sq. miles; there are no permanent inhabitants, but Australian expeditions visit the island from time to time. Heard Island is about 27 miles long and 13 wide. The McDonald Islands lie 26 miles to the west.

CORAL SEA ISLANDS TERRITORY

The Territory was created in May 1969 and is composed of a number of islands situated east of Queensland between the Great Barrier Reef and 157° 10' E. longitude. The islands had been acquired by the Commonwealth by acts of sovereignty over a number of years. All are very small and they include Cato Island, Chilcott Islet in the Coringa Group, and the Willis Group. Three members of the Commonwealth Bureau of Meteorology are stationed on one of the Willis Group, but the remainder of the islands are uninhabited.

The Bill constituting the Territory does not establish an administration on the islands but provides means of controlling the activities of those who visit them. The possibility of exploration for oil on the continental shelf and the increasing range and scope of international fishing enterprises made desirable such an administrative framework and system of law. The Governor-General is empowered to make ordinances for the peace, order and good government of the Territory, and the Supreme Court and Court of Petty Sessions of Norfolk Island have jurisdiction in relation to the Territory.

MACQUARIE ISLAND

MACQUARIE ISLAND lies about 1,000 miles south-east of Tasmania, of which it is a dependency. There are no permanent inhabitants. A scientific research station was established there in 1948.

ASHMORE AND CARTIER ISLANDS

These islands lie in the Indian Ocean, about 350 miles north of Derby, Western Australia. They were annexed to the Northern Territory in July 1938.

BAHRAIN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Bahrain Archipelago lies near Qatar off the west coast of the Arabian Gulf. The climate is cool and temperate from December to the end of March, becoming very hot and humid during the summer months. In August and September temperatures can rise to 42°C. The official language is Arabic, but English is widely spoken. Bahrain is a Moslem State, the population being divided between the Sunnis and Shi'is. The Ruling Family belong to the Sunnis. The flag is red with a broad straight or serrated white stripe along the hoist. The port of Manama is the capital.

Recent History

Bahrain was a British Protected State from 1861 until 1971. In 1968 the British Government stated that all British troops would be withdrawn from "East of Suez" by the end of 1971 and the Rulers of the Gulf States, including Bahrain, drew up plans for a Federation of Arab Emirates.

On August 14th, 1971, the Ruler, Shaikh Isa, declared Bahrain an independent sovereign state, having become disillusioned with efforts to create a federation of Gulf emirates. The treaties giving Britain responsibility for Bahrain's defence and foreign relations were terminated and a new friendship treaty was signed between the two countries. Shortly afterwards Bahrain became a member of the United Nations and the Arab League.

Government

Bahrain is an independent sovereign state ruled by Shaikh Isa Bin Sulman Al Khalifa. Work on a constitution is now in progress. In August 1971, under a decree issued by the Ruler, the State Council assumed cabinet status. Council members were given ministerial rank.

Defence

The Bahrain Defence Force has taken over from British forces the sole responsibility for security in Bahrain. In December 1971 Bahrain agreed to the U.S. Middle East fleet using part of the naval base formerly used by Britain.

Economic Affairs

The traditional occupations of cattle breeding, agriculture and fishing are still practised throughout the islands. The main crops are vegetables, lucerne, other fodder crops and some dates. The Bahrain Fishing Company, jointly British and Bahraini owned, has now been operating successfully for several years.

Oil in commercial quantity was found in 1932 and has since been developed by the Bahrain Petroleum Company. Bahrain became a member of O.A.P.E.C. in May 1970.

Although Bahrain's production of crude oil is relatively small it has the second largest refinery in the Middle East, which produced over 92 million barrels in 1972.

Important new communications facilities and port installations have improved Bahrain's standing in the transit trade. Storage and refrigeration facilities, a shipway and marine engineering workshops have been completed at Mina Sulman. Bahrain has a free zone in which many British, American and local concerns have their headquarters. A £40 million aluminium smelter, under construction since 1969, began production in 1971 with an estimated capacity of 120,000 tons per annum.

The withdrawal of the British forces has had no adverse effect on the economy, the influx of international companies having more than made up for any loss incurred.

Transport and Communications

There are 30,000 metres of bitumen-surfaced roads linking most inhabited areas, although there is little public transport. The Bahrain Airport Terminal, designed specifically to take Jumbo Jets, was opened recently. The Terminal Building can handle the passengers of two 747s simultaneously, and is fully equipped for handling large passenger and freight aircraft.

A new four-lane bridge between the two main islands is expected to be completed by the end of 1972.

Social Welfare

In 1971 BD 24 million, 13 per cent of the budget, was allocated for medical services in which some 120 doctors and 400 nurses are employed. With the withdrawal of British troops the R.A.F. hospital was handed over intact to the Bahrain Government.

Education

Education is free in Bahrain. There are 70 primary, and 35 intermediate and secondary schools. In 1970 there were 6,800 pupils at Intermediate level and 5,750 at secondary level. The sexes are segregated in all schools.

Public Holidays

1972: April 26 (Birth of the Prophet), November 8 (Id ul Fitr), December 16 (Rulers Accession Day).

1973: January 1, January 17 (Id ul Adha), February 6 (Muslim New Year), April 16 (Birth of the Prophet).

Weights and Measures

The metric system is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The Bahrain Dinar is divided into 1,000 fils.

Coins: 1, 5, 10, 25, 50, 100, 500 fils.

Notes: 100 fils, ½, 1, 5, 10 dinars.

THE CONSTITUTION

Work on a new constitution was announced in August 1971 when the Ruler, Shaikh Isa, declared Bahrain an independent sovereign state. It is expected to be completed in 1972.

By a decree of the Ruler in 1971 the State Council assumed cabinet status and the Council Members were given ministerial rank. The status of British officials now in Bahrain is that of civil servant.

The treaties with Britain made in 1820, 1861 and 1892 covering Bahrain's external affairs and protection from foreign aggression were terminated in 1971.

THE GOVERNMENT

Amir: Sheikh ISA BIN SULMAN AL-KHALIFA, K.C.M.G.

Heir Apparent: Sheikh HAMED BIN ISA AL-KHALIFA.

TRANSPORT

ROADS

Most inhabited areas of Bahrain are linked by bitumen-surfaced roads. Public transport consists of taxis and privately owned bus services. A modern network of dual highways is in course of development; the length of the paved road system rose from 4,300 metres in 1964 to 30,000 metres in 1968. In 1967 the rule of the road was changed from left to right. At the end of 1969 there were 14,700 vehicles in use, being an increase of 14 per cent during the year. There were 909 taxis and 139 buses in use. A Petrol Tax of 21 per cent was introduced.

SHIPPING

Director-General of Customs and Ports: Sheikh DAJ BIN KHALIFA AL-KHALIFA.

Harbour Master: Captain D. M. WALTER.

Cargo Manager: HASSAN SHAMS.

Numerous shipping services link Bahrain and the Gulf with Britain and with Europe (Strick Line, V.N.S. "Kerk" Line, Hansa Line, Nationale Compagnie Havraise Peninsulaire and Compagnie Maritime Belge, Kuwait Shipping Company, Iraqi Maritime Transport Corporation, Lauro Line, Yugo-Linea, Polish Ocean Lines); with the East and West Coasts of U.S.A. (Concordia Line, Nedlloyd Line, with Pakistan, India, Japan and the Far East and Australia (British & India Steam Navigation Company, Maersk Line, Everett Johnson Line, "K" Line of Japan, etc.). Though predominantly cargo operators, most of the foregoing lines have some passenger accommodation available; the British India Line operates a mail service between Bombay, Karachi, Bahrain and other Gulf Ports, carrying passengers in Saloon and Deck classes.

The deep water harbour of Mina Sulman was opened in April 1962; it has six berths capable of taking vessels of draughts up to 30 ft. In the vicinity is a slipway, on which may be slipped vessels of up to 1,000 tons and 220 ft. in length. A trawler basin is the centre of a flourishing shrimping industry, the packaged produce being exported primarily to Europe and North America.

BANGLADESH

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The People's Republic of Bangladesh is a relatively small country almost surrounded by Indian territory except for a short south-eastern frontier with Burma and a southern deltaic coast fronting the Bay of Bengal. The climate is tropical monsoon with an average temperature from October to March of 67°F (19°C) and 84°F (29°C) from May to September. Three-quarters of the annual average rainfall (74 inches) occurs between June and September. About 85 per cent of the population speak Bengali, the remainder Bihari and some Hindi. The principal religion is Islam but there is a small minority of Hindus. The flag is green, surmounted by a red circle. The capital is Dacca.

Recent History

The origin of the modern state of Bangladesh can be traced back to the original partition of the old Indian Empire in 1947 when Pakistan was set up comprising two distinct parts, East Pakistan and West Pakistan, separated by a thousand miles of Indian territory. The first awakening of national consciousness grew out of the successful campaign from 1951-53 to establish Bengali as the second official language of Pakistan in addition to Urdu. Political unrest caused by frequent changes in successive Central Governments from 1954 to late 1958 finally culminated in the military rule in October 1958 of General Ayub Khan which was to last for ten years. Another major cause of discontent was the economic disparity between both provinces. The amount of capital resources made available under successive Pakistan Development Plans was so inadequate that the already low standard of living of the mass of the population of East Pakistan was barely maintained. Thus, for example, the country received only one-fifth of total development expenditure and one-third of public expenditure allocated at the end of 1955. During the Third Plan (1965-70) though East Pakistan was allocated 54 per cent of total development expenditure, in fact it received only 36 per cent (i.e. Rs. 700 million as against Rs. 2,000 million in the West). Hence per capita income was considerably lower. In 1968-69, for example, it was only 460 rupees (about £40), whereas in Punjab and Sind it was 854 rupees. The Indo-Pakistan war of 1965 severely affected the economy, especially in the eastern half of the country, and gave rise to some unrest. In December 1968 popular discontent mounted with the arrest of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, the newly elected leader of the Awami League on conspiracy charges which were withdrawn in January 1969. This action and other arbitrary measures led to the resignation of President Ayub Khan and his replacement by General Yahya Khan who announced that elections would take place for seats to a new National Assembly, to the four new Provincial Assemblies of Sind, Baluchistan, North West Frontier and Punjab in the West, and to the East Pakistan Provincial Assembly.

The overwhelming electoral success of the Awami League in December 1970 made Sheikh Mujibur Rahman (who campaigned on the basis of a six-point plan for regional autonomy) undisputed leader of the East. His party also secured a majority of seats in the National Assembly. Following discussions between the Sheikh and President Yahya Khan in January 1971 it was announced that the National Assembly would meet on March 3rd. Mr. Z. A. Bhutto, however, the leader of the Pakistan People's Party, refused to agree to the Sheikh's six-point plan, and consequently President Yahya Khan postponed the convening of the National Assembly sine die, though this was later revoked. The civilian Governor of East Pakistan was removed and Lt.-Gen. Tikka Khan appointed Martial Law Administrator. The increasing severity of the military rule in the East prompted Sheikh Mujibur Rahman to demand an enquiry into allegations of brutality by the military authorities; the confining of troops to barracks; the lifting of Martial Law and the transfer of power to the elected representatives.

Following the failure of talks between himself, President Yahya Khan and Mr. Bhutto, the army moved on March 25th against Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, who was denounced as a traitor and his party banned. He was later arrested and taken to Rawalpindi to stand trial for alleged treason. An armed liberation struggle led by the Mukhti Bahini broke out against the Pakistan Army, and in the face of mounting atrocities by the Army against the civilian population refugees, eventually numbering ten million, fled into India. On April 17th, 1971, the People's Republic of Bangladesh was proclaimed at Mujinagar in India, and Sheikh Mujibur Rahman was declared President with Sayed Nazrul Islam as Acting President in the former's absence. For the following six months the Mukhti Bahini carried on extensive guerrilla warfare and following frequent border clashes between Indian and Pakistani troops in October and early November 1971, especially in East Pakistan, President Yahya Khan declared a state of emergency on November 23rd. On December 4th, the Pakistani air force struck at Indian airfields, India was placed on a war footing and full-scale hostilities began on both the eastern and western borders of Pakistan. By mid-December Indian forces had penetrated deep into East Pakistan, which had been recognized by India as the People's Republic of Bangladesh on December 6th.

On December 14th Dr. A. M. Malik, the Governor of East Pakistan, resigned. Two days later 35,000 Pakistani troops in the East under General A. K. Niazi surrendered unconditionally in Dacca. An Indian offer of a cease-fire to take effect next day in the West was accepted by President Yahya Khan, who then resigned and was succeeded by Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who released Sheikh Mujibur Rahman from prison and placed him under house arrest in Rawalpindi. He was later released and returned to Dacca amid scenes of great rejoicing on January 10th, 1972. He then presided over the formation of his first 15-man cabinet (see Government, p. 104). To date (April 1972) some sixty countries have recognized Bangladesh, which became a member of the Commonwealth on April 18th, 1972. A Twenty-Five Year Treaty of Friendship, Co-Operation and Peace was signed with India on March 19th, 1972.

Government

A draft constitution is being prepared, (the basis of which will be secularism, democracy and socialism) by a 34 member committee of the assembly under Dr. KAMAL HUSSEIN. It is expected that the system of government will be parliamentary, with a unicameral legislature. The Constituent Assembly which met on April 10th comprises members of the national and provincial assemblies elected in 1970 (prior to independence) from the former province of East Pakistan. The vast majority of these representatives belong to the Awami League led by the Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibar Rahman.

Defence

Indian armed forces were withdrawn from Bangladesh in March 1972. The maintenance of law and order and internal security is entrusted to regular Bengali troops of the former Pakistan army and certain elements of the Mukhti Bahini guerilla forces pending the formation of a regular army, navy and air force, together with a people's police force and national militia.

Economic Affairs

The country is basically agricultural and very fertile, the main commodities produced being rice, jute and tea. Ninety per cent of arable land is under rice and prior to independence Bangladesh accounted for about half of Pakistani's total output. The population density of nearly 1,200 per square mile illustrates the degree of dependence on this staple commodity, especially as rainfall can cause extensive flooding. Rice production averages 1.5 million tons annually. Though 90 per cent of jute factories have resumed working, the war greatly affected jute production. Output for 1971 is provisionally estimated at 6.5 million bales compared with a total of 7.5 million bales in 1969. Jute, both raw and manufactured, is the most substantial export item, earning about Rs. 1,500 million a year; jute exports to West Pakistan in 1970-71 were valued at Rs. 121 million. Jute exports are now likely to represent 90 per cent of all foreign exchange earnings. Tea, mainly grown around Sylhet, earned an estimated Rs. 240 million in 1970-71. Bangladesh has few mineral resources although some natural gas has been produced and there are the beginnings of steel and oil industries.

Owing to severe dislocation of the economy caused by the war of independence it seems likely that for the foreseeable future Bangladesh will remain heavily dependent on foreign aid despite the £70 million remitted by Bengali nationals in the U.K. The UN has estimated the cost of immediate reconstruction at between U.S. $1,150 million and U.S. $1,350 million. The Indian Government has pledged Rs. 7,500 million in aid for the provision of food, advisors and specialists. Several other governments have also made offers of financial assistance.

Transport and Communications

Water transport is of major significance in Bangladesh, and there are about 5,000 miles of navigable waterways. It has been severely disrupted and out some 800 vessels in use prior to the war, only 500 are still serviceable. Chittagong, the principal port, has been expanded in recent years and now handles 4.3 million tons a year. There are about 1,750 miles of railway. A rapid expansion in road building has increased the length of surface roads to some 15,000 miles, while dirt road mileage totals approximately 100,000. In March Bangladesh Biman, the national airline, began internal services and a weekly charter service to London.

Social Welfare

Since independence the main priorities have been the provision of rapid relief to the large numbers of refugees returning to their homes, as well as medical services and public health measures to combat the threat of widespread disease and famine. The UN has conservatively estimated that at least 1.59 million houses have been destroyed and that about 12 million people are destitute (10 million in rural areas and 2 million in urban areas).

Education

Under the old Pakistan constitution of 1962, recently suspended, universal free primary education was a constitutional right, but less than half the children in East Pakistan received it, and only about 10 per cent received secondary education. No more than 15 per cent of the population is literate. There are five universities and several polytechnics and technical institutes.

Tourism

Until further notice visas will be required by all nationals of countries which have recognized Bangladesh, but Commonwealth citizens are exempt.

Public Holidays

1972: March 17 (Birthday of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman), March 26 (Independence Day), April 14 (Bengali New Year Day), October 14-15 (Durga Puja), November 8-9 (Id-ul-Fitr), December 16 (Victory Day), December 17-19 (Abana), December 25 (Christmas).

1973: February 21 (Shahid Day).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial System of measures is in force pending the introduction of a metric system.

1 maund=82.27lb.

1 seer=2.057lb.

1 tola=180 grains

Currency and Exchange Rates

In March 1972 Bangladesh notes and coin—the Taka and the Paisa—went into circulation. The Taka is equivalent to the Old Pakistan Rupee. It is estimated that there are about Rs. 3,600,000 million of the old currency still in circulation in Bangladesh.

BARBADOS

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Dominion of Barbados is the most easterly of the Caribbean islands, lying about 200 miles north-east of Trinidad. There is a rainy season from July to November but the climate is cool during the rest of the year. The mean annual temperature is about 78°F (26°C). There is no indigenous population, and 90 per cent of the population is of African descent. The language used is English and the principal religion is Christianity. The flag consists of a central gold band between two vertical bands of ultramarine blue. On the gold band is the head of a black trident. The capital is Bridgetown.

Recent History

Barbados joined the West Indies Federation on its formation in 1958, remaining a member until the dissolution of the Federation in 1962. In 1964 it was agreed that Barbados should become the capital of a proposed East Caribbean Federation, to include the Windward and Leeward Islands, but the Federation was never established. However some common services, particularly of currency, transport and education, are shared with other Caribbean territories. In April 1964 executive powers were transferred to a Cabinet of Ministers, and Barbados became fully independent within the Commonwealth on November 30th, 1966. In 1966 Barbados joined the United Nations and in 1967 the Organization of American States.

Government

The country adopted Dominion status within the Commonwealth in November 1966. H.M. the Queen is represented by a Governor-General, and executive power is in the hands of a Cabinet consisting of a Prime Minister and not less than five other Ministers. Parliament consists of a senate of 21 members, appointed by the Governor-General, and an elected House of Assembly. The House of Assembly is one of the oldest representative bodies in the Commonwealth; elections are by universal adult suffrage, the voting age being 18.

Economic Affairs

The Commonwealth Sugar Agreement, now extended until 1974, allows sugar to remain the mainstay of the country's economy. However, the tourist industry is rapidly expanding, and there is a small source of natural gas. Outside the harvest season there is a labour surplus and light industry is being encouraged. Many Barbadians work in the United Kingdom. With Guyana and Antigua, Barbados set up in 1967 the Caribbean Free Trade Area (Carifta), which aims at the removal of import duties and quantitative restrictions in the Caribbean; Carifta also envisages the free interchange of labour forces. There are now 12 member countries.

Transport and Communications

The situation of the island and its good harbour and airport facilities make it a natural entrepôt for the eastern Caribbean. There are 840 miles of roads, mostly bituminized; the airport can accommodate laden jet aircraft; the harbour at Bridgetown, recently enlarged, has moorings for eight ocean-going ships.

Social Welfare

EC$10 million is spent annually on health services. There are three Government hospitals and a Roman Catholic Hospital, 10 other hospitals and 14 child care clinics. The Government has also undertaken the building of group housing for lower income families, and there are a number of voluntary social welfare organizations.

Education

Education is free. The literacy rate is over 97 per cent. There are eight comprehensive schools and eleven grammar schools and a community college. Teacher training is provided at one College, and there is a technical Institute. At the Barbados branch of the University of the West Indies education is also free.

Tourism

The natural attractions of the island include chiefly the healthy climate and varied scenery. In addition there are many facilities for outdoor sports of all kinds. Bathsheba on the east coast is a well-known health resort. Since 1961 the number of tourists visiting Barbados has been increasing by 15 per cent a year. Revenue from Tourism has increased from EC$13 million (1960) to $57 million (1969).

Visas are not required by nationals of Commonwealth countries, U.S.A., Iceland, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Israel, Liechtenstein, Spain, Italy, Tunisia, Turkey, San Marino, Venezuela, Colombia, Austria, Netherlands, Luxembourg, Belgium, Surinam and Netherlands Antilles.

Sport

Sporting facilities cover golf, tennis, cricket, football, hockey, polo, riding, horse racing, fishing, swimming, surfing and boating. Cricket is especially popular. A new National Stadium was opened in October 1970.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1, May 22 (Whit Monday), August 7 (Emancipation Day), October 2 (Bank Holiday), November 30 (Independence), December 25-26 (Christmas).

1973: January 1, April 20-22 (Easter), April 21 (Queen's Birthday).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial system of weights and measures is used, with the exception that one gallon is equal to 231 cubic inches instead of 277.274 cubic inches.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the East Caribbean dollar (EC$), which has replaced the B.W.I.$ of the same value. The government intends to create a separate currency for Barbados by the end of 1972.

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 25, and 50 cents.

Notes: $1, $5, $20, $100.

Exchange rate: EC$4.80 = £1 sterling

EC$1.84 = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

Representative institutions in Barbados date from the Royal Charter granted by Charles I in 1627. The present Constitution came into force on November 30th, 1966. Under its terms protection is afforded to individuals, from slavery and forced labour, from inhuman treatment, deprivation of property, arbitrary search and entry, and racial discrimination; and freedom of conscience, of expression, assembly, and movement are guaranteed.

Her Majesty's Representative in Barbados is the Governor-General who appoints the Prime Minister, and on the advice of the Prime Minister appoints Ministers and some Senators.

The executive consists of the Prime Minister, appointed by the Governor-General as being the person best able to command a majority in the House of Assembly; and not less than five other Ministers. Provision is also made for a Privy Council, presided over by the Governor-General.

Parliament consists of two houses, the Senate and the House of Assembly. The Senate has 21 members, 12 appointed by the Governor-General on the advice of the Premier, 2 on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition, and 7 as representatives of such interests as the Governor-General considers appropriate. The House of Assembly has 24 members, elected by universal adult suffrage for a five-year term. Since 1963 the voting age has been 18.

The Constitution also provides for the establishment of a Judiciary and a Legal Service, and Service Commissions for the Judicial Service, the Public Service and the Police Service. These Commissions are exempt from legal investigation; they have executive powers to deal with appointments, dismissals and disciplinary control of the services for which they are responsible.

Actual Expenditure: Rs. 106 million.

(a) Roads: 800 miles. Main projects: (1) 120-mile jeep road from Paro to Phuntsholing; (2) 100-mile road from Tashigong to Darrang in Assam, India; (3) 300-mile road from Paro to Tashigong (rising to 14,000 ft.).

(b) Improvement of livestock.

(c) Development of forest industries.

(d) Exploitation of coal and other mineral resources.

AID

In the financial year 1968-69 India gave more than Rs. 50 million as development aid to Bhutan and Sikkim to cover new schemes as well as those already in hand, in such fields as agriculture, animal husbandry, forestry, cottage industries, road building, education and health.

TRADE

All external trade is with India, chiefly exports of timber and fruit and imports of textiles and light equipment.

Exports (1962-63): Timber Rs. 0.55 m., Coal Rs. 0.03 m., Canned Fruit Rs. 0.56 m.; (1963-64): Timber Rs. 1.25 m., Coal Rs. 0.22 m. Other export commodities include Bhutan Distillery products such as rum, gin, whisky and liquors; Fruit Preservation Factory products such as orange and pineapple juices, jams and marmalades.

SOCIAL SERVICES

The country has four hospitals, twenty-eight dispensaries—mainly staffed by Indians or Indian-trained personnel. Tuberculosis and malaria remain the major health problems, although malaria is reported to have been eradicated in the south.

THE GOVERNMENT

Head of State: His Majesty Druk Gyalpo JIGME DORJI WANGCHUK (installed as King at Paro on 27 October 1952).

Royal Advisory Council: Established 1965 and composed of eight members, one representing H.M. the King, two representing the Lamas and five regional representatives of the people.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

Minister of Trade, Industries and Commerce: TENGYE LONPO-NAMGYAL WANGCHUK.

Home Minister: KIDIG LYONPO TAMJI JAGAR.

Finance Minister: TSILON CHOGYAL.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

A National Assembly Tsongdu was established in 1953. The Assembly has a three-year term and meets twice yearly in spring and autumn. Present strength is 140 members, consisting of monastic representatives, officials and people's representatives, the last constituting nearly two-thirds of the total membership. The Assembly enacts laws, advises on constitutional and political matters and debates all important issues.

The country was formerly an Absolute Monarchy but H.M. the King has voluntarily surrendered the absolute powers of the Monarchy to establish a new political system described as "Democratic Monarchy". During 1969 Assembly sessions, the Assembly was made a sovereign body under the following provisions:

1. The right of veto by the King was removed.
2. Full freedom of speech is guaranteed.

3. Power to remove the King at any time by a two-thirds majority vote.
4. A vote of confidence is to be taken in the King every three years and requires a two-thirds majority. In the event of a no-confidence vote, the King is to abdicate but the Wangchuk Dynasty is always to provide the ruler in order of succession.
5. The Assembly has the right to appoint and remove ministers.

There are no political parties operating within the state. Political and social organization is still largely along feudal lines and Buddhist priests continue to exercise considerable influence on the government of the country. The country's serfs were emancipated in 1953.

LOCAL ADMINISTRATION

Provinces: There are eight Provinces each ruled by a Dzongpon (District Officer).

Regions: The revenue is collected by the village headmen and remitted to the District Headquarters.

DEFENCE

The 5,000 strong Royal Bhutanese army is under the direct command of the King. Training facilities are provided by an Indian Military Training Team. No reference is made in the Indo-Bhutan Treaty to any aid by India for the defence of Bhutan, but when the Prime Minister of India visited Bhutan in November 1958 he declared that any act of aggression against Bhutan would be regarded as an act of aggression against India.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATION

Permanent Representative at the United Nations: LYONPO SANGEY PENJORE.

Representative in India: LYONPO PEMA WANGCHUCK.

Representative of India in Bhutan: B. S. DAS, Thimpu.
No other foreign representatives are accredited to Bhutan. Recognition has been extended to Bangladesh.

POLITICAL PARTY

Political Party: Bhutan National Congress: Siliguri, N.E. India; does not operate within Bhutan; chiefly supported by Nepalese; aims at popular government and closer relations with India.

LAW, RELIGION

Judicial System: Bhutan has a Civil and a Criminal Code.

High Court: Established February 1968 to review the decisions of H.M. the King; 4 Judges.

Appeal Court: Court of Appeal is H.M. the King himself.

Magistrates Courts: All cases are heard by Local Magistrates. Appeals lie to the Appeal Court.

Religion: The population is Buddhist (Mahayana). The sect of Buddhism supported by the dominant race (Bhutias) is the Dupka (Red-Cap) Sect of Lamaism. Monasteries are numerous. The chief monastery is situated at Tarshi-Chöd-Zong and contains 1,000 Lamas.

THE PRESS

Kuensel: Fortnightly government newspaper; in English, Bhutanese and Nepalese.

FINANCE

Bank of Bhutan: Temporary head office at Phuntsholing and a branch at Thimphu; Head Office will move to Thimphu as soon as building is completed; f. May 1968 under Royal Charter to provide banking facilities throughout the kingdom of Bhutan and for diverse other public purposes. A new Royal Charter is under-way for the purpose of better provision of banking facilities and providing for certain changes in the capital, management, working and other affairs of the bank. An agreement between the Royal Government of Bhutan and the State Bank of India is also under-way, in terms of which the State Bank of India will participate in the capital of the Bank of Bhutan as a 40 per cent shareholder as from January 1st, 1972, whereafter the auth. cap. of the bank shall be Rs. 5m. and cap. p.u. Rs. 2.5m. (in Indian Rupees and Bhutanese currency in fully paid shares of Rs. 1,000 each). Present cap. Rs. 2.5m. fully paid and subscribed by the Government; Dep. Rs. 103m. Branches to be opened at Samdrup Jongkhar and Gaylegphug early next year. Management: Board of Directors comprising the Governor and 4 Directors, nominated by the Royal Government of Bhutan; Gov. LYONPO CHOGYAL (Minister of Finance); Exec. Dir. H. C. VISHNOI, nominated by the State Bank of India.

TRANSPORT

ROADS AND TRACKS

Main roads connect India with Western, Central and Eastern Bhutan. They are all fair weather metalled roads. A 90-km. road, completed in 1969, links the east-west road to Thimphu and Paro; also extends to the Ha Valley. Northern Bhutan has only mule tracks.

Ponies and mules are still the chief means of transport on the rough mountain tracks.

State Transport Department: Phuntsholing; f. 1962; operates a fleet of buses and lorries.

TOURISM

An hotel is planned in Thimphu. Tourists stay in government-run guest houses.

CIVIL AVIATION

Bhutan's first airport was opened at Paro in March 1968. It is served by DC-3s of Jamair, an Indian airline operating weekly flights from Hashimara (West Bengal) to Paro.

EDUCATION

(1971)

Primary Schools	100
High Schools	2
Public Schools	2
Vocational Training Centre	1
Teachers' Training School	1
Junior Technical School	1
Pupils	16,000

In 1968 the first students—18 boys—completed the eleven-year course of free government education. Some of the schools are co-educational and run along the lines of an American private school but using a British syllabus. There are no mission or private schools, all schools in Bhutan being subsidized by the Government. More than 500 Bhutanese students are receiving higher education in India on Indian Government scholarships.

There are five main language groups in Bhutan but Dzong-kha, that spoken in western Bhutan, has been designated the official language. The provision of Bhutanese textbooks is a problem, written languages using Tibetan script. At present schools use Tibetan textbooks.

INDO-BHUTAN TREATY

The political status of Bhutan depends largely on the Treaty of Friendship with India signed on 8 August 1949.

Treaty of Friendship between the Government of India and the Government of Bhutan.

Article 1 There shall be perpetual peace and friendship between the Government of India and the Government of Bhutan.

Article 2 The Government of India undertakes to exercise no interference in the internal administration of Bhutan. On its part the Government of Bhutan agrees to be guided by the advice of the Government of India in regard to its external relations.

Article 3 In place of the compensation granted to the Government of Bhutan under Article 4 of the Treaty of Sinchula and enhanced by the treaty of the eighth day of January 1910 and the temporary subsidy of Rupees one lakh per annum granted in 1942, the Government of India agrees to make an annual payment of Rupees five lakhs to the Government of Bhutan. And it is further hereby agreed that the said annual payment shall be made on the tenth day of January every year, the first payment being made on the tenth day of January 1950. This payment shall continue so long as this treaty remains a force and its terms are duly observed.

Article 4 Further to make the friendship existing and continuing between the said governments, the Government of India shall, within one year from the date of signature of this treaty, return to the Government of Bhutan about thirty-two square miles of territory in the area known as Dewangiri. The Government of India shall appoint a competent officer or officers to mark out the area so returned to the Government of Bhutan.

Article 5 There shall, as heretofore, be free trade and commerce between the Government of India and of the Government of Bhutan; and the Government of India agrees to grant to the Government of Bhutan every facility for the carriage, by land and water, of its produce throughout the territory of the Government of India, including the right to use such forest roads as may be specified by mutual agreement from time to time.

Article 6 The Government of India agrees that the Government of Bhutan shall be free to import with the assistance and approval of the Government of India, from or through India into Bhutan, whatever arms, ammunition, machinery, warlike materials or stores may be required or desired for the strength and welfare of Bhutan and that this arrangement shall hold good for all time as long as the Government of India is satisfied that the intentions of the Government of Bhutan are friendly and that there is no danger to the Government of India from such importations. The Government of Bhutan, on the other hand, agrees that there shall be no export of such arms, ammunition, etc., across the frontier of Bhutan either by the Government of Bhutan or by private individuals.

Article 7 The Government of India and the Government of Bhutan agree that Bhutanese subjects residing in Indian territories shall have equal justice with Indian subjects and that Indian subjects residing in Bhutan shall have equal justice with the subjects of the Government of Bhutan.

Article 8 (1) The Government of India shall, on demand being duly made by the Government of Bhutan, take proceedings in accordance with the provisions of Indian Extradition Act, 1903 (of which a copy shall be furnished to the Government of Bhutan), for the surrender of all Bhutanese subjects accused of any of the crimes specified in the first schedule of the said Act who may take refuge in Indian territory.

(2) The Government of Bhutan shall, on requisition being duly made by the Government of India, or by any officer authorized by the Government of India in this behalf, surrender any Indian subjects, or subjects of a foreign power, whose extradition may be required in pursuance of any agreement or arrangements made by the Government of India with the said power, accused of any of the crimes specified in the first schedule of Act XV of 1903, who may take refuge in the territory under the jurisdiction of the Government of Bhutan and also any Bhutanese subjects who, after committing any of the crimes referred to in Indian territory shall flee into Bhutan, on such evidence of their guilt being produced as that satisfy the local court of the district in which the offence may have been committed.

Article 9 Any differences and disputes arising in the application or interpretation of this treaty shall in the first instance be settled by negotiation. If within three months of the start of negotiations no settlement is arrived at, then the matter shall be referred to the Arbitration of three arbitrators, who shall be nationals of either India or Bhutan, chosen in the following manner:

- (i) one person nominated by the Government of India;
- (ii) one person nominated by the Government of Bhutan;
- (iii) a Judge of the Federal court or of a High Court of India, to be chosen by the Government of Bhutan, who shall be Chairman.

The judgement of this tribunal shall be final and executed without delay by either party.

Article 10 This treaty shall continue in force in perpetuity unless terminated or modified by mutual consent.

BOLIVIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Bolivia is a landlocked, Andean state bordered by Chile and Peru in the west, by Brazil to the north and east and by Paraguay and Argentina to the south. Climate varies according to altitude from humid tropical below 5,000 feet to the cool and cold zones above 11,000 feet. The official language is Spanish. The Indians speak Quechua or Aymara. The people are Roman Catholics but Roman Catholicism ceased to be the official religion of the state in 1961. The flag consists of red, yellow and green horizontal stripes. The capital is Sucre. The seat of Government is La Paz.

Recent History

In 1952, Víctor Paz Estenssoro, leader of the Movimiento Nacional Revolucionario (MNR), was swept to power by popular acclaim. Early fears of a dictatorship on the lines of that of Gen. Perón in Argentina proved to be unfounded and Paz Estenssoro proceeded to carry out social and economic reforms: the tin mines were nationalized, communications were improved, including the opening up of the neglected east, and some agrarian reform was carried out. The MNR remained in power through successive elections—under Hernán Siles Suazo in 1956 and Paz Estenssoro again in 1960 and 1964, but by then the party had lost its initial impetus and the powerful trade unions were in conflict with the government. In December 1964, the Vice-President, René Barrientos, deposed Paz Estenssoro with the support of the army, and was elected President in 1966. By 1967, guerrilla warfare in the south east was proving a serious threat, but in October of that year, Che Guevara, the Argentinian guerrilla leader, was killed by Bolivian forces, and guerrilla activity ceased. On April 27th, 1969, President Barrientos was killed in a helicopter crash and was succeeded by Vice-President Luis Adolfo Siles Salinas, who formed a new Cabinet. Siles Salinas set up the second phase of agrarian reform, the Rural Development Corporation. On the night of September 25th–26th, General Ovando Candia assumed power by coup d'état and established a left-wing military government. The American-owned Bolivian Gulf Oil Company was expropriated and nationalized, and further agrarian reforms were promised, but little was achieved, and opposition increased. By October General Ovando had lost his supporters on the left and right-wing elements were plotting his downfall. From a confused situation of coup and counter-coup General Torres emerged as president. He pledged his support for the implementation of agrarian reform and worker participation in management. A "People's Assembly" was allowed to meet which called for extreme socialist measures to be taken, causing much disquiet in right-wing circles. General Torres' failure either to purge his right-wing opponents from the army or to arm his civilian supporters, led to his deposition in August 1971 by Colonel Hugo Banzer, who became the country's fifty-eighth president in 146 years. Colonel Banzer promised to eliminate guerrilla activity, restore law and order and to pursue "revolutionary nationalist" policies. Colonel Banzer draws support from the right-wing Falange Socialista Boliviana and a section of the Movimiento Nacional Revolucionario as well as from the army. Bolivia is a member of the United Nations, the Alliance for Progress, the Organization of American States, LAFTA, and the Andean Development Corporation.

Government

Executive power is normally vested in the President and his cabinet. The President is elected for four years by direct popular vote. The National Congress consists of a Senate and Chamber of Deputies. The 27 Senators are elected for six years, with a third renewable every two years, and the 102 Deputies for four years, with half renewable every two years. All persons of twenty-one or over are enfranchised.

Defence

Military service for one year is compulsory for all males at nineteen. The army numbers about 10,000 men.

Economic Affairs

The economy still depends largely on the export of tin, although progress is being made in diversifying exports; tin dropped from 80 per cent of the total to less than 60 per cent in 1969. Lead, wolfram, silver, zinc and other minerals are mined. Crude oil is tapped at the rate of 35,000 barrels a day, which is exported via a pipeline to the Chilean port of Arica. A new pipeline is under construction by YABOG, a joint company recently formed by Gulf Oil and the state-run YPFB, to carry natural gas supplies from south east Bolivia to Argentina. Materials for the pipeline were halted by Gulf after their share in YABOG was nationalized by the Bolivian Government with the rest of Gulf's assets. Work has started again on the pipeline. The World Bank, however, is to fulfil its commitment to help finance the project, and Argentina has undertaken to provide the necessary supplies. Bolivia's increase in agricultural output for 1968 was well above the Latin American average. Cereals, fruits, nuts and rubber are grown. Livestock is raised, including llamas, and there is a valuable export trade in hides and skins and vicuña wool. Industry is on a small scale but development schemes are being undertaken. At the end of 1971 the government announced an emergency plan calling for 211 million pesos to be invested in agriculture, electrification programmes, school and hospital building and municipal works by the end of 1972. The United States is loaning $14 million to help finance the project.

Transport and Communications

There are 3,300 km. of railways, linking the main towns. The road network is being lengthened. A 350-mile highway runs from Santa Cruz to Cochabamba, serving a colonization scheme on virgin lands around Santa Cruz. In 1963 the Argentine Government offered a free zone in the port of Barranqueras on the Paraná River, about 800 miles from the border and connected by rail. This gave Bolivia an independent Atlantic outlet. Internal and international air services are provided by Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano. Foreign lines also serve the country.

BOLIVIA—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY, STATISTICAL SURVEY)

Social Welfare

There are benefits for unemployment, accident, sickness, old age and death.

Education

The illiteracy rate is high (67 per cent) despite a Ten-Year campaign to combat this, introduced in 1966. Education is free and, where possible, compulsory between the ages of seven and fourteen. There are eight universities with 15,000 students.

Tourism

Lake Titicaca at 13,000 feet offers excellent fishing and on its shore stands the famous Catholic sanctuary of Copacabana. The Andes peaks include Chacaltaya which has the highest ski-run in the world. Tourists are mainly from the U.S.A. and South American countries.

Visas are not required to visit Bolivia by nationals of Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Chile, Denmark, France, German Federal Republic, Liechtenstein, Peru, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom and U.S.A.

Sport

Football is the most popular sport.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), June 1 (Corpus Christi), July 21 (Martyrs' Day), August 5-7 (Independence), October 12 (Discovery of America), November 1 (All Souls'), December 25 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year), February 14-15 (Carnival), March 30-31 (Easter).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is officially in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the Bolivian peso (equivalent to 1,000 old Bolivianos), first introduced in 1963; it is divided into 100 centavos.

Coins: 10, 20, 50 centavos, 1 peso.

Notes: 1, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100 pesos.

Exchange rate: 28.4 pesos = £1 sterling
11.8 pesos = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

Bolivia became an independent republic in 1825 and received its first Constitution in November 1826. Since that date a number of new Constitutions have been promulgated. Following the coup d'état of November 1964 the Constitution of 1947 was revived. Under it the executive power is vested in the President and members of his cabinet. In the revised Constitution the President is elected by direct suffrage for a four-year term and is not eligible for immediate re-election. In the event of his death or failure to assume office, the Vice-President takes his place, and failing the Vice-President, the President of the Senate.

The President has power to appoint members of the cabinet, diplomatic representatives, and archbishops and bishops from a panel proposed by the Senate. He is responsible for the conduct of foreign affairs and is also empowered to issue decrees, and initiate legislation by special messages to Congress.

Congress consists of a Senate and Chamber of Deputies and meets annually on August 6th at La Paz. Its ordinary sessions only last 90 working days, which may be extended to 120. Each of the nine departments (La Paz, Chuquisaca, Oruro, Beni, Santa Cruz, Potosí, Tarija, Cochabamba and Pando) into which the country is divided for administrative purposes, elects three senators to serve for a period of six years. One-third of the Senate retires every two years. The 102 deputies are elected for four years, half the Chamber retiring every two years.

The supreme administrative, political and military authority in each department is vested in a prefect appointed by the President. The sub-divisions of each department, known as provinces, are administered by sub-prefects. The provinces are further divided into cantons. There are 94 provinces and some 1,000 cantons. The capital of each department has its autonomous municipal council and controls its own revenue and expenditure.

Public order, education and roads are under national control. The armed militia has been granted the legal status of Armed Forces.

A decree issued in July 1952 conferred the franchise on all persons who had reached the age of 21, whether literate or illiterate. Previously the franchise had been restricted to literate persons.

The death penalty was restored in October 1971.

All the railways are of 1-metre gauge, with the exception of the railway from Uyuni to Huanchaca, which is 0.75-metre gauge. Some electrification has taken place.

ROADS

Bolivia has approximately 40,000 km. of roads and paths. These may be classified as follows: approximately 5,600 km. of all-weather roads, including 535 km. asphalted, and a further 8,160 km. serviceable only in the dry season; 9,500 km. of secondary departmental roads; 5,200 km. of provincial roads; and 11,300 km. of tracks and paths. Almost the entire road network is concentrated in the altiplano region and the Andes valleys. New projects include the construction of a Trans-Chaco highway, linking La Paz with Asunción, capital of Paraguay.

INLAND WATERWAYS

By agreement with Paraguay in 1938 (confirmed in 1939) Bolivia has an outlet on the River Paraguay. This arrangement, together with navigation rights on the Paraná, gives her access to the River Plate and the sea. The River Paraguay is navigable for vessels of 12-foot draught for 180 miles beyond Asunción in Paraguay and for smaller boats another 600 miles to Corumbá in Brazil.

An agreement with Argentina in April 1966 granted Bolivia free port facilities on the Río Paraná some 150 miles N.W. of Buenos Aires for handling iron ore for export from the Mutun mines.

Bolivia has about 12,000 miles of waterways navigable by light draught vessels when the rivers are full.

BOTSWANA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Republic of Botswana, formerly known as Bechuanaland, lies in southern Africa between the Republic of South Africa to the south and east, Rhodesia to the north-east and South West Africa (Namibia) to the west and north. A short section of the northern frontier adjoins Zambia. The territory is largely near-desert, and most of the population lives along the eastern border by the main railway line. The languages used are Tswana and English. The chief religions are ancestor worship and Christianity. The flag consists of a central horizontal band of black edged with white, between bands of azure blue above and below. The capital is Gaborone.

Recent History

Formerly one of the British High Commission Territories in southern Africa, Bechuanaland became internally self-governing in March 1965, and attained full independence within the Commonwealth on September 30th, 1966. Sir Seretse Khama's Botswana Democratic Party won 28 of the 31 elected seats in the National Assembly at the general elections of March, 1965, and 24 of the seats at the elections of October, 1969. Botswana is a member of the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity.

Government

Botswana is a Republic with a President as executive head of state and an elected National Assembly. Instead of an upper house of the Assembly, the President has powers to delay implementation of legislation for six months; and certain matters also have to be referred to the House of Chiefs for approval though they have no power of veto. Local government is effected through nine district councils and three town councils (Gaborone, Lobatsi and Francistown).

Economic Affairs

The economy is based chiefly on livestock, a large proportion of trade being with South Africa. Botswana, together with Lesotho and Swaziland, is linked to South Africa in a customs union. Excise and customs duties are paid into a common pool managed by South Africa and Botswana receives revenues in respect of its share of duties collected. The two countries also have a common currency, the Rand. There is a serious deficiency of employment in Botswana, and over half the paid employment lies in South Africa on nine-month mining contracts. Exploitation of mineral deposits offers good prospects for diversifying the economy. In addition to manganese and asbestos, already being produced, deposits of copper and copper/nickel ore have been located, and the development of the copper/nickel deposits at Pitso/Selibe is being planned by Botswana Roan Selection Trust. Production at the diamond mines at Letlhakane and Orapa, which contains the second largest pipe discovered outside the U.S.S.R., is projected by De Beers. Much is hoped for from the Shashi complex, based on copper deposits, and envisaging the development of reserves of coal, salt and soda ash, and the extension of irrigation farming. The growth of the complex is an important element of the National Development Plan 1968-73, towards which the United Kingdom is providing aid. Frequent droughts, causing crop failures in 1965 and 1967-68, and the landlocked position of the country are serious obstacles to economic development.

Transport and Communications

Communications are largely undeveloped, and the lifeline of the country is the railway between South Africa and Rhodesia. There are several airfields served by Government and private charter companies. In the north the Okavango River represents the only major source of water, one which it has not yet proved possible to exploit, either for irrigation or transport. A large road development plan is under way.

Social Welfare

Health services are being developed, and at the end of 1970 there were 12 general hospitals, one mental hospital, 17 health centres, 16 dispensaries and 85 clinics.

Education

In 1968 there were 78,963 pupils in primary schools, mostly financed by district councils assisted by Government grants in aid. Approximately 2,300 students receive secondary education, and some students receive higher education abroad. Literacy in Tswana is about 25 per cent, and in English just over 15 per cent.

Tourism

There is an attractive game reserve at Chobe only a short drive from Victoria Falls by first-class roads. Most of the main centres of population have hotels, and photographic and big-game safaris can be organized.

Public Holidays

1972: May 11 (Ascension), May 22 (Whit Monday), May 24 (President's Day), June 8 (Commonwealth Day), August 5 (Bank Holiday), September 30 (Independence Day), December 25-26 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), April 20-23 (Easter).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial system of weights and measures is used.

Currency and Exchange Rates

South African currency is used in Botswana. One Rand (R) is divided into 100 cents.

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50 cents; R1.

Notes: R1, R5, R10, R20.

Exchange rate: 1.954 Rand = £1 sterling

0.75 Rand = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

The new Constitution of Botswana came into operation on September 30th, 1966. The principal change from the 1965 Bechuanaland Constitution concerns the creation of the position of President, the holder of which took over the powers and responsibilities formerly exercised by the Prime Minister.

Executive power lies with the President of Botswana, who is also Commander-in-Chief of armed forces. Election for the office of President is linked with the General Election of members of the National Assembly. Presidential candidates must receive at least 1,000 nominations. If there is more than one candidate for the Presidency, each candidate for office in the Assembly must declare which presidential candidate he supports. The candidate for President who commands the votes of more than half the elected members of the Assembly will be declared President. If the Presidency falls vacant the members of the National Assembly will themselves elect a new President. The President will hold office for the duration of Parliament.

There is also a Vice-President, whose office is Ministerial. The Vice-President is appointed by the President, and acts as his deputy in the absence of the President. The Cabinet consists of the President, the Vice-President, and eight other Ministers appointed by the President. Every member of the Cabinet accepts responsibility before the National Assembly for the policies of the Government.

The legislative power is vested in Parliament, consisting of the President and the National Assembly, acting after consultation in certain cases with the House of Chiefs. The President may withhold his assent to a Bill passed by the National Assembly, but if it is again presented to him after six months, he is required to assent to it unless he dissolves Parliament within 21 days.

The House of Chiefs has the Chiefs of the eight principal tribes of Botswana as ex officio members, 4 members elected by sub-chiefs from their own number, and 3 members elected by the other 12 members of the House. Bills and motions relating to chieftaincy matters and alterations of the Constitution must be referred to the House, which may also deliberate and make representations on any matter, including Bills affecting tribal interests.

The National Assembly consists of the Speaker, the Attorney-General, who does not have a vote, 31 elected members, and 4 specially elected members. There is universal adult suffrage. The life of the Assembly is five years.

The Constitution also contains a code of human rights, enforceable by the High Court.

BRAZIL

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Brazil occupies 8,511,965 square kilometres in central and north-eastern South America. To the north are Venezuela, Colombia and the three Guianas, to the west Peru and Bolivia, with Paraguay, Argentina and Uruguay to the south. Climatic conditions vary from the tropical rain forest Amazon basin to the Savannah grasslands of the central and southern uplands. The language is Portuguese. Over 95 per cent of the population is Roman Catholic. The flag is green with a yellow diamond in the centre charged with a blue celestial globe. The capital is Brasília, though most administrative offices still remain in Rio de Janeiro.

Recent History

From 1930 to 1945, Brazil was ruled by the benevolent dictatorship of Dr. Getúlio Vargas. Under him, stability was maintained despite strong undercurrents of both Fascist and Communist opposition and his corporative state made steady economic progress by the diversification from an agricultural state to a mixed economy with new industries. Vargas resigned in 1945, and in 1946 Eurico Dutra was elected President; however, he was unable to stem the chronic inflation that had beset Brazil, and Vargas was re-elected President in 1951, but failed to create the necessary stability and committed suicide in 1955. President Kubitschek, who succeeded him, was responsible for much social change, his most conspicuous achievement being the building of the new capital, Brasília, on a jungle plateau 600 miles inland north-west of Rio. President Kubitschek was succeeded briefly by President Quadros and then by the left-wing President João Goulart, who was overthrown by a military coup under Humberto Castelo Branco in April 1964. Marshal Artur da Costa e Silva, who was elected President in October 1966, took office for a four-year term in March 1967. In December 1968 President da Costa e Silva promulgated an Institutional Act giving himself the power to govern the country by decree. In early 1969 the Brazilian Government extended the security laws and nearly 300 citizens lost their political rights. On September 1st the three heads of the armed forces assumed power after President da Costa e Silva was incapacitated by a stroke. Following the kidnapping by revolutionaries of the United States' Ambassador to Brazil and his release in return for the liberation of fifteen political prisoners, the death sentence was reintroduced to combat subversion. On October 30th, Emilio Garrastazu Médici took office as President, having been elected by Congress under the new Constitution passed by the government junta. Throughout 1970, urban guerrilla activity was widespread: three Ambassadors and a Consul-General were kidnapped and held to ransom for the release of political prisoners. In the last two years Brazil's endemic inflation has been held at 20 per cent and it is the Government's intention to reduce it annually by 2-3 per cent. Industrial growth reached an annual rate of 10 per cent in 1971, thanks to the ease of obtaining loans and foreign investment. However, total foreign indebtedness is estimated to have risen to over $6,000 million in 1971 and a fall in the rate of industrial production plus the spread of coffee rust in the south, have caused disquiet in financial circles. Brazil is a member of LAFTA and the Inter-American Development Bank.

Government

The Republic of Brazil is a Federation of twenty-two States, four Territories and one Federal District. The Federal Government consists of the President and the National Security Council, and an Independent Judiciary. Each State has its own Governor, elected legislature and judiciary.

Defence

Military service is compulsory for one year between the ages of eighteen and forty-five. The armed forces consist of about 180,000 men—Army 120,000, Navy 30,000 and Air Force 30,000.

Economic Affairs

Agricultural production accounts for 25 per cent of the national income and 70 per cent of Brazil's exports of which coffee alone provides 30 per cent by value. Brazil is now planning to explore new coffee markets by opening soluble coffee plants abroad. In 1968-69 cotton production reached a record total estimated at about 700,000 metric tons. Other important products include sugar, tobacco, beans, maize, rice, live animals, pine wood, sisal and iron and manganese ores. A recent project to develop the fishing industry aimed at an annual catch of 900,000 tons by 1971. Industry is expanding, particularly in the São Paulo area whose output accounts for over 50 per cent of the national total, and steel and engineering works have been established under the development plans. In 1969 the average daily production of crude oil reached 200,000 barrels, about half the national requirement. Copper deposits estimated at 150 million tons have been discovered in Bahia State. The Central Southern area is one of the fastest expanding industrial and agricultural areas in the world. Important hydro-electric projects are under way and the Furnas Dam, capable of generating 1.2 million kW, was opened in 1965. Work is in operation to harness the Paraná river by two dams, at an estimated cost of U.S. $700 million. The first plant came into operation in 1968 at Jupia. The second, the Urubupungá complex, consisting of twin hydro-electric stations, will have an eventual total output of 4.6 million kW, serving an area of nearly 400,000 square miles with a population of 45 million; the hydro-electric project also includes making the Paraná navigable, giving an outlet to the sea at Rio de la Plata. Brazil's economic boom of recent years has done little to decrease the enormous disparity between the rich and poor. However the agrarian reforms contained in the 1971 Proterra scheme for the north-east is intended by the government to lay the basis for an agricultural revival in the poorest part of the country containing 25 per cent of the population. During 1971 guerrilla activities have been checked by the army and police. But criticisms of police methods and the toleration of right-wing vigilante groups have come from all sections of Brazilian society, including leading Church figures. In November 1971 President

BRAZIL—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY)

Medici removed some of the hard-liners in the armed forces in an attempt to curb his extremist supporters.

Transport and Communications

Transport services are limited by jungles, rivers and mountains. Over large areas, air services are the only practicable means of transport and Brazil has a large domestic network. Modernization of roads and railways is in progress and the Trans-Brazilian Highway, running from Belém via Brasília to Rio Grande do Sul is under construction, ultimately to be extended to Peru and the Pacific coast with a total length of 2,700 km. There are long-distance express bus services which play an important part in the scheme of public transport. Rivers are very important and 26,700 miles are navigable. The Amazon is navigable for 2,300 miles as far as Iquitos in Peru, and ocean-going ships can reach Manaus, 1,000 miles upstream.

Social Welfare

The trade unions and employers' organizations provide welfare services financed by joint contributions. According to the constitution, employers must fulfil certain obligations, including compulsory accident insurance.

Education

Pre-elementary schooling is provided in urban areas for children up to seven years old. Education is free in official primary schools and compulsory between the ages of seven and fourteen, although the tendency in rural districts for children to start school late brings the average enrolment age to over nine years. Secondary education is divided into a four-year basic course and an advanced course of three years; where necessary it is free, but a system of repayable grants is being encouraged, and the majority of secondary schools are private. The Federal Government is responsible for higher education and there are 46 universities with over 280,000 students.

Although the high drop-out rate of children at elementary level is still a serious problem, illiteracy has steadily been reduced to the present rate of 26 per cent of the population. In 1971 6 per cent of the Federal Budget was to be directly invested in education.

Tourism

Rio de Janeiro, with its famous beaches, is the centre of the tourist trade. Like Salvador, Recife and other towns it has excellent examples of Portuguese colonial, and modern, architecture. The new Capital, Brasília, incorporates a new concept of city planning and is the nation's showpiece. Other attractions are the Iguassu Falls, one of the highest in the world, and the tropical forests of the Amazon basin.

Visas are not required to visit Brazil by nationals of the following countries: Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Italy, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Morocco, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom, U.S.A. and all Latin American countries except Cuba.

Sport

Football is by far the most popular sport; Brazil won the World Cup in 1958, 1962 and 1970. Basketball is the second great national sport, and tennis, water sports, golf, horse racing and recently underwater fishing are also popular.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), June 1, September 7 (Independence Day), November 2 (All Souls' Day), November 15 (Proclamation of the Republic), December 25 (Christmas Day).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), March 5, 6 (Carnival), April 21 (National Holiday). Also important religious and local festivals.

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rate

The currency unit is the Cruzeiro of 100 Centavos. A new cruzeiro worth 1,000 old cruzeiros was introduced by law in 1966, and came into circulation in February, 1967. It is divided into 100 centavos.

Coins made of stainless steel are to be introduced because of a world-wide nickel shortage.
Notes: 20, 50, 100, 200, 500, 1,000, 5,000, 10,000 cruzeiros.

Exchange rate: 14.90 Cr. = £1 sterling

5.73 Cr. = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

BRAZIL is a Republican Federal state made up of the indissoluble Union of the States, the Federal District and the Territories, under a representative regime. The Federal District is the capital of the Union. All power stems from the people and is exercised in their name; the powers of the Union are the Legislative, the Executive and the Judicial, all independent of each other but working in co-operation.

The Union's competence includes maintaining relations with foreign states and making treaties with them, and taking part in international organizations; declaring war and making peace; decreeing a state of siege; organizing the armed forces, planning and guaranteeing national security; issuing currency; supervising credits, etc.; establishing national services, including communications, development and education services; legislating on the execution of the Constitution and federal services and on civil, commercial, penal, procedural, electoral, agrarian, maritime and labour law. The Union, States, Federal District, and Municipalities are forbidden to make any distinction between Brazilians, establish any religious cults or churches against the public interest, and to deny public documents.

The Union may only intervene in state affairs in matters of extreme urgency, such as national security, and then only by Presidential decree. The States have certain powers according to the Constitution; they are responsible for electing their Governor by universal suffrage by direct secret ballot, also officials to carry out laws. The state law will decree the establishment of Municipalities, after due consultation with the local population; it will also decree the division of the States into districts; municipal organization may vary from state to state; municipal autonomy is assured by simultaneous direct election of the Prefect and senior officials throughout the country two years before the elections for Governors, Chamber of Deputies and Legislative Assembly; and by their own administration. Intervention in the municipalities is regulated by the Constitution. The Prefect of the Federal District and Governors of Territories will be nominated by the President of the Republic, after Senate approval. The Senate will discuss legislation concerning tributary systems, public services and personnel administration. The Territorial Governors nominate the Municipal Prefects.

LEGISLATIVE POWER

The legislative power is exercised by the National Congress, which is composed of the Chamber of Deputies and the Federal Senate. Elections for deputies and senators take place simultaneously throughout the country; candidates for Congress must be Brazilian by birth, have full exercise of their political rights and be over twenty-one in the case of deputies and over thirty-five in the case of senators. Congress meets twice a year in ordinary sessions, and extraordinary sessions may be convened on demand of a third of the members of either House or the President. Each Chamber arranges its own internal regime. Unless there is a constitutional disposition to the contrary, each Chamber will take decisions of a majority vote of a majority of its members. Members of Congress may not be arrested, except for crimes against the state, without previous permission from the House. Once elected, members may not hold other state or private office, except Minister of State, Federal Intervenor, Secretary of State or Capital Prefect, and any member who does will lose his political rights, as will any who does not attend at least half the sessions, unless he has obtained previous dispensation.

The Chamber of Deputies is made up of representatives of the people, elected by direct secret ballot for a period of four years. The number of deputies is fixed by law in a proportion which shall not exceed one for every three hundred thousand inhabitants, to a total of twenty-five, and beyond this limit one for every million inhabitants. There will be a minimum of seven deputies to each State and each Territory will have one deputy.

The Federal Senate is composed of representatives of the States, elected by direct secret ballot according to the majority principle. Each State will elect three senators with a mandate for eight years, with elections after four years of one-third of the members and after another four years of the remaining two-thirds. Each Senator is elected with his substitute. The Senate approves, by secret ballot, the choice of Magistrates, when required by the Constitution; of the Attorney-General of the Republic, of the Minister of the Accounts Tribunal, of the Prefect of the Federal District, of the Territorial Governors, of the permanent heads of diplomatic missions and other public servants.

The National Congress is responsible for legislating on all matters within the competence of the Union, including tributary matters; the budget; national and regional plans and programmes; the armed forces in times of peace; territorial limits. It is also responsible for making definitive resolutions on Presidential treaties, authorizing the President to leave the country; to declare war, to approve the incorporation or cutting off of sections of the States or Territories. The Executive power must send any Acts proposed by the President to the National Congress within fifteen days of signing. Any changes in the Constitution must be proposed by at least a quarter of the members of either House, the President or the State Legislative Assemblies. No changes may be made to the Constitution during a state of siege. Any project from the President must be considered by Congress within forty-five days. The President is exclusively responsible for legislation concerning finance, creating new public offices, etc., deciding or modifying the armed forces' strength, matters concerning the administration of the Federal District and the Territories.

EXECUTIVE POWER

Executive power is exercised by the President of the Republic, aided by the Ministers of State. Candidates for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency must be Brazilian born, be in full exercise of their political rights and be over thirty-five years of age. The President will be elected by an electoral college in public session by nominal voting. The electoral college will consist of members of National Congress and delegates indicated by the State Legislative Assemblies. The candidate receiving the absolute majority of votes will be considered elected and he will serve for a term of four years. If the President violates any of his responsibilities he may be accused by a two-thirds majority of the Deputies and judged by the Supreme Tribunal or the Senate according to the nature of his crime.

The Ministers of State are chosen by the President and their duties include carrying out the President's decrees.

expediting instructions for executing laws, decrees and regulations, providing the President with an annual report of their activities.

National security is the responsibility of every citizen. There is a National Security Council, composed of the President and the Vice-President of the Republic and all the Ministers of State; its areas of competence include studying all problems connected with national security, and where applicable granting permission for the concession of land, opening up means of communication, for the construction of international bridges, roads and airports, for establishing industries concerned with national security and modifying or cancelling any such concessions or authorizations. The Armed Forces consist of the Navy, Army and Air Force which are permanent, regular, national institutions organized within the framework of the law under the command of the President. All Brazilian men are obliged to fulfil military or other security service and women and priests may be called upon to carry out special services.

JUDICIAL POWER

Judicial power in the Union is exercised by the Supreme Federal Tribunal; the Federal Recourse Tribunals and federal judges; Military Tribunals and judges; Electoral Tribunals and judges; Labour Tribunals and judges. Judges are appointed for life; they may not undertake any other employment, receive any percentages from cases tried by them or engage in any party political activity. The Tribunals elect their own presidents and organize their own internal structure.

The Supreme Federal Tribunal, situated in the Union capital, has jurisdiction over the whole national territory and is composed of sixteen Ministers. The Ministers are nominated by the President after approval by the Senate, from Brazilian-born citizens, over the age of thirty-five, of proved judicial knowledge and experience.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL RIGHTS

Registration and voting are compulsory for all Brazilian citizens over the age of eighteen except those who are illiterate or unable to express themselves in the national language or are temporarily or definitively deprived of political rights. The organization of political parties is regulated by federal law, providing for a representative and democratic regime, based on a number of parties, with the guarantee of the fundamental rights of man.

All citizens are equal in the eyes of the law, regardless of sex, race, employment, religion or political convictions; any racialism will be prosecuted, there is no death penalty (except under military legislation in case of external war), no life imprisonment, banishment or confiscation of property. Rights concerning citizens' life, liberty, security and property are inviolable.

The President may declare a state of siege in cases of serious breaches of order or the likelihood of their occurring; or war. Except in cases of war, the state of siege may not last longer than sixty days, with the possibility of extension with the approval of Congress. During a state of siege Congress may suspend constitutional guarantees, and also the immunity of federal deputies and senators.

The Constitution also lays down principles of economic and social order, concerning freedom of enterprise, dignity of human labour, social function of ownership, harmony and solidarity in production, economic development and repression of abuse of economic power. Strikes are not permitted in public services and essential activities, as defined by law. The constitution lays down certain rights for workers, including limited hours of work, paid holidays and social welfare benefits; voting in trade union elections is compulsory.

The law protects family life; education is the right of all, with equal opportunity. Education will be organized by the States and the Federal District and the Union will give technical and financial assistance to develop education.

THE 1969 CONSTITUTION

A new Constitution was promulgated on October 17th, 1969. The following is a summary of the principal changes to the 1967 Constitution given above.

The President and Vice-President are to be elected indirectly for a term of office of five years (after March 15th, 1974). The President retains powers to issue decrees on national security, public offices, and public finances, including taxation and pay awards.

The permanent stipulations of all Institutional Acts remain in force, and measures enacted under Institutional and Complementary Acts are not subject to judicial decisions.

Direct elections are to be held for state governors and deputy governors and for municipal prefects and councillors (indirect gubernatorial elections, however, are to be held on October 3rd, 1970).

The membership of the Federal Supreme Court is reduced from 16 to 11.

The share of the States, the Federal District and the municipalities in revenue from the income tax and the industrial products tax is established at 5 per cent.

The President of the Senate is to preside over Congress instead of the Vice-President; the membership of the Chamber of Deputies is reduced from 321 to an average of 280, distributed according to the number of electors rather than that of inhabitants; congressional sessions are to be held from March 31st to November 30th of each year; expenses paid to members of Congress and to state deputies are regulated and reduced; no subsidies are to be paid for members' foreign travel, except on official business; voting on the budget is to be carried out by both Houses in joint session; the presidential veto on congressional decisions is abolished but the President may request their reconsideration within ten days; members of Congress continue to enjoy parliamentary immunity with the exception of offences against national security.

Constitutional amendments must now be supported by at least one-third of the total membership of Congress and ratified by a simple majority; they may no longer be proposed by state legislative assemblies.

Salaries are to be paid to councillors in state capitals and in municipalities with over 200,000 inhabitants; state deputies may not receive more than two-thirds of the salaries of federal deputies; the accumulation of posts by professional people is forbidden, with certain exceptions; and tax inspectors and other public employees are prohibited from deducting commissions from tax collections and related fines.

The conditions for the establishment of political parties are eased; congressional representation will be achieved when 5 per cent of the total electorate vote for a party, with a minimum of 7 per cent of the vote in each of seven States.

POLITICAL PARTIES

The status of political parties came under revision in June 1965, and a new Statute was signed by President Castelo Branco on July 14. In October the President suspended all political parties which had so far been formed. However, in December new groups were formed in Congress and the following parties had been registered by March 1967 under the new system:

Aliança Renovadora Nacional (ARENA): c/o Palácio Tiradentes, Brasília; Pro-Government party; Pres. Sen. DANIEL KRIEGER.

Movimento Democrático Brasileiro (MDB): Opposition group; includes members of former Partido Trabalhista Brasileiro; Pres. Sen. OSCAR PASSOS.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The judiciary powers of the State are held by the following tribunals: the Supreme Federal Tribunal, the Federal Tribunal of Recourses, the State Tribunals of Appeals, the Superior Military, the Electoral, and the Labour Tribunals; and by judges of other courts.

Sixteen ministers, nominated by the President and approved by the Senate, compose the Supreme Federal Tribunal. It judges offences committed by persons exempt from appearing before the normal courts, such as the President, Ministers of State, its own members, judges of other courts, and chiefs of permanent diplomatic missions. It also litigates in disputes between the Union and the states, between the states, or between foreign nations and the Union or the states; disputes as to jurisdiction between justices and/or tribunals of the different states, including those of the federal district and of the territories; in cases involving the extradition of criminals, in certain special cases involving the principle of habeas corpus, and in other cases. It is also empowered to judge ordinary appeals in cases in which the Union is interested as plaintiff or defendant.

The Federal Tribunal of Recourses judges the cases in which the Federal Union has interest.

The Tribunals of Appeals, apart from their normal function as a court of appeal, can sit in judgment on their own members. The number of judges varies according to the judiciary organization of each state.

The organs of the Electoral Tribunal (the Superior Tribunal, the Regional Tribunals, and the electoral judges) register the names of political parties, fix the date of elections, supervise the listing of voters, and deal with all infractions of the electoral laws. The seven judges of the Superior Electoral Tribunal are chosen: two from the Supreme Federal Tribunal, two from the Tribunal of Appeals, one from the Tribunal of Justice of the Federal District and two by the President.

The functions of the Military Court are no more than the name implies. The Labour Tribunal deals with labour disputes.

Civil offenders usually come before the courts of the separate states and of the Federal District. Each state organizes its own judiciary system on the principles established in the Constitution, and appoints its own judges from those who have passed the State examination in law.

THE SUPREME FEDERAL TRIBUNAL

President: OSWALDO TRIGUEIRO DE ALBUQUERQUE MELLO.

Vice-President: ALIOMAR DE ANDRADE BALEEIRO.

DAILY NEWSPAPERS

MORNING EDITIONS

Rio de Janeiro

The first Brazilian newspaper, Hipólito da Costa's Correio Brasiliense, was published in London in 1808 and appeared regularly until the end of 1822. During this time, the Brazilian government subsidized several papers to combat da Costa's press, all of which were political. The emergence of the more serious, informative newspapers was very gradual, and it was not until the late nineteenth century that these appeared in the form of regular publications.

The Press of the modern Republic has greatly increased in numbers and circulation, but due to the difficulties of distribution, it is not yet completely national. The Press in Brazil is today subject to two controls: the Censorship Law, passed in December 1968 under the Castelo Branco government, and the National Security Laws, which were extended in 1969 under Costa e Silva, allowing journalists to be tried for political crimes by Military Courts, thus bypassing the Press Law. National Security Laws are obviously subject to wide interpretation.

CULTURAL ORGANIZATION

The cultural heritage of Brazil is rooted in three distinct groups which have fused to make the present population: the European, mainly Portuguese, the African Negro, slaves brought in by the European, and the indigenous Indians. All these elements can be scen in present day cultural manifestations, such as Carnival, where Indian and African influences show clearly in a Christian-based festival. Local legends play an important part in the cultural life, and each State has a department concerned with tourism or culture.

Rio de Janeiro is the venue for the Brazilian Theatre Congress in July, also Folklore Day; there is an international Music Festival in August/September, also the Brazilian Authors' Festival, Brazilian Popular Music Festival and a biannual Piano Competition. At São Paulo there is the famous Biennial, which has received world-wide acclaim and participation, being second only to Venice in importance.

The principal body concerned with the organization of the arts and culture is:

Ministério da Educação e Cultura: Palácio da Cultura e Educação, Rua da Imprensa 16, Rio de Janeiro; Minister TARSO DUTRA; the Ministry is responsible for a number of cultural organizations, among them:

Comissão Nacional de Belas Artes (Fine Arts Commission).

Conselho Federal de Cultura (Federal Cultural Council).

Conselho Nacional de Belas Artes (Fine Arts Council).

Instituto Nacional do Cinema (National Cinema Institute).

Serviço Nacional de Teatro (National Theatre Service): f. 1937 to develop and encourage the theatre in Brazil, subsidising national companies where necessary.

THEATRE

Teatro Municipal do Rio de Janeiro: under Secretaria de Educação do Estado da Guanabara; it accommodates the Rio International Music Festival and many other national and international artistic events.

There are also a number of provincial theatres.

ATOMIC ENERGY

Comissão Nacional de Energia Nuclear: Rua General Severiano, 90-Botafoga ZC-80, 20,000 Rio de Janeiro; f. 1956; Pres. HERVÁSIO GUIMARÃES DE CARVALHO; Dir. Training and Scientific Exchange Prof. WILSON BANDEIRA DE MELLO.

Brazil's first nuclear power station is being built at Angra dos Reis, in the State of Rio de Janeiro. Its initial capacity will be 500 MW. and it is scheduled to come into operation in 1976. Present plans envisage that Brazil will have an installed capacity of 6,000 MW. by 1985.

The 1971 budget of the Comissão Nacional de Energia Nuclear amounted to Cr. 116,373,000 (U.S. $21,540,000).

IPR-RI Belo Horizonte, Minas Gerais: capacity 250 kW.

IEA-RI São Paulo: capacity 10 MW.

LEN-RI Rio de Janeiro.

URANIE Belo Horizonte, Minas Gerais.

RESUCO Recife, Pernambuco.

COBRA Rio de Janeiro (planned).

Co-operation: Brazil has close co-operation agreements with the nuclear energy authorities of the following countries: Federal Republic of Germany, France, Italy, U.S.A.

Universidade do Brasil: Av. Pasteur 250, Rio de Janeiro, Guanabara; atomic research in medicine, chemistry, engineering and biophysics.

INTRODUCTION

The Commonwealth of the Bahama Islands consists of nearly 700 islands and about 2,000 cays and rocks extending from off the Florida coast of the U.S.A. to just north of Cuba and Haiti. The climate is mild and sub-tropical, making the islands a tourist paradise. The capital, Nassau, stands on the island of New Providence.

In January 1964 constitutional changes were brought into force to give a larger measure of internal self-government with Cabinet responsibility. The Constitution was revised again in 1969 and the Government was granted further responsibilities for its own affairs. A 16-member Senate, 9 members appointed on the advice of the Prime Minister, 4 by the Leader of the Opposition and 3 by the Governor and a 38-elected member House of Assembly form a bi-cameral Parliament, to which the Cabinet is responsible. The Governor retains powers in the fields of foreign affairs, defence and internal security.

During 1970 the economy showed signs of slowing down after a sustained period of growth brought about by a policy of encouraging tourism and attracting foreign investment through advantageous tax arrangements. This situation continued during 1971, with a sharp drop in import tax revenues and in tourist spending, despite a record number of more than half a million visitors to the islands in 1971. Public expenditure was concentrated into three main areas, education, health and servicing the public debt, but had to be kept in line with the revenue shortage.

Cultivation of fruit and livestock, fisheries and forestry all make a small contribution to the economy.

Communications are chiefly by aircraft and boat; motor roads on the larger islands are excellent. There are radio/telephone connections between the islands.

There are good medical and educational facilities, and the Bahamas contribute financially to the University of the West Indies.

Tourism

Nationals of the following countries may visit the Bahamas without visas: British subjects or citizens of British Commonwealth countries. Nationals of the following countries may visit the Bahamas without a visa for eight months: U.S.A., Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, San Marino, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Turkey; for three months without a visa: Austria, France, Federal Republic of Germany; and for two weeks without a visa: Mexico, South America and Panama.

Public Holidays

THE CONSTITUTION

Under the new Constitution which came into force in January 1964, and amended in 1968, the Bahamas is internally self-governing. The Governor, who retains special responsibility for foreign affairs, defence and internal security, acts on the advice of the Prime Minister and a Cabinet of at least 11 Ministers. The Senate (upper house) consists of 16 members of whom 9 are appointed by the Governor on the advice of the Prime Minister, 4 on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition and 3 after consultation with the Prime Minister. The House of Assembly (lower house) has 38 members. The constituencies are to be reviewed at least once every five years by a Constituencies Commission.

Commissions to advise on appointments, promotion and discipline for the Public Service, Police and the Judicial Service were set up in 1964.

A constitutional conference in September 1968 decided inter alia that the Senate should be composed of 16 members, and that a Security Council be formed with responsibilities for External Affairs and Defence.

FINANCE

The Bahamas has become an international finance centre. There are some 6,500 finance or financial service companies on the islands. It has developed on account of the tax advantages to business. There is no corporation tax, no income tax, estate duty, capital gains tax or withholding tax. A small company tax and a stamp duty are paid. Despite its growth during the 1960s, the finance industry, ranking second to tourism in the Bahamas, contributes relatively little to the economy. In 1970 its contribution was approximately $25m. compared to the $220m. spent by tourists. Several issues during 1970 and 1971 have divided the government and the industry, most important of these being the government restriction of immigration, a measure designed to safeguard the interests of the Bahamian. The finance industry is unwilling to co-operate with the government in local development until they have some assurance on government spending and the exact position as regards the public debt. The Bahamas Monetary Authority acts on behalf of the government to vet new business on the islands and is seen by both sides to be of vital importance in closing the gap which has formed between these two interdependent sides.

BERMUDA

INTRODUCTION

The Bermudas or Somers Islands are an isolated group of small Atlantic islands about 570 miles off the coast of South Carolina, U.S.A. The climate is mild thanks to the warming effects of the Gulf Stream. The capital is Hamilton.

Bermuda has been a British colony since the seventeenth century, and is now self-governing.

The local defence force is the Bermuda Regiment with a strength of some 425 men.

The chief source of revenue is customs duties, but the tourist business is the most important feature of the economy. Its expansion and its demand for building land reduces the amount of arable acreage available and endangers growth in agriculture. There is no income tax or estate duty, and considerable U.K. capital is invested in Bermudan enterprises.

There are good roads and bus and ferry services, while international lines provide regular sea and air services.

A wide range of welfare work is undertaken by a division of the Department of Health and Welfare, as well as by a number of voluntary organizations. There are compulsory pension and health insurance schemes (contributory) for Government employees. There is free compulsory education between the ages of five and sixteen, and a number of scholarships are awarded for higher education and teacher training.

The great attractions of the islands are the climate, scenery, and facilities for outdoor entertainment of all types.

Visas are not required by visitors from non-Communist countries.

Public Holidays

1972: May 24 (Empire Day), June 14 (The Queen's Birthday), July 29, 30 (Cup Match), November 11 (Remembrance Day), December 25 and 26 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), April 20 (Good Friday).

Weights and Measures

Imperial and U.S. weights and measures are both used.

Currency

Decimal currency was introduced on February 6, 1970. The Bermuda Government issues notes in denominations of $50, $20, $10, $5 and $1, and coins in denominations of $20 (gold), $1 (silver),* and 50c., 25c., 10c. and 5c. (cupronickel) and 1c. (bronze). Banks and most establishments will also accept United Kingdom, United States and Canadian currency notes.

* Gold and silver coins in mint sets only.

THE CONSTITUTION

Representative government was introduced in the Colony in 1620. Under a Constitution introduced on June 8th, 1968, there are provisions relating to the protection of fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, the powers and duties of the Governor; the composition, powers and procedure of the Legislature; the Executive Council; the Judiciary; the Public Service and Finance.

Her Majesty the Queen appoints the Governor, who retains responsibility for external affairs, defence, internal security and the Police. In other matters the Governor acts on the advice of the Executive Council.

The Legislature consists of Her Majesty, the Legislative Council and the House of Assembly. Five members of the Legislative Council are appointed in the Governor's discretion, four on the advice of the Government leader and two on the advice of the Opposition leader. The Council elects a President and Vice-President. The House of Assembly, consisting of forty members elected under universal adult franchise from twenty constituencies, elects a Speaker and a Deputy Speaker, and sits for a five-year term.

The Executive Council consists of the Government leader and at least six other members of the Legislature. The Governor appoints the majority leader in the House of Assembly as Government leader, who in turn nominates the other members of the Council. They are assigned responsibilities for government departments and other business and, in some cases, are assisted by Parliamentary Secretaries. Meetings of the Executive Council are normally presided over by the Governor. The Secretary to the Executive Council is Head of the Civil Service.

Voters must be British subjects of 21 years or over, and if not possessing Bermudian status, must have been normally resident in the Colony for three years immediately prior to registration. Candidates for election must qualify as electors and in addition must possess Bermudian status.

There are in Bermuda the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeal and three Magistrates Courts. The Court of Appeal was established in 1964, with powers and jurisdiction of equivalent courts in other parts of the Commonwealth. The Supreme Court was established under the Supreme Court Act of 1905. It has jurisdiction over all serious criminal matters and has unlimited civil jurisdiction. The Court also hears civil and criminal appeals from the Magistrates Courts. The Magistrates Court has jurisdiction over all petty offences, and has a limited civil jurisdiction.

The Race Relations Act, 1970, was passed, calling for a Race Relations Council to be appointed by the Governor. Besides advising the Government on race relations, the Council is empowered to investigate complaints of discrimination and, where the settlement of a complaint is sought, to set up a conciliation committee. Where no settlement can be achieved court proceedings under the Race Relations Act, 1969, can be brought by the Council.

BRITISH HONDURAS (BELIZE)

INTRODUCTION

British Honduras lies on the Caribbean coast of Central America with Mexico to the north-west and Guatemala to the south-west. The climate is sub-tropical, tempered by trade winds. Belize City ceased to be the capital in August 1970 when the Government moved to the newly constructed city of Belmopan, about fifty miles inland.

A new constitution giving British Honduras full internal self-government came into force on January 1st, 1964. Executive power is in the hands of a Cabinet of Ministers, while the Legislature consists of an eight-man appointed Senate and a house of 18 elected representatives. The Governor retains special powers concerning Defence, External Affairs and Internal Security. Guatemalan claims to sovereignty of British Honduras date back to the mid-eighteenth century and were written into Guatemala's constitution in 1945. Before independence British Honduras wants to enter into a defence agreement with Britain which would guarantee against foreign interference, but the British Government has so far refused to make any firm commitment for the future.

The economy was traditionally based on timber exports but the cultivation of sugar and citrus fruit is now more important. Livestock and fishing are seen as priority areas for development.

There are 850 miles of good roads, and 18 airstrips as well as the Belize international airport at Stanley Field. Belize City is the main port; there is a second port at Stann Creek to the south of Belize.

Primary education is principally carried on through subsidized denominational schools under government control. There are also 20 secondary schools, 3 technical colleges, 4 vocational schools and a teacher-training college.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), May 24 (Commonwealth Day), September 10 (National Day), November 14 (Prince Charles's Birthday), December 25, 26 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), March 9 (Baron Bliss Day), April 20-22 (Easter), April 21 (Queen's Birthday).

Weights and Measures

Imperial weights and measures are used, but petrol and paraffin are sold by the American gallon (231 cu. in.).

Currency

The monetary unit is the British Honduras or Belizean Dollar (B.H.$).

Coins: 5, 10, 25, 50 cents local silver, 25 cent eupro-nickel, 1 cent bronze, 5 cent nickel-bronze.

Notes: 1, 2, 5, 10, 20 dollars, issued by the Government.

THE CONSTITUTION

A new constitution providing for internal self-government came into force on January 1st, 1964. It provides for a Governor, a Cabinet of Ministers and a bi-cameral Legislature.

The powers of the Governor are complete only in respect of defence, external affairs and internal security, and for the first two of these there are consultative bodies designed to familiarize Ministers with matters for which they will ultimately have responsibility. There are also advisory commissions for the public service and the subordinate judiciary.

The Legislature consists of (1) A Senate of eight members, five appointed on the advice of the Premier, two on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition, and one after consultation with such persons as the Governor considers appropriate; (2) A House of Representatives consisting of eighteen members elected by universal adult suffrage for a five-year period.

THE BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS

INTRODUCTION

The British Virgin Islands consist of more than 40 islands, of which some 16 are inhabited, lying at the eastern end of the Greater Antilles, 60 miles to the east of Puerto Rico and adjoining the American Virgin Islands. The capital, Road Town, stands on the island of Tortola.

The bulk of the islands' export trade is in livestock and to a lesser extent fish, fruit and vegetables; agriculture is geared to grass cultivation for the production of livestock. After a late start, the tourist trade is fast becoming a major industry.

Two large-scale development projects are now in progress: a land reclamation scheme involving 70 acres at Wickhams Cay, Road Town, and the complete transformation of the island of Anegada, where the Anegada Development Corporation has already completed a 3,500 ft. airstrip and a deep-water harbour pier and is constructing 30 miles of roads.

STATISTICS

Area and Population: Area 59 square miles. Population (1970) c. 10,500; Road Town (capital) 2,180.

External Trade (1970): Imports U.S. $10,223,720. Exports U.S. $42,608, mainly livestock, vegetables, fish, fruit, rum and charcoal.

Tourism: Total number of visitors (1967) 17,544; (1968) 22,793; (1969) 22,010; 33,167 (1970).

Education: 15 primary schools and 1 secondary school, 2,670 pupils in all. Higher education is available at the University of the West Indies at its three campuses in Barbados, Trinidad and Jamaica.

THE CONSTITUTION

A new constitution came into effect in April 1967. Under its terms, the Governor is responsible for defence and internal security, external affairs, terms and conditions of service of public officers, the administration of the Courts and finance, and possesses reserved legislative powers in respect of legislation necessary in the interests of his special responsibilities; there is an Executive Council with the Governor as Chairman, two ex-officio members (the Attorney-General and the Financial Secretary), the Chief Minister (appointed by the Governor) and two other ministers, appointed by the Governor on the advice of the Chief Minister; and a Legislative Council consisting of a Speaker, chosen from outside the Council, two ex-officio members (the Attorney-General and the Financial Secretary), one nominated member appointed by the Governor on the Chief Minister's advice, and seven elected members to be returned from seven one-member electoral districts.

Two trust companies, the Provident Trust Company (Tortola) and the trust subsidiary of the Bank of Nova Scotia are in operation. Commercial banking facilities in St. Thomas and St. Croix, United States Virgin Islands are also available.

TRANSPORT AND TOURISM

Launches maintain a mail and passenger service with St. Thomas, United States Virgin Islands, whence air and sea communications exist to all parts of the world.

There is an automatic telephone system in Tortola and some of the out-islands with direct dialling to St. Thomas and St. Croix.

An 80-channel co-axial cable from Tortola to Bermuda provides the main link for the East Caribbean to North America and Europe.

Work was completed in 1969 on the extension of the runway of Beef Island Airport, which enables prop-jet services to call at the British Virgin Islands.

The following airlines serve the British Virgin Islands: Antilles Air Boats (U.S. Virgin Islands), Leeward Islands Air Transport (LIAT) and Prinair (Puerto Rico).

There are over 50 miles of motorable roads and about 2,000 motor vehicles.

There are direct shipping services with the U.S.A. (Florida and Atlantic Lines) and with the U.K. and Europe (Booker Line and K.N.S.M.). A monthly freight service to the U.K. is provided by Fyffes Lines.

British Virgin Islands Department of Tourism: Road Town, Tortola; Admin. Officer A. U. ANTHONY.

There are some 12 hotels on the Islands which in 1968 provided a total of about 400 tourist guest nights. Plans are underway for the construction of several new hotels and cottage-type complexes which will triple the existing number of tourist beds by 1972. Improved sailing and fishing facilities are planned as a major tourist attraction.

HONG KONG

INTRODUCTION

The Colony of Hong Kong lies off the south coast of China and consists of the island of Hong Kong, Stonecutters Island, the Kowloon Peninsula and the New Territories, which are partly on the mainland. The New Territories were leased by China in 1898 for a period of 99 years. The climate is sunny and dry in winter, and hot and humid in summer. The official language is English, but Cantonese is universally spoken and Mandarin is widely understood. The main religion is Buddhism; Confucianism and Taoism are also practised and there are more than a quarter of a million Christians. The capital is Victoria on Hong Kong island.

The Colony is administered by the Governor, the Executive Council of five ex-officio members and eight nominated members, and the Legislative Council consisting of twelve official members and thirteen other members.

Hong Kong is a free trade area and one of the principal entrepôt ports of the world. Industry has expanded rapidly in recent years, and manufactured goods, particularly textiles and electrical goods, now make up three-quarters of total exports. Commerce plays an important part in the economy and Hong Kong banking and mercantile houses have branches all over the Far East. In December 1964 legislation was enacted to limit the activities of unincorporated banks.

Transport facilities include buses, trams, and ferries and a railway runs north from Kowloon to the Chinese border.

Social welfare and education are rendered difficult by the heavy influx of refugees from the mainland, estimated at more than a million since the war. Resettlement is undertaken by the Government and many private bodies (Kaifongs). There are state schools and private schools but only enough places for about one child in five. A new Chinese University was set up in 1963 in addition to Hong Kong University.

Hong Kong is one of the main tourist centres of the Far East. The currency unit is the Hong Kong Dollar of 100 cents. £1 sterling = H.K. $14.55; U.S.$1 = H.K. $5.582.

Visas are not required to visit Hong Kong by nationals of the following countries: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Iceland, Italy, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, San Marino, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom and U.S.A.

Public Holidays

1972: June 15 (Tuen Ng Festival), August 28 (Liberation Day), October 23 (for Chinese mid-Autumn Festival on October 22), October 16 (for Chung Yeung Festival on October 15), December 25–26 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year), February 3–5 (Lunar New Year), April 24 (Ching Ming Festival), April 20–22 (Easter), April 21 (The Queen's Birthday).

THE CONSTITUTION

The Government of Hong Kong, which consists of the Governor, the Executive Council and the Legislative Council, is constituted under the authority of Letters Patent and Royal Instructions.

The Executive Council is consulted by the Governor on all important administrative questions. In addition to five ex-officio members, there are eight nominated unofficial members (of whom three are Chinese), and one nominated official member.

The Legislative Council, which advises on and approves the enactment of the Colony's laws and approves all expenditure from public funds, consists of four of the ex-officio members who sit on the Executive Council, eight other official members and thirteen unofficial members (these include eleven Chinese). It has three Standing Committees, concerned with finance, law and public works respectively; select Committees may be set up on an ad hoc basis.

ASCENSION

(WIDEAWAKE ISLAND)

Ascension lies in the South Atlantic 700 miles north-west of St. Helena. The island is an important communications centre, being a major relay station for the cables connecting Europe and West Africa with South America and, via St. Helena, South Africa. In addition the United States built an air base—Wideawake Airfield—on the island in 1952; this has recently been re-occupied and is now used as a tracking station for guided missiles. Ascension is otherwise dependent on substantial budgetary aid from the British government.

Area (square miles): 34.

Population (1969): 1,266 (St. Helenians 724, U.K. citizens 304, U.S. citizens 213, West Indians 96, South Africans 19); Births 19, Deaths 2.

Administrator: Brig. H. W. D. McDONALD, D.S.O.

Transport: Roads (1968): 745 vehicles; Shipping (1968): tonnage entered and cleared 435,183, ships 82; calls are made by Union Castle or Clan Line ships from St. Helena. Calls are also made by H.M. ships and occasional private yachts.

TRISTAN DA CUNHA

The Island of Tristan da Cunha lies in the South Atlantic 1,500 miles south-west of St. Helena. In 1961 the island was evacuated after volcanic eruptions, but has since been re-settled.

Area (square miles): Tristan da Cunha 38, Inaccessible Island 4, Nightingale Island $\frac{1}{2}$, Gough Island 35.

Population (1969): 276 Tristan; there is a small weather station on Gough manned by a team of South Africans.

Agriculture (1969): Vegetables 46,341 lb., Milk 18,494 gals.; Sheep 2,000, Pigs 144.

Constitution: The Administrator, representing the British Government, is aided by a Council of 8 elected and 3 nominated members which has advisory powers in legislative and executive functions. The Council's advisory functions in executive matters are performed through small committees of the Council dealing with the separate branches of administration.

Government: The Administrator: Maj. J. I. H. FLEMING.

Legal System: The Administrator is Magistrate. There is one Justice of the Peace.

BRITISH INDIAN OCEAN TERRITORY

The Colony consists of the Chagos Archipelago, about 1,200 miles north-east of Mauritius and the islands of Aldabra, Farquhar and Desroches in the western Indian Ocean. It was set up in 1965 to provide defence facilities for the British and United States Governments. The Chagos Archipelago, which includes the coral atoll Diego Garcia, was formerly administered by the Government of Mauritius. The other three islands were administered by that of the Seychelles.

It is possible that Diego Garcia could play a key role in Western defence strategy in the Indian Ocean, especially as the alternative policy for Britain, at least, involves closer military co-operation with South Africa. According to the British Ministry of Defence all the islands of the Territory are available for both British and U.S. bases, and the question of their use for these purposes is under review.

Population (June 1968): 1,019 (Chagos Archipelago 803, Farquhar 50, Desroches 120, Aldabra 42).

Area: 175 sq. miles approx.

Commissioner: THE GOVERNOR OF THE SEYCHELLES.

Administrator: J. R. TODD, Queen's Bldg., Victoria, Mahé, Seychelles.

TURKS AND CAICOS ISLANDS

More than 30 islands forming the south eastern part of the Bahamas chain of islands, and lying north of Haiti. Six islands are inhabited: Grand Turk, Salt Cay, South Caicos, Middle Caicos, North Caicos, Providenciales.

Area: 166 square miles.

Population (1970): 5,675; Grand Turk 2,330, Cockburn Harbour, South Caicos 1,032. In 1969 there were 134 births, 17 marriages and 22 deaths.

Currency: $1 Jamaica=50p sterling=U.S. $0.76.

Budget (1969): Revenue J$1,363,186, Expenditure J$1,367,463.

External Trade (1969): Imports J$993,386 (food, drink and manufactured articles). Exports J$215,996, of which Crayfish 207,174, Salt 8,150 and Dried Conch 672.

Education (1970): Government Primary Schools 14, pupils 1,615; Private Primary Schools 3, Government Secondary Schools 1, Private Secondary Schools 1.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Islands are at present a colony within the Commonwealth and responsibility for the day-to-day administration of the Islands lies with the Administrator who is President of the State Council. This council was inaugurated on June 18th, 1969, under a new Constitution which did away with the former Executive Council and Legislative Assembly and vested both executive and legislative power in the State Council which has a majority of elected members. On November 5th, 1965, the Governor of the Bahamas was also made Governor of the Turks and Caicos Islands, but there are no other political links between the two territories other than the sharing of a Common Bench for the Court of Appeal.

Administrator: R. E. WAINWRIGHT, C.M.G.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

There is a Resident Magistrate who is also Acting Judge of the Turks and Caicos Islands: H. J. CRIDLAND.

RADIO

Station VS 18: Cable and Wireless (W.I.) Ltd., Mercury House, Grand Turk; Man. D. R. MATTOCKS.

In 1970 there were 1,350 radio receivers.

The High Commissioner is also responsible for United Kingdom obligations in respect of the Anglo-French Condominium of the new Hebrides.

Chief Secretary: T. RUSSEL, C.B.E.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The High Court of the Western Pacific consists of a Chief Justice, who lives in Honiara, and one Puisne Judge in Vila (New Hebrides). It possesses all the jurisdiction vested in Her Majesty's High Court in the United Kingdom. Magistrates' Courts with both civil and criminal jurisdiction were established in 1962. The High Court also has jurisdiction over the Anglo-French Condominium of the New Hebrides (see below).

NEW HEBRIDES

High Court of the Western Pacific: Re-constituted 1961; Superior Court of Record. The Chief Justice is appointed by the High Commissioner.

Chief Justice: Sir JOCELYN BODILLY, V.R.D.

BRITISH SOLOMON ISLANDS PROTECTORATE

The British Solomon Islands, consisting of six major islands and countless smaller ones, extends over 900 miles south-east of Bougainville (Papua New Guinea) in the South Pacific. The capital is Honiara, on the island of Guadalcanal.

STATISTICS

Area: Sea 250,000 nautical square miles; land 11,500 square miles (Guadalcanal 2,500).

Population (mid-1971 est.): 166,290 (Melanesians 163,270); Honiara (capital) 13,350.

Agriculture (1970): Copra 24,224 tons; Cocoa 128.4 tons; Rice 1,500 tons; Timber (logs) 8,007,987 cu. ft.; Pigs 25,000 (1969); Cattle 11,320 (1969).

Currency: Australian dollars. $A1 = £0.467 sterling.

Employment (1970): Work force 13,690.

Budget (1971): Estimated at $7,933,200 including $1,914,220 grant-in-aid. In addition, capital expenditure of $3,183,765 mostly from British Development Aid. Sixth Development Plan (1971-73) will invest $16m. in capital expenditure.

External Trade (1970): Imports $10m. (mainly machinery and transport, food and manufactured articles); Exports $6.9m. (mainly copra, timber, scrap metal manufactured tobacco, marine shell and cocoa). Imports were mainly from Australia, and exports to Japan.

CONSTITUTION

Following the new Constitution instituted on April 10th, 1970, by the British Solomon Islands Order 1970, a single-chamber Governing Council was formed with 17 elected members, 3 ex-officio members and not more than 6 public service members, which meets three times a year in public, legislative sessions. The Council is supported by 6 executive committees, 5 of which are chaired by elected members. The sixth committee (Finance) is chaired by the Financial Secretary and also includes the chairmen of the other committees. Each elected member must sit on at least one committee. The other committees deal with Communications and Works, Commerce and Industry, Natural Resources, Social Services, and Internal Affairs.

The High Commissioner, as well as being Chairman of the Governing Council and having the power to appoint the chairmen of the executive committees, retains reserve powers on external affairs, security and police, and continues to control the public service.

GOVERNMENT

High Commissioner: Sir MICHAEL DAVID IRVING GASS, K.C.M.G.

GOVERNING COUNCIL

Chairman: The HIGH COMMISSIONER.

Deputy Chairman: SILAS SITAI, M.B.E.

Ex-Officio Members: CHIEF SECRETARY, ATTORNEY-GENERAL, FINANCIAL SECRETARY.

Public Service Members: 6 (from January 1972, nil).

ADMINISTRATION

Government is administered by a number of Departments, staffed by 2,411 public servants, 1,726 of whom were Solomon Islanders (1971), with four District Commissioners (Western, Central, Malaita and Eastern) who co-ordinate the departmental activities within their Districts and in particular advise the Local Government Councils.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT COUNCILS

There are 17 Local Councils covering almost the whole area of the country and varying widely in size and wealth. The tendency is towards a Council for the whole of each major island, such as Malaita. Members are elected from the common roll and the Councils are supported financially by rates (on an average $5 per person), licensee fees, local court fines and grants from Central Government. They operate primary schools and health clinics, and undertake such work as water supplies, wharf, road and airfield construction. Honiara is the only town with a Town Council.

RELIGION

Most of the people are Christian, and the remainder still follow their traditional animism. The Churches, which pioneered and still maintain a large interest in education and medical services, are the Anglican Church (Diocese of Melanesia), Roman Catholic Church (Dioceses of the

BRITISH COLONIAL TERRITORIES—WESTERN PACIFIC HIGH COMMISSION

Southern Solomons and the Western Solomons), United Church of Papua New Guinea and the Solomons (originally Methodist), South Seas Evangelical Church (originally Baptist), Christian Fellowship Church (local breakaway from Methodist) and Bahai'i Church.

Anglican: The Bishop of Melanesia: The Rt. Rev. J. W. CHISHOLM; Assistant Bishops: Rt. Rev. D. TUTI, Buala, Rt. Rev. L. ALUFURAI, O.B.E., T.H.L., Auki.

Roman Catholic: Bishop of Honiara, Most Rev. DANIEL STUYVENBERG, C.B.E.; Bishop of Gizo, Most Rev. EUSEBIUS CRAWFORD, O.P.

PRESS AND RADIO

There is as yet no newspaper in the British Solomons, but the government Information Services produces a bi-monthly News Sheet (circulation 4,400) and each District has a monthly or less frequent Newsletter produced by the District Administration.

The only radio broadcaster is the government-operated Solomon Islands Broadcasting Service (VQO on 1,030 KHz and VQO4 on 3,995 KHz) which accepts commercial advertising and is on the air for 81 hours a week. Much of the programmes are in Pidgin English.

FINANCE

BANKING

Australia and New Zealand Bank Ltd.: Honiara.

Commonwealth Savings Bank of Australia: P.O.B. 37, Honiara.

Commonwealth Trading Bank of Australia: P.O.B. 37, Honiara.

INSURANCE

About ten of the principal British insurance companies maintain agencies in the Protectorate.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

The economy of the Protectorate depends on primary production, chief of which is copra ($34m. in 1970) with timber (log extraction) a close second. Cocoa and chillies are also exported in small quantities, and after thorough trials a palm oil industry is now being set up. The cattle industry is also growing promisingly, and rice is produced for local consumption. A fisheries survey indicates another export commodity and processing industry. There has been active mineral prospecting in recent years, leading to trial mining of bauxite in 1972 and the possibility of copper and nickel mining in the future.

The building construction industry is fully engaged in the capital on buildings for both commerce and government. There is as yet little manufacturing, but a twist tobacco factory and a ship's biscuit factory provide for both domestic requirements and a small export trade. Furniture, fibre-glass products and soft drinks are also manufactured on a small scale.

British Solomon Islands Chamber of Commerce: P.O.B. 64, Honiara.

British Solomon Islands Protectorate Copra Board: Honiara; Sec-Man. D. S. CORNER; sole exporter of copra; agencies at Yandina and Gizo.

British Solomons Trading Co. Ltd.: P.O.B. 114, Honiara.

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES

In 1970 there were 141 primary co-operative societies and 109 secondary societies working mostly outside the capital.

TRADE UNION

B.S.I.P. General Workers Union: Honiara; f. 1971; Gen. Sec. PETER SALAKA.

TRANSPORT

ROADS

Road construction and maintenance is difficult because of the nature of the country, and what roads there are serve as feeder roads to the main town of an island. Honiara now has a main road running about 40 miles each side of it along the north coast of Guadalcanal, and Malaita has a road 75 miles long running north from Auki and around the northern end of the island to the Lau Lagoon, where canoe transport takes over.

SHIPPING

Regular shipping services (mainly for freight) exist between the Solomons and Australia (Sydney and Brisbane), New Zealand, Bougainville (Kieta), Hong Kong, Japan and U.K./Continent ports. Internal shipping is provided by 33 small ships of the government marine fleet and about 40 commercial vessels. The ports are controlled by the BSIP Ports Authority, Honiara.

British Solomon Islands Ports Authority: Box B.17, Honiara.

Services are operated by:

Bank Line: regular service to Europe.

Burns Philp and Co.: to Sydney.

China Navigation Co. Ltd.: to Hong Kong, Japan and Noumea.

Daiwa Navigation Co.: to Japan.

Karlander New Guinea Line: regular cargo services between Port Moresby, Samarai, Wae, Madang, Manus Island, Wewak, Djajapura, Rabaul, Honiara, Kieta, Gizo, Vila, Santo, Noumea, Fiji and Australia.

Maritime Services: to New Zealand.

Mitsui Osk: regular service to Fiji.

New Guinea Australia Line: to Australia.

New Zealand Export Line: to New Guinea.

P. and O. Lines: cruise ship calls.

Sofrona: regular service to New Zealand.

Inter-island services are maintained by 38 government-owned vessels and by privately-owned ships.

CIVIL AVIATION

International air services to the Protectorate are provided by Air Pacific (from Fiji via New Hebrides three times a week, from Port Moresby once a week) and by Trans Australia Airlines (from Port Moresby and Rabaul four times a week). Domestic air services are provided by Solair, operating light aircraft from Honiara with scheduled flights to twelve aerodromes in the districts and charter flights to four more-remote aerodromes.

Regular services are run by:

Solomon Islands Airways Ltd.: P.O.B. 23, Honiara; internal services and charter.

EDUCATION

(1971)

25,068 children attended 389 registered primary schools, 1,142 attended 6 secondary schools and 436 attended 4 other higher schools.

British Solomons Training College: Box 7, Kakum, Honiara; f. 1958 for training of teachers for Solomons Islands' primary schools; 100 students on two-year courses, up to 25 on six-month courses and up to 15 on three-month in-service courses; controlling authority Dept. of Education, Box 1, Honiara, B.S.I.P.; Principal W. J. CARTER.

St. Peter's College: Siota, Gela; f. 1912 for training of deacons and priests for the Anglican Diocese of Melanesia (New Hebrides and Solomon Islands); 25 students.

NEW HEBRIDES

The British service in the Anglo-French Condominium of the New Hebrides is controlled by the High Commissioner. For further details see the New Hebrides chapter.

BRUNEI

Brunei is a British Protected Sultanate lying between the Malaysian province of Sarawak and the northern coast of the Island of Borneo off S.E. Asia. Brunei decided not to join the Federation of Malaysia when it was formed in September 1963. The principal economic activity is oil extraction from the Seria oilfield and the offshore field at South West Ampa; the oil is mostly exported to a refinery in Sarawak. In October 1967 the Sultan, Sir Omar Ali Saifuddin, abdicated in favour of his son. An agreement was signed in November 1971 giving Brunei full internal self-government though Britain still retains responsibility for external affairs. Further, in the event of external threat both governments are to consult together to take whatever joint or separate action may be appropriate.

THE CONSTITUTION

A new Constitution was promulgated in September 1959. Under it sovereign authority is vested in the Sultan.

The Constitution provides for the creation of a Legislative Council, a Council of Ministers and a Privy Council. A Mentri Besar (Chief Minister) appointed by the Sultan is responsible for the exercise of executive power.

A new Agreement replacing that of 1905-06 was concluded with the United Kingdom following the promulgation of the Constitution. Under the Agreement, the British Government continues to be responsible for the defence and external affairs of the State and provides for the appointment of a High Commissioner to advise the Sultan on such matters as external affairs, defence, and internal security, and generally on matters other than those affecting the Muslim religion and Malay custom.

An agreement was signed in November 1971 giving Brunei full internal self-government, although Britain still retains responsibility for external affairs.

The Council of Ministers or Cabinet is presided over by the Sultan and consists of the High Commissioner, 6 ex-officio members and four members of the Legislative Council nominated by the Sultan.

The Legislative Council is presided over by a Speaker and consists of 22 members nominated by the Sultan to represent important interests.

The State is divided into four administrative districts, in each of which is a District Officer (Malay) responsible to the Mentri Besar.

THE GOVERNMENT

The Sultan: H.H. HASSANAL BOLKIAH MUZADDIN WAD-DAULAH (succeeded 5 October 1967; crowned 1 August 1968).

Mentri Besar: Y.A.M. Pengiran SETIA NEGARA Pengiran Haji MOHD. YUSOF.

The High Commissioner: ARTHUR ROBIN ADAIR, C.B.E.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

Chairman: H.H. The Sultan.

Members: ARTHUR ROBIN ADAIR, Mentri Besar, Y.A.M. Pengiran SETIA NEGARA Pengiran Haji MOHD YUSOF, Dato IDRIS TALOG DAVIES, Dato JOHN LEE.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The judicial system was created by the Supreme Court Enactment, 1963, under which the Supreme Court consists of the High Court and the Court of Appeal. There are also Magistrates' Courts of First, Second and Third Class.

The Supreme Court: Consists of the Chief Justice and as many Puisne Judges as may from time to time be appointed. Not less than three Supreme Court Judges constitutes the High Court, which has unlimited original jurisdiction in all civil matters other than the annulment of marriages solemnized between Christians in the United Kingdom or any British Colony, and matters concerning Muslim marriage, religion and divorce. The Court has unlimited criminal jurisdiction.

Courts of Magistrates: The Court of a Magistrate of the First Class has original civil jurisdiction in suits involving not more than $500 and original criminal jurisdiction in the case of offences for which the maximum term of imprisonment does not exceed two years and the maximum fine does not exceed $5,000. The Courts of the Second and Third Class Magistrates have civil and criminal jurisdiction in suits involving smaller sums and terms of imprisonment.

Courts of Kadhis: Deal solely with questions concerning Muslim religion, marriage and divorce, and may impose a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment not exceeding five years. Appeals lie from these Courts to the Sultan in Religious Council.

Chief Justice: Sir MICHAEL HOGAN.

RELIGION

The official religion of Brunei is Islam, and His Highness the Sultan is head of the Islamic population. Muslims number about 60,000, most of them Malays. The Chinese population is either Buddhist, Confucianist or Christian. Large numbers of the indigenous races are animists of various types. The remainder of the population are Roman Catholics, Anglicans or members of the American Methodist Church of Southern Asia.

BURMA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Union of Burma lies in south-east Asia between the Himalayas and the Malayan peninsula. Its principal neighbours are India to the north-west, China to the north-east and Thailand to the south-east. The climate is tropical, with an average temperature of 80°r (27°c) and monsoon rains from May to October. The official language is Burmese and there are also a number of tribal languages. Freedom of religious worship is the right of every citizen and 75 per cent of the population are Buddhists. There are Christian, Hindu and Muslim minorities, and there is a Chinese community of some 350,000. The flag is red and blue charged with a white star surrounded by five smaller stars. The capital is Rangoon.

Recent History

Burma elected to become an independent State in 1948 after being under British rule. The central government operates from Rangoon, but much power has remained in the Shan and other States. In 1958 the Army took over control. Civil rule was restored in 1960, but in March 1962 the Army staged another coup and set up a Revolutionary Government under General Ne Win. In February 1963, a left-wing faction acquired greater influence although General Ne Win remained firmly in control. The subsequent period has been marked by intensive efforts to nationalize the economy and to reach peace with underground organizations representing separate ethnic groups.

Government

The Revolutionary Government suspended the 1947 Constitution and has not yet promulgated a new one. The Government consists of a Revolutionary Council, whose members are all army officers and which stands at the apex of a hierarchy of councils representing most functions and elements of society. Parliament was dissolved at the time of the coup; all political organizations excepting the official Burmese Way to Socialism Programme Party were dissolved in April 1964. The federal form of government has been retained, with State Councils for each of the five States—Chin, Kawthoolei (Karen), Kachin, Kayah, and Shan. In October 1971 Gen. Ne Win Set up a Commission to draft a new Constitution, with the object of establishing a socialist, unitary State.

Defence

Burma maintains neutrality and has no external defence treaties. The Armed Forces are largely engaged in internal security duties.

Economic Affairs

Burma is relatively rich in agricultural, fishery, timber, mineral and water resources. Agriculture, forestry and fisheries produce 40 per cent of G.N.P. and employ 67 per cent of the labour force, and rice, timber and other agricultural products are the main export items. Until 1964, Burma was the world's leading exporter of rice and rice products, and although these still constitute 60 per cent of Burma's exports the decline in the rice trade has had serious repercussions throughout the economy. The mining of tin, petroleum and coal are important; the expanding petroleum industry is expected to supply all Burma's requirements for petroleum products by 1972, but this will entail expansion of refining capacity. There are small deposits of tungsten, lead, zinc, antimony, silver and gold, while a number of other minerals are known to exist. The 8,918 industrial establishments recorded in 1967 mainly process primary products, particularly the milling of rice.

Industry, transport, internal and external trade, communications and finance have been nationalized since the 1962 Revolution. The 1966-70 Development Plan tried to diversify agriculture and develop industries based on domestic raw materials. Burma receives little foreign aid and investment.

Transport and Communications

The chief artery of traffic is the river Irrawaddy, which is navigable as far as Bhamo, 900 miles inland. The Irrawaddy delta has nearly 2,000 miles of navigable waters and some parts of the Salween and the Chindwin are navigable. Railways have been modernized by the introduction of diesel engines and in 1970-71 comprised 2,421 track and 1,925 route miles. The Union of Burma Airways Board provides internal and international air services. The railways, domestic airways and the major inland water facilities are owned and operated by the State, while all passenger and freight road transport services are to be nationalized. There are also 8,186 miles of roads.

Social Welfare

Burma's health services were greatly extended in 1964, but there is no comprehensive system. About 500,000 workers are covered by social security insurance.

Education

Education is free, where available. Schools are divided into primary, middle and high schools. There were 19,155 schools, colleges and professional institutes in 1970-71 with a total enrolment of 4.1 million students. Emphasis is placed on vocational and technical training. There are two universities.

Tourism

Tourism is undeveloped. Burma is one of the centres of Buddhism and has many temples and shrines, including the famous Shwe Dagon Pagoda in Rangoon. Mandalay and Pagan also possess outstanding temples and palaces.

Visas are required by all visitors.

Sport

There is little organized sport, but football, basketball, volleyball and tennis are played.

THE CONSTITUTION*

(Adopted 24 September 1947, suspended after Coup d'état, 2 March 1962.)

THE Union of Burma is a sovereign, independent republic. All powers—executive, legislative and judicial—reside in the people. The Union consists of the territories formerly governed by his Britannic Majesty through the Governor of Burma, together with the Kayah State.

The Government

The President of the Union shall be elected by both Chambers of Parliament in joint session, by secret ballot, for a five-year term. He may not be a member of either Chamber, nor serve for more than a maximum of two terms. The executive power of the Union is vested in his person. He shall summon, prorogue or dissolve the Chamber of Deputies, on the advice of the Prime Minister, and appoint the Prime Minister on the nomination of the Chamber of Deputies. Every Bill requires the signature of the President for its enactment into law, but he has no power of veto. The President has the right of pardon.

The Government shall consist of the Prime Minister and other members nominated by the Prime Minister and appointed by the President. It is collectively responsible to the Chamber of Deputies. The President shall appoint an advocate of the High Court to be Attorney-General, on the nomination of the Prime Minister.

The legislative power of the Union is vested in the Parliament, which shall consist of the President, a Chamber of Deputies, and a Chamber of Nationalities. A session of Parliament shall be held at least once in every twelve months. Every citizen over 18, regardless of sex, race or religion, has the right to vote, unless disqualified by law. Voting shall be by secret ballot.

The Chamber of Deputies shall be composed of members who represent constituencies of not less than 30,000 or more than 100,000 persons. This Chamber shall be approximately twice the size of the Chamber of Nationalities, and its term shall be four years, except in times of grave emergencies. Parliament shall revise the constituencies at least once in every 10 years.

The Chamber of Nationalities shall consist of 125 seats: 25 for the Shan State, 12 for the Kachin State, 8 for the Special Division of China, 3 for the Kayah State, 15 for the Karen State and the remainder for other territories.

The sole and exclusive power of making laws in the Union shall be vested in the Parliament, but provision may be made by law, on principles of regional autonomy, for delegating specified powers in administrative, cultural and economic matters.

The Shan State

All the members of Parliament representing the Shan

State shall constitute the Shan State Council. The State Council may recommend to the Parliament the passing of any law outside its own legislative powers. On the advice of the State Council, and on the nomination of the Prime Minister, the President shall appoint a member of the Union Government to be Head of the Shan State. The executive authority of the State shall be vested in this person, and his authority shall extend to all matters relating to recruitment to the State civil services, to postings and transfers, and to disciplinary matters relating to these services. He shall consult the State Council in all other matters relating to the Shan State, and the State Council shall elect a Cabinet of State Ministers to aid and advise him.

The Kachin State

All members of the Parliament representing the Kachin State shall constitute the Kachin State Council. Of the twelve seats in the Chamber of Nationalities, six shall be filled by representatives of the Kachins, and the other six by those of the non-Kachins of the Kachin State. Any Bill prejudicially affecting any right or privilege which the Kachins or non-Kachins, as a class or community, enjoyed immediately before the commencement of this Constitution, shall not be deemed valid unless the majority of the members representing the Kachin State have voted in its favour.

The Karen State, Kayah State, and Chin Special Division

Similar Councils and Heads of State shall be appointed for the Karen State and the Kayah State. The Constitution gives the Chins a special administrative division under a Minister for Chin Affairs who is aided and advised by the Chin Affairs Council consisting of all the members of the Parliament representing the Chins.

New States and Right of Secession

Parliament may, with the consent of the Council of every State whose boundaries are affected, establish a new unit or increase or diminish any unit.

The Shan State of the Kayah State may secede from the Union when a resolution has been passed by its Council, and a plebiscite has been held by the President to ascertain the will of the people of the State concerned, and provided that a period of ten years has elapsed from the date on which the Constitution came into operation.

Language

The official language shall be Burmese.

* It was announced in October 1971 that a 97-member Commission had been set up headed by Gen. Ne Win, comprising 34 military officers and 63 civilians, the latter representing ethnic minority races, the legal profession, former politicians, peasants and workers, whose function is to draft a new constitution by August 1973. The objective is to set up a Socialist unitary state with multi-national harmony on a basis of equality. Fundamental rights will be provided for all but this will be balanced against the assumption of corresponding obligations by the people to ensure the success of socialism.

BURUNDI

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Republic of Burundi on Lake Tanganyika lies in the heart of Africa a little below the Equator. Rwanda is to the north, Tanzania to the south and east and Zaire to the west. The climate is tropical with an irregular rainfall. The official languages are French and Kirundi; and Swahili is used in addition to French in commercial circles. Religious beliefs are African and animistic but missions have converted more than half the population to Roman Catholicism. The flag consists of a white St. Andrew's Cross on a background of red and green, with a white circle containing three red stars in the centre. The capital is Bujumbura (formerly Usumbura).

Recent History

Before independence Burundi formed part of the Belgian-administered UN Trust Territory of Ruanda-Urundi, which was itself formerly part of German East Africa. Internal self-government was granted in January 1962, following elections to a new National Assembly in September 1961, and full independence in July 1962, when the two parts of the Trust Territory became separate states. Burundi continued to be linked to Rwanda in a customs and monetary union, until the agreements were terminated in January 1964. In July 1966 Mwambutsa IV, king since 1915, was deposed by his son Charles with the help of a group of army officers, and the constitution suspended. In November 1966, Charles, now Mwami (King) Ntare V, was himself deposed by his Prime Minister, Captain (later Colonel) Micombero, who declared Burundi a Republic. Agreement on a settlement of the long dispute with Rwanda, during which armed refugees from both countries had clashed, was reached in March 1967 with the mediation of President Mobutu of Congo (Kinshasa) (now Zaire).

A plot to overthrow the government was uncovered in September 1969, and 23 people found guilty of involvement in the conspiracy were executed in December. In July 1971 more plotters, alleged to be Maoists and including a former chief-of-staff and two former ministers were arrested, and were later brought to trial. In March 1972 the Government announced that the former king had been arrested after trying to invade Burundi with white mercenaries.

Government

Since November 1966, Burundi has been a Republic, although a new constitution has not yet been promulgated. There are eight provinces, administered by military governors.

Defence

The army was merged with the police force in March 1967 and total armed strength is now around 3,000 men.

Economic Affairs

The economy is based almost entirely on agriculture, the main subsistence crops being manioc and sweet potatoes and the main cash crops coffee and cotton. Coffee accounts for some 85 per cent of Burundi's total export earnings, the bulk of the crop going to the U.S.A. Cotton is the other main source of revenue abroad. Tea is being developed and the government plans to raise output to around 7,000 tons by 1978, during which time six to eight tea processing factories are to be built.

The mining industry, based on gold and cassiterite, is developing, and exports have been expanding rapidly over the last few years. Manufacturing industry is, however, still in its infancy, and many industrial and consumer goods have to be imported. Most foreign aid comes from Belgium, with France and Federal Germany also contributing individually and through the EEC. Negotiation of Burundi's application to join the East African Community began in November 1968; and in the same month Burundi and Zambia concluded a trade agreement. Proposals for an economic union between Burundi, Rwanda and Zaire have been shelved for the moment, but three commissions have been set up: Burundi is responsible for the Economic, Financial and Technical Commission, Rwanda for the Social and Cultural Commission and Zaire for the Political and Juridical Commission.

Transport and Communications

There are no railways in Burundi. Roads extend for 6,000 kilometres of which 80 kilometres are asphalted. The main roadway links the capital Bujumbura with Bugarama. There is passenger and freight traffic on Lake Tanganyika with Bujumbura as the main port handling about 250,000 tons of goods yearly. There is an international airport at Bujumbura which is to be enlarged to take large jet aircraft.

Social Welfare

Wage-earners are protected by insurance against accidents and occupational diseases and can draw on a Pension Fund.

Education

Education is free. French is the language of instruction in the secondary schools and Kirundi in primary schools, with French as a second language. In 1968-69 there were 181,530 pupils in primary schools and 3,652 in secondary. There is a university with three faculties at Bujumbura.

Tourism

Visas are not required to visit Burundi by citizens of Tanzania and Uganda.

Sport

Sport is very popular, the chief sport being football.

THE CONSTITUTION

Burundi obtained internal self-government as a kingdom in January 1962 and full independence in July 1962. On July 8th, 1966, the Mwami (King), Mwambutsa IV, was deposed by Prince Charles Ndizeye and the constitution, which provided for a legislative assembly of 33 members and a senate of 16, was suspended. On November 28th, 1966, Captain Micombero, who had been appointed Premier by Charles (as Mwami Ntare V), deposed the King and declared a republic with himself as President, heading a military National Committee of Revolution.

A republican constitution, providing for strong presidential powers and embodying changes in the administration of justice, is being drawn up. Each of the eight provinces is administered by a military governor.

CAMEROON

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Federation of Cameroon (East and West Cameroon) lies on the west coast of Africa with Nigeria to the north, Chad and the Central African Republic to the east and Congo (Brazzaville) and Gabon to the south. The climate is hot and humid with average temperatures of 80°F (26°C). It is hotter and drier inland. The official languages are French and English. In religion most Cameroonians follow traditional beliefs. Thirty-three per cent are Christians, roughly divided between Roman Catholics and Protestants, and about 560,000 are Muslims. The flag consists of a vertical tricolour of green, red and yellow with two yellow stars in the green stripe. The Federal capital and the capital of East Cameroon is Yaoundé. The capital of West Cameroon is Buea.

Recent History

The Federal Republic of Cameroon was created on 1st October 1961 by the union of the Republic of Cameroon with the former British-administered Trust Territory of Southern Cameroons.

East Cameroon, once a League of Nations Mandate and later a United Nations Trusteeship Territory, was under French administration until it became independent as the Republic of Cameroon on 1st January 1960. Southern Cameroons opted to join the Republic in February 1961. President Ahidjo was re-elected in March 1970. The guerrilla warfare, waged since 1955 by the opposition Union des populations de Cameroun (UPC), seemed definitively checked by the capture and execution in 1970 of the last of its leaders.

Beginning in 1962 the political, economic and social structures of the two parts of the Federation were gradually merged, culminating in 1966 in the introduction of common customs tariffs in line with those of the UDEAC, and in the unification of the governing parties of the two states into a single party.

Government

Cameroon has a central Government and two Provincial Governments. The Federal President and Vice-President are elected by direct universal suffrage. The President appoints the Cabinet and the Federal Assembly is elected by direct universal suffrage.

The two Provinces of East and West Cameroon each have their own Prime Minister and Cabinet and Legislative Assembly. West Cameroon retains its Advisory House of Chiefs.

Defence

Cameroon has agreements with France, whereby France will assist her in training and equipping her forces.

Economic Affairs

Cameroon has one of the highest incomes per head in tropical Africa, though the basis of its economy is still essentially agricultural. The most important cash crops are cocoa, coffee, rubber and palm oil. Bananas have declined in importance in export earnings over the last few years, and many plantations have been converted by the Cameroon Development Corporation to more profitable crops.

The industrial sector in East Cameroon, like the plantations in West Cameroon, was well-developed before independence and has grown steadily since, based on aluminium (particularly at Edea) and chemicals, especially rare gases. Douala is the main commercial centre and port.

Cameroon is an associate member of the EEC; and a member of OCAM and UDEAC.

Transport and Communications

East Cameroon's routes are linked with those of the ex-French Equatorial states while West Cameroon is linked to Nigeria. The main rail links are between Douala and Yaoundé, and Yaoundé and Belabo. An extension from Belabo to Ngaoundéré is under construction as part of the trans-Cameroon railway project and the line may eventually run into Chad. A major road also links the two regions. British and French shipping lines call at Douala and Victoria. There are internal and international air services.

Social Welfare

The Government and Christian Missions maintain hospitals and medical centres but there are no welfare services covering the whole population.

Education

Education is provided by the Government and Missionary societies and is free. A Federal University was established in 1962. Some students go to France, U.S.A., U.S.S.R. and the United Kingdom for higher education.

Tourism

Game reserves have been established. Special tours of East Cameroon are being organized as part of a campaign to increase tourist trade.

Sport

Football is popular everywhere but there is little organized sport.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), May 11 (Ascension), May 21 (Whitsun), August 15 (Assumption), October 1 (Reunification Day), October 19 (Ramadan), November 1 (All Saints'), December 10 (Universal Rights Day), December 25 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year and Independence Day), January 23 (Id ul Adha), April 15 (Easter Monday).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The principal unit of currency is the Franc de la Communauté Financière Africaine (CFA), which is divided into 100 cents.

Coins: 1, 2, 10, 25, 50, 100 Francs CFA.

Notes: 50, 100, 500, 1,000, 5,000, 10,000 Francs CFA.

Exchange rate: 661 Francs CFA = £1 sterling
254 Francs CFA = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

The French part of Cameroon (now East Cameroon) gained autonomy in 1958 and independence on January 1st, 1960. On March 1st, 1960, a republic was proclaimed. The Federal Republic of Cameroon came into being on October 1st, 1961, when the Republic of Cameroon united with the former British Trust Territory of Southern Cameroons, the Northern Cameroons, also under British administration, having opted in the plebiscite of February 1961 for union with Nigeria. East Cameroon and West Cameroon (the former Southern Cameroons) retain their own administration and legal systems, but in most other spheres integration between the two parts of the Federation has taken place. French and English are the official languages and Yaoundé is the capital.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

The State is democratic, lay and social and the right of secession is excluded. The President and Vice-President are elected by universal, secret, adult suffrage, for a term of five years and may be re-elected. Neither may hold any other position but the President and Vice-President of the Federation were the President of the former Republic of Cameroon and the Prime Minister of Southern Cameroon, respectively. Following elections in March 1965 the Vice-President resigned his post of Prime Minister of West Cameroon.

Executive power is vested in the President, who appoints a Cabinet which is responsible to him. The Federal Ministers may also hold office in the State Cabinets. The Federal Legislature has 50 members, of which 40 are from East and 10 from West Cameroon, elected by universal suffrage. The Assembly will hold two ordinary sessions a year, with emergency sessions at the request of the President or two-thirds of the members. Its ordinary life is five years but it may extend or shorten this period on the initiative of the President. Legislation may be initiated by the President or deputies.

The Federal Government is responsible for defence, foreign affairs, the judiciary and Federal Court, external economic relations, nationality, overall economic development, currency, and certain federal services such as transport, communications and higher education. Where there is a discrepancy between English and French custom the transference will take place gradually. A Commission, appointed by the President, must be consulted by the State Government before legislating on such matters.

STATE GOVERNMENTS

The State Governments have a single State Legislative Assembly, elected by universal suffrage. The East Cameroon Assembly has 100 members and that of West Cameroon 37 members. The State Premiers are nominated by the President of the Republic and are each assisted by a Cabinet. The life of the Assemblies is the same as that of the National Federal Assembly.

In West Cameroon the House of Chiefs will remain as an advisory body.

PARLIAMENT

NATIONAL FEDERAL ASSEMBLY

President: MARCEL MARIGOH MBOUA.

First Vice-President: NDELEY STEPHEN MOKOSSO.

ELECTION, JUNE 7TH 1970

All 50 seats (40 for East Cameroon and 10 for West Cameroon) were won by the UNC.

EAST CAMEROON LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

President: SAMUEL NAOUE.

ELECTION, JUNE 7TH, 1970

The UNC won all 100 seats without opposition.

WEST CAMEROON LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Speaker: W. EFFIOM.

ELECTIONS, DECEMBER 31ST, 1967

The UNC, the only party to present candidates, won all 37 seats.

There is also an Assembly of Chiefs, with 20 members, whose functions are purely consultative.

POLITICAL PARTY

Union nationale camerounaise (UNC): Yaoundé; f. 1966 by merger of the governing party of each state (Union camerounaise and the Kamerun National Democratic Party), two opposition parties in East Cameroon (the Parti démocratique camerounais and the Cameroon Socialists), and the two opposition parties in West Cameroon (the Cameroon Union Congress and the Cameroon People's National Congress, which had already agreed in August 1965 to co-operate with the ruling KNDP in West Cameroon); Chair. J. N. FONCHA; publ. l'Unité (weekly).

The UNC Charter, outlining the party's internal and external policies, was published in April, 1969. It supports efforts towards the liberation and unification of Africa; it supports a democratic system of government within Cameroon; and it lays down that economic and social development should be achieved in Cameroon through encouraging private initiative while reserving for the state a determining and organizing rôle.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

FEDERAL

Federal High Court: Yaoundé; can hear actions against the President, Vice-President, or Ministers; it can decide on the admissibility of any proposed law. When the Court sits to decide the admissibility of laws, it will have in addition to the Judges, an equal number of members chosen by the President.

EAST CAMEROON

The Legal System is closely modelled on that of France, with a Supreme Court, four Courts of Appeal and a number of Tribunaux de Première Instance, Labour Tribunes and Tribunes of Conciliation.

President of the Supreme Court: J. M. CORRE.

Procureur-Général: M. NGUINI.

WEST CAMEROON

West Cameroon retains its own judicial system for customary law.

There is a High Court and Magistrates' Court at Buea. There are 70 Native Courts, divided into "C" and "D" grades. Their jurisdiction covers cases involving native law.

Unification of the Penal Code has now been achieved at federal level.

RELIGION

EAST CAMEROON

It is estimated that 45 per cent of the population follow traditional animist beliefs, 20 per cent are Muslims and 35 per cent Christians, Roman Catholics comprising 21 per cent of the total population.

Roman Catholic Missions: The total number of Roman Catholics is about 1,122,570 (including 26,368 catechumens). The Pères du Sacré-Coeur de Saint-Quentin, the Pères du Saint-Esprit, the Oblats de Marie-Immaculée, the Société de St. Joseph de Mill-Hill and the Petits Frères du Père de Foucauld are the most active missionary orders. There is a seminary for African priests at Nkol-Bisson and a Trappist monastery at Koutaba. The total number of priests (including Africans) is about 38.

CANADA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Canada occupies the northern part of North America (except Alaska) and is the second largest country in the world. The border with the U.S.A. follows the upper St. Lawrence Seaway and the Great Lakes, continuing west along the 49th parallel. The climate is an extreme one, particularly inland. Winter temperatures drop well below freezing with a summer average of about 65°F (18°C). Rain-fall varies from moderate to light and there are heavy falls of snow. The two official languages are English and French, about 30 per cent speaking French. There are 230,900 Indians and 15,000 Eskimos. Forty-six per cent of the people are Roman Catholics. The largest Protestant churches are the United Church of Canada (20 per cent) and the Anglicans (13 per cent) but almost every Christian denomination is represented. The flag, which was introduced in 1964, consists of a red maple leaf on a white field, flanked by red panels. The capital is Ottawa.

Recent History

Since the war Canada has played an increasing part in international affairs by co-operating closely with the U.S.A. and the Commonwealth and through the United Nations, the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO), the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and other bodies. In February 1972, Canada joined as an observer-member of the Organization of American States. In 1969 Canada reaffirmed her Pacific interests and in 1970 established diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China. Canada maintains good relations with the U.S.S.R., and the Canadian and Russian Prime Ministers exchanged visits in 1971. The wide scope of Canada's foreign relations is seen as furthering Canadian independence. After many years of Liberal rule a Conservative administration was returned in 1957 and continued in power under Mr. Diefenbaker until April 1963, when a General Election was held and a minority Liberal Government under Mr. Lester Pearson took office. In 1968 Mr. Pearson retired and his successor, Mr. Pierre Trudeau, won an electoral majority for the Liberals in June 1968. Quebec maintains her own cultural and educational links with France, and during recent years there has been pressure from some French-speaking Canadians for the separation of Quebec from the other provinces of the Dominion. In April 1970, although the separatists gained 24 per cent of the popular vote, the moderate Liberal party came into power there with a large majority. However, in October the revolutionary separatist group "Quebec Liberation Front" (F.L.Q.) kidnapped a British Trade Commissioner and murdered the Quebec Minister of Labour, M. Laporte. Canada was placed in a state of emergency until April 1971 and the F.L.Q. outlawed. The Federal Government have as a long-term policy the intention of reducing the number of provinces from ten to five. In 1971 plans to amend the Constitution for the first time without reference to Great Britain were quashed when the government of Quebec rejected the proposals.

Government

Queen Elizabeth II, Queen of Canada, is the Head of State and is represented at Ottawa by a Governor-General. Parliament consists of the Queen, the Senate and the House of Commons. Senators are appointed on a regional basis until age of 75. Members of Parliament are elected by universal suffrage. Executive power lies with the Cabinet selected by the Prime Minister. Each of the ten provinces is headed by a Lieutenant-Governor and governed by a unicameral Legislative Assembly, from which the provincial premiers and cabinets are chosen. Two Territories, Yukon and the Northwest, are represented by one member in the Federal House of Commons and locally by a Commissioner.

Defence

Canada co-operates with U.S.A. in the defence of North America, sends forces to NATO's Atlantic and European sectors, and takes part in UN peace-keeping in the Middle East. Unification of the services as the Canadian Armed Forces began in 1964 and was completed on January 31st, 1968. The Armed Forces are manned by volunteers. In 1970 steps were taken to strengthen the forces north of the 60th Parallel, and to create a small maritime force to maintain Canadian sovereignty in the Arctic. In 1969 a planned and phased reduction in Canada's NATO forces was announced which would cut its military contribution by more than a half and eliminate nuclear strike weapons; a further reduction was made in 1970. Total strength of the Canadian Armed Forces in 1971 was 85,000, while the 1971-72 defence budget was 1,822 million dollars.

Economic Affairs

More than 3.4 million emigrants have settled in Canada since the war. It is now one of the world's leading industrial countries and the traditional prairie farming has become intensively mechanized. Automobile parts head the list of exports by value; followed by wood pulp and timber. In recent years huge shipments of wheat have been sold to the U.S.S.R. and People's China, but approximately 70 per cent of total trade is with the U.S.A. Industry is heavily dependent on foreign investment, 80 per cent of it American. It is estimated that 50 per cent of Canada's 120 largest manufacturing companies are wholly-owned or effectively controlled by foreign corporations. Thus Canadian prosperity is dependent on American investment which in 1970 totalled nearly $27 billion. Canada is the world's largest producer of asbestos, silver, nickel and zinc; and is rich in many other minerals, notably iron, copper, uranium, cobalt, elemental sulphur, lead and gold. There are considerable oil and gas resources in Alberta and the Canadian Arctic islands. Although Canada is ninth in world crude oil production, it is Canada's leading mineral in dollar value. Other valuable primary industries are forestry, fishing, and fur production. During 1970 the Government took decisive action to preserve an increasing area for Canadian fishermen only. Since 1968 tight monetary and fiscal policies have been in effect to curb inflation.

A high level of unemployment and the serious effect of the 1971 American import surcharge led the Government to introduce a 1,070 million dollar economic assistance programme in October, 1971. The impact of the American surcharge served to encourage political moves towards stricter control of foreign investment, in order to enhance Canadian economic independence. The Canadian dollar has "floated" in world currency markets since May 1970.

Transport and Communications

Owing to the size of the country, Canada's economy is particularly dependant upon good communications. Canada's rail, river and canal system is being increasingly supplemented by roads, air services and pipelines. In April 1959 the St. Lawrence Seaway was opened to allow ocean-going ships to reach the Great Lakes; the Trans-Canadian Highway was completed in 1962 and 66,000 miles of gas and oil pipelines have been built since 1950. A 100-mile railway is being planned to open up North West British Columbia; and work started in 1970 on a new airport near Montreal. The North West Passage was negotiated for the first time in the summer of 1969, and as a result the Arctic Waters Bill was passed in April 1971 giving Canada effective control of the passage and extending territorial waters from three miles offshore to twelve. Commercial air carriers log almost 800,000 flights annually.

Social Welfare

The Federal Government administers family allowances, unemployment insurance and War Veterans' and Old Age pensions. Other services are provided by the provinces, the range varying from province to province. About 25 per cent of the Federal Budget is devoted to Health and Welfare. The Canada Pension Plan, introduced in 1966, and its Quebec counterpart (the Quebec Pension Plan) provide contributory retirement, disability and survivors' pensions for the majority of workers, based on past earnings. A Federal Medicare insurance programme went into operation on July 1st, 1968, and all ten provinces participate in this scheme. The federal-provincial hospital insurance programme covers over 99 per cent of the insurable population of Canada.

Education

Education is a provincial matter and the period of compulsory education varies. French-speaking students are entitled by law to instruction in French. Primary education is from 6-7 years to 13-14 years, followed by 3-5 years at secondary or high school. Vocational education at secondary and adult level is assuming increasing importance.

Elementary school teachers undergo 1 year's training, while high school teachers are generally university graduates with 1 year's teacher-training. There are 61 degree-giving universities and 340 affiliated or independent colleges.

Tourism

Canada offers a wide range of outdoor tourist attractions: fishing, hunting, riding, canoeing, etc., in the great National Parks. Winter sports carnivals are held in many centres and Indian and Prairie gatherings are popular, a famous one being the Calgary Stampede. Most visitors are from the U.S.A. (about 35 million a year) and annual expenditure by tourists is estimated at Canadian $1,074 million.

Visas are not required to visit Canada by nationals of Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, German Federal Republic, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, United Kingdom and Commonwealth and U.S.A.

Sport

The national sports are Canadian Football and Ice Hockey. Baseball, tennis, athletics and winter and water sports are all popular and soccer is increasingly played particularly in Southern Ontario. In 1976 the Olympic Games will be held at Montreal.

Public Holidays

1972: March 31 (Good Friday), May 22 (Victoria Day), July 1 (Dominion Day), September 4 (Labour Day), October 9 (Thanksgiving), November 11 (Remembrance Day), December 25-26 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial system is in general use; the introduction of the metric system is under consideration.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The unit of coinage is the Canadian dollar which is divided into 100 cents.

Coins: 1, 5, 10, 25, 50 cents; $1.

Notes: $1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500, 1,000

Exchange rate (February 1972): $2.60 = £1 sterling
$1.00 = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

CONSTITUTIONAL development has been mainly based upon four important acts of the British Parliament: the Quebec Act of 1774, the Constitutional Act of 1791, the Act of Union of 1840, and the British North America Act of 1867. The first is chiefly important as it established the French civil law throughout the then province of Quebec and guaranteed the free exercise of Roman Catholicism. The second is noteworthy for the division of the province into the French-speaking province of Lower Canada and the English-speaking province of Upper Canada, and for the concession of representative government through an elective Legislative Assembly which, however, had no control over the executive government except in so far as it could refuse to vote taxes (the non-tax revenue of the province was outside of its control). The Act of Union (Section 45) mentions the appointment by Her Majesty of the Executive Council, but does not refer to the responsibility of the Council. It can be stated that responsible government has existed in Canada by constitutional practice and precedent. It was recognized in the instructions which the Colonial Secretary of State transmitted to the Governors.

Responsible government appeared in Canada in 1847, the year when Lord Elgin was appointed Governor-General. On March 11th, 1848, the reorganization of the Baldwin-Lafontaine ministry inaugurated the era of free government in Canada.

The fourth act separated the two Canadas from their existing legislative union to make them provinces, each administering its own local affairs, in a wider confederation, which within a comparatively short period so extended its boundaries as to take in the whole of British North America, except Newfoundland and Labrador.

The British North America Act 1867 provides that the Constitution of the Dominion shall be "similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom"; that the executive authority shall be vested in the Sovereign of Great Britain and Ireland, and carried on in his name by a Governor-General and Privy Council; and that the legislative power shall be exercised by a Parliament of two Houses, called the "Senate", and the "House of Commons".

The present position of Canada in the British Commonwealth of Nations was defined at the Imperial Conference of 1926: "The self-governing Dominions are autonomous Communities within the British Empire, equal in status, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown."

The Imperial Conference of 1930 was noteworthy, as regards constitutional development, in four respects:

1. Agreement was reached as to the principles that should be followed in the constitution to judicial tribunals for the solution of disputes that might arise between Members of the British Commonwealth.

2. The recommendations of the Conference on the operation of Dominion legislation (1929) were approved. This approval involved conventional recognition that the powers of reservation and disallowance in respect to Dominion legislation were (apart from one specific and temporary exception) obsolete, and also the recommendation of clauses to be incorporated in the Act of Parliament known as The Statute of Westminster. These clauses were designed to ensure that the Parliaments of the Dominions should have full power to enact laws having extra-territorial operation; that within each Dominion the laws therein enacted should be supreme and should not be subordinated to legislation enacted by the Parliament at Westminster; and that the Dominions in respect to merchant shipping and admiralty jurisdiction should have complete and unrestricted legislative power.

3. The Conference recommended to the Governments a draft British Commonwealth Merchant Shipping Agreement.

4. Certain detailed problems relating to inter-Imperial relations were considered and recommendations were made for their solution.

The Statute of Westminster received the Royal Assent in December 1931. In its application to Canada the Statute emancipates the Legislatures of the provinces as well as the Dominion Parliament from the operation of the Colonial Laws Validity Act. A special section was, however, included providing that the Statute should not apply to the repeal, amendment or alteration of the British North America Acts of 1867 to 1930, and also preventing the Dominions and provinces, in the exercise of their enlarged legislative powers, from trenching upon provincial and Dominion fields of legislative power respectively. Numerous attempts to devise amendment procedures within Canada without reference to Westminster have been made without success, and Amendment of the British North America Acts 1867 to 1962 still remains a procedural problem awaiting solution.

The Government

The national government works itself out through three main agencies. There is Parliament (consisting of the Queen as represented by the Governor-General, the Senate and the House of Commons) which makes the laws; the Executive (the Cabinet or Ministry) which applies the laws; and the Judiciary which interprets the laws.

Particular features of the British system of government are the close relation which exists between the Executive and Legislative branches, and the doctrine of Cabinet responsibility which has become crystallised in the course of time. The members of the Cabinet, or executive committee, are chosen from the political party commanding a majority in the House of Commons. Each Minister or member of the Cabinet is usually responsible for the administration of a department, although there may be Ministers without portfolio whose experience and counsel are drawn upon to strengthen the Cabinet, but who are not at the head of departments.

The second characteristic of the British system, the collective responsibility of the Cabinet, is very important. While each Minister is primarily responsible for the administration of his own particular department, that responsibility is shared, before Parliament and the country, by all his colleagues. Thus the Government of the day, not any particular Minister, is answerable for and must continue to exist, or must fall, on the stand taken by a Minister when acting in his official capacity.

Meetings of the Cabinet are presided over by the President of the Privy Council, but all Ministers, including the Prime Minister and the President of the Privy Council, meet as equals and there is no precedence in Council. From the Cabinet signed orders and recommendations go to the Governor-General for his approval, and it is in this way that the Crown acts only on the advice of its responsible Ministers. The Cabinet takes the responsibility for its advice being in accordance with the will of Parliament and is held strictly accountable.

The Federal Parliament

Parliament must meet at least once a year, so that twelve months do not elapse between the last meeting in one session and the first meeting in the next. The duration of Parliament may not be longer than five years. Senators (a maximum of 102 in number) are appointed until age 75 by the Governor-General in Council. They must be at least 30 years of age, British subjects, residents of the province they represent, and in possession of $4,000 over and above their liabilities. Members of the House of Commons are elected by universal adult suffrage for the duration of Parliament. Canadian Indians and Eskimos may vote in Federal elections on the same basis as other citizens.

Under the British North America Act, which is the basis of the Constitution, the Federal Parliament has exclusive legislative authority in all matters relating to public debt and property; regulation of trade and commerce; raising of money by any mode of taxation; borrowing of money on the public credit; postal service; census and statistics; militia; military and naval service and defence; fixing and providing for salaries and allowances of the officers of the Government; beacons, buoys and lighthouses; navigation and shipping; quarantine and the establishment and maintenance of marine hospitals; sea-coast and inland fisheries; ferries on an international or interprovincial frontier; currency and coinage; banking, incorporation of banks, and issue of paper money; savings banks; weights and measures; bills of exchange and promissory notes; interest; legal tender; bankruptcy and insolvency; patents of invention and discovery; copyrights; Indians and lands reserved for Indians; naturalisation and aliens; marriage and divorce; the criminal laws, except the constitution of courts of criminal jurisdiction but including the procedure in criminal matters; the establishment, maintenance and management of penitentiaries; such classes of subjects as are expressly excepted in the enumeration of the classes of subjects exclusively assigned to the Legislatures of the provinces by the Act. Judicial interpretation and later amendment have, in certain cases, modified or clearly defined the respective powers of the Federal and Provincial Governments.

Provincial Government

In each of the ten Provinces (Newfoundland joined with Canada as the tenth province on April 1st, 1949) the Queen is represented by a Lieutenant-Governor, appointed by the Governor-General in Council, and governing with the advice and assistance of the Ministry or Executive Council, which is responsible to the Legislature and resigns office when it ceases to enjoy the confidence of that body. The Legislatures are unicameral, consisting of an elected Legislative Assembly.

The Legislature in each province may exclusively make laws in relation to: amendment of the constitution of the province, except as regards the Lieutenant-Governor; direct taxation within the province; borrowing of money on the credit of the province; establishment and tenure of provincial offices and appointment and payment of provincial officers; the management and sale of public lands belonging to the province and of the timber and wood thereon; the establishment, maintenance and management of public and reformatory prisons in and for the province; the establishment, maintenance and management of hospitals, asylums, charities and charitable institutions in and for the province, other than marine hospitals; municipal institutions in the province; shop, saloon, tavern, auctioneer and other licences issued for the raising of provincial or municipal revenue; local works and undertakings other than interprovincial or international lines of ships, railways, canals, telegraphs, etc., or works which, though wholly situated within one province are declared by the Federal Parliament to be for the general advantage either of Canada or of two or more provinces; the incorporation of companies with provincial objects; the solemnisation of marriage in the province; property and civil rights in the province; the administration of justice in the province, including the constitution, maintenance and organization of provincial courts both of civil and criminal jurisdiction, and including procedure in civil matters in these courts; the imposition of punishment by fine, penalty or imprisonment for enforcing any law of the province relating to any of the aforesaid subjects; generally all matters of a merely local or private nature in the province. Further, provincial Legislatures may exclusively make laws in relation to education, subject to the protection of religious minorities, who are to retain the privileges and rights enjoyed before Confederation.

Municipal Government

Under the British North America Act, the municipalities are the creations of the Provincial Governments. Their bases of organization and the extent of their authority vary in different provinces, but almost everywhere they have very considerable powers of local self-government.

THE PRESS

The Canadian press has a tradition of complete freedom from government restriction of any kind. Its function has not been officially defined, and the journalist has no major press legislation to contend with except the laws of libel, which he must observe closely.

The press suffers from heavy competition from U.S. newspapers and periodicals (particularly the latter), amongst which the Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest are prominent, accounting for 60 per cent of periodical revenue in Canada. To protect national publications from this competition, a law was passed in June 1965 which, by imposing a discriminatory tax on advertising, restricted to 25 per cent the foreign stake in ownership of Canadian newspapers and periodicals. However, Time and Reader's Digest were exempted; and the Bill also met much criticism as an infringement of press liberty.

Economic conditions have in recent years caused a growing concentration of ownership, resulting in the emergence of three principal newspaper groups, while the number of periodicals published has declined steadily over the past 25 years. The power of the groups is however relatively slight, the largest group containing papers with relatively small circulations. Furthermore group managements encourage a measure of independent editorial policy. Nevertheless, recent purchases of newspapers by groups were the subject of a restrictive practises inquiry in 1971. The principal groups are:

The Thomson Group: (Pres. of Thomson Newspapers Ltd., Canada, and Thomson Newspapers Inc., U.S.A., KENNETH R. THOMSON) owns 42 newspapers of which 28 are dailies; 18 of these are in Ontario, the largest being Sudbury Star (31,000); the group also includes 74 papers in the United Kingdom, and 30 each in the U.S.A. and southern Africa.

The Southam Group: (Pres. ST. CLAIR BALFOUR) controls 10 daily newspapers, including the Edmonton Journal, Hamilton Spectator, Vancouver Prince, Calgary Herald and Winnipeg Tribune; also has holdings in radio stations.

Free Press Publications: (Pres. JOHN SIFTON) controls 8 daily newspapers, including the Toronto Globe and Mail, Vancouver Sun, Winnipeg Free Press and Ottawa Journal.

In addition to these groups the Sifton group (Pres. MICHAEL SIFTON) controls the Regina Leader Post (60,000) and Saskatoon Star Phoenix (49,000).

A feature of the Canadian press is its heavy reliance on advertisements as the main source of revenue.

There are 120 daily newspapers with a total circulation of about 4,572,000 copies, of which 84 per cent is in English and 16 per cent in French. The widest-circulating dailies include the Toronto Daily Star (394,000), The Sun, Vancouver (225,000), The Globe and Mail, Toronto (270,000), La Presse, Montreal (205,000), The Montreal Star (187,000), The Gazette, Montreal (135,000) and The Edmonton Journal (146,000). 1971 saw one prominent newspaper, the Toronto Telegram, cease publication, while La Presse of Montreal was temporarily closed. Two new newspapers came into being, however, the Toronto Sun and the Montreal Express.

There is no truly national press, the wide dispersion of the population and the constitutional emphasis on provincial control of local affairs contributing to the development of a strong and authoritative local press. Though the Montreal Gazette and Toronto Globe and Mail are distributed by air to all large cities, their attitudes and interests remain regionally oriented. Other influential dailies include La Presse, Montreal and Le Soleil, Quebec. Fifteen urban centres have two or more dailies—Montreal 7 (4 are French), Quebec 4 (3), Toronto 3, Ottawa 3 (1), Vancouver and Winnipeg 2 each. The resultant thorough treatment of local affairs is not made at the expense of international news; however, a considerable proportion of the contents of the smaller Canadian papers is from U.S. or U.K. syndicated sources, and news which is not local has a strong U.S. flavour. Most papers balance serious and popular material about equally.

There are 826 weekly newspapers, of which one-fifth are French, and a further 70 cater for other language groups. The weekly press has great influence on national and local affairs, and plays an important role in remote places where no daily press exists. The Toronto Financial Post, containing national financial news, has a distribution in most large urban centres. Among periodicals, the only one which can claim to be national in its attitudes and readership is the fortnightly Maclean's Magazine, which also has a French edition. Other important periodicals include Chatelaine (women's interests) and Star Weekly and Week-end, which combine entertainment with serious appeal, and local magazines such as Atlantic Advocate and the heavier Montrealer.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

Canadian broadcasting is a combination of public and private enterprise which provides radio and television services for almost all of the country's population. All stations and networks are subject to the regulations of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, but are entitled to freedom of expression and enjoy varying degrees of autonomy. Most privately-owned television stations and many of the private radio stations are affiliated with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and help to distribute national broadcasting services over CBC networks. Of the unaffiliated television stations, eleven form the CTV Television Network Ltd., which now reaches over 63 per cent of the population.

The source material for local stations comes from their own and network productions, wire services, free-lancers and production companies. An Act of Parliament passed in 1968 stipulates that a national broadcasting service be provided which is predominantly Canadian in content and character.

Private stations broadcast over 2,500,000 hours annually, with some stations on the air 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. In Canada there are 308 AM stations, 83 FM stations, 352 television stations, 22 shortwave stations, 254 Low Power Relay transmitters, and 274 Cable television systems.

Canadian Radio-Television Commission: Head Office 100 Metcalfe St., Ottawa, Ont. K1A 0N2; Chair. PIERRE JUNEAU; Sec. F. K. FOSTER; Vice-Chair. HARRY J. BOYLE; Full-time mems. Mrs. PAT PEARCE, HAROLD DORNAN, REAL THERRIEN; ten part-time mems.; Acting Sec. Miss MONIQUE COUPAL.

The CRTC's mandate to supervise and regulate the Canadian broadcasting system is enabled by provisions of the Broadcasting Act (1968) which give it the authority and direction to license all broadcasting undertakings, enact regulations, research any and all aspects of broadcasting and develop and formulate policy for the system. In 1970 new regulations provided for a graduated increase in Canadian television programming to 60 per cent by October 1972, and a minimum of 30 per cent Canadian content in AM radio. In July 1971 the Commission announced policies aimed at integrating cable television into the Canadian broadcasting system.

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation: Head Office 1500 Bronson Ave., Ottawa (P.O.B. 8478); Pres. GEORGE F. DAVIDSON; Exec. Vice-Pres. LAURENT A. PICARD.

The Corporation consists of a president and fourteen other directors appointed by the Governor-in-Council. The Executive Vice-President is appointed by the Corporation on the recommendation of the President and with the approval of the Governor-in-Council.

The Corporation is publicly owned and was established by an Act of the Canadian Parliament to provide the national broadcasting service in Canada. The CBC was created in 1936, replacing an earlier public broadcasting agency which was established in 1932. The regulation of all Canadian broadcasting stations, both public and private, was also a CBC function until 1958, when a separate body, the Board of Broadcast Governors, was set up. The Broadcasting Act of 1968 reconstituted the Board as the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

The CBC is financed mainly by public funds voted annually by Parliament. Supplementary revenue is obtained from commercial advertising. As a publicly owned corporation, the CBC is responsible to Parliament, and reports on its operations each year through a Cabinet Minister designated in the Broadcasting Act.

RADIO

The CBC operates two AM networks, in English and in French, an FM network in English, and a multilingual service in the English, French, Indian and Eskimo languages, providing medium and shortwave broadcasting to the Canadian North. There are 397 outlets for the national radio service, 44 CBC-owned originating stations, 254 CBC-owned low-power relay transmitters, and 99 privately-owned affiliated stations. CBC radio service is within reach of 98.6 per cent of the Canadian population. Radio Canada International broadcasts by shortwave in 11 languages to eastern and western Europe, Africa, Australasia, Latin America, the Caribbean and North America. It also distributes programmes to foreign broadcasters by means of music and spoken-word transcriptions and special relay circuits. The CBC Armed Forces Service, in co-operation with the Department of National Defence, provides recorded and shortwave programmes and television films for Canadian military bases in Canada and abroad.

TELEVISION

Outlets for the national television service total 336, including 19 CBC-owned originating stations, 109 CBC-owned network relay and rebroadcasting stations, and 42 privately owned affiliates with their 166 rebroadcasting stations. CBC television services are within reach of 96.6 per cent of the Canadian population. Most evening programming is in colour, and about 18 per cent of households have colour sets. The main production centre for English networks is in Toronto, and in Montreal for French networks, with regional centres across the country.

As well as producing programmes in many fields, CBC also carries a selection of programmes from other countries. The CBC is a member of several international broadcasting organizations and is active in international programme sales and exchanges. With the Canadian International Development Agency and UNESCO, CBC has aided foreign broadcasting organizations and provides broadcasting training for foreign students. CBC maintains offices in London, Paris, New York and Washington and news bureaux in Moscow and the Far East.

CTV Television Network: Baton Broadcasting, Box 9, Toronto 375, Ont.; Vice-Pres. L. NICHOLS.

The Network is privately-owned and has provided a second television service in Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Calgary, Kitchener, Moose Jaw and Vancouver since October 1961. CTV now also serves Saskatoon, Sudbury and Moncton.

Provincial Governments are responsible for roads within their boundaries. The Federal Government is responsible for the construction of major roads in the Yukon and North-west Territories and in National Parks. At the end of 1971 the mileage of all provincial, federal and municipal roads was 516,783, of which 395,437 miles were surfaced and 121,346 miles were earth roads.

The Trans-Canadian Highway, extending from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Victoria, British Columbia, was officially opened on September 3rd, 1962.

INLAND WATERWAYS

The St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes provide Canada and the United States with a system of inland waterways stretching 2,300 miles across the continent. There is a 35 foot navigation channel from Montreal to the sea and a 27 foot channel from Montreal to Lake Erie. A channel only 14 feet deep existed previously between Montreal and Prescott (approx. 100 miles). The St. Lawrence Seaway project was initiated partly with a view to providing a deep waterway and partly to satisfy the demand for more electric power. Power development has been undertaken by the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario, and by New York State. The navigation facilities and conditions are within the jurisdiction of the federal governments of the United States and Canada.

CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Central African Republic lies in the heart of equatorial Africa and is bounded by Chad to the north, the Sudan to the east, Congo People's Republic and Zaïre to the south and Cameroon to the west. Climate is tropical with an average temperature of 79°F (26°C) and heavy rains in the south-western forest areas. The national language is Sangho, but French is the official language. Many of the population hold animist beliefs, but nearly half are Christians. The flag consists of horizontal bands of blue, white, green and yellow, divided vertically by a red band, with a yellow star in the top left-hand corner. The capital is Bangui.

Recent History

Formerly the territory of Oubangui Chari within French Equatorial Africa, the Republic took its present name when it achieved self-government in 1958. Full independence was attained in 1960. The leading figure in the campaign for self-government and the first President, Bartholémy Boganda, was killed in an air accident in 1959 and was succeeded by Dr. Abel Gombi, then by David Dacko who was overthrown by a military coup d'état at the end of 1965. At the beginning of January 1966 Colonel Bokassa formed a new government, rescinded the Constitution and dissolved the National Assembly. Relations between the C.A.R. and Congo (Kinshasa) and Chad were normalized during 1969 after tension had arisen over the C.A.R.'s withdrawal from the UEAC to rejoin the UDEAC. The C.A.R. is also a member of the United Nations, the French Community, and an associate member of the European Economic Community.

Government

The Constitution was abrogated in January 1966 and a new one is to be drawn up. Meanwhile the President has full competence to act in all affairs of state.

Defence

A small National Army was formed in 1961. Military service is compulsory for adult males.

Economic Affairs

The economy is predominantly agricultural, the most important cash crops being cotton and coffee. Diamonds account for over half the country's export earnings and uranium mining is becoming increasingly significant. Bangui has been the headquarters of the UDEAC since 1966.

Transport and Communications

The C.A.R. is 900 miles from the sea but roads (5,000 km. of national roads, 4,000 km. of regional roads and 10,000 km. of rural roads) radiate east, north and west to Sudan, Chad and Cameroon respectively. There are however no railways and the chief artery of transport is the Oubangui river which flows into the Congo and thereby provides an outlet from Bangui to Brazzaville and thence by rail to the port of Pointe Noire. There are steamer services and much freight traffic from Bangui to Brazzaville. Numerous airfields are in use and four airlines provide internal and international services. The international airport is at Mpoko, near Bangui. Feasibility studies are in progress on the possibility of connecting Bangui, by road or rail, to the trans-Cameroon line to Douala. Under an agreement signed in December 1971, a railway is to be built across the Sudanese-C.A.R. border, assisting the development of the copper industry in both states.

Social Welfare

An Employment Code guarantees a minimum wage for 60,000 employees and provides for employment accident benefits. There are 36 prefectorial hospitals, 36 maternity hospitals, 108 welfare centres and 200 first aid centres.

Education

Schools are divided into primary, secondary and technical categories. A university was founded at Bangui in 1970, and 650 students are already pursuing courses of higher education abroad, 250 of them in France.

Tourism

The main tourist attractions are the waterfalls, the forests and many varieties of wild animals. There is excellent hunting and also opportunities for fishing.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (May Day), May 11 (Ascension), May 22 (Whit Monday), August 13 (Independence Day), August 15 (Assumption), November 1 (All Saints'), December 1 (National Day), December 25 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year), March 29 (Death of Boganda), April 20-23 (Easter).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is officially in force.

Currency and Exchange Rate

There is a common currency with the Congo (Brazzaville), Gabon and Chad. The currency unit is the Franc of the African Financial Community (Franc CFA).

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 25, 50 Francs CFA.

Notes: 5, 10, 25, 50, 100, 500, 1,000, 5,000, 10,000 Francs CFA.

254 Francs CFA = $1 U.S.

CEYLON

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Ceylon is an island 50 miles east of the southern tip of India. The climate is tropical, average temperature 80°F (26°C); the south-west around Colombo receives heavy monsoon rains. The official language, Sinhalese, is spoken by about 70 per cent of the people; Tamil and English are widely spoken. More than 60 per cent of the population are Buddhist, about 20 per cent are Tamil-speaking Hindu and there are important Christian (mostly Roman Catholic) and Muslim minorities. The flag is dark crimson with a yellow border, in each corner of which a Bo leaf is depicted; within the border are two vertical stripes of green and yellow and in the centre a yellow lion. The capital is Colombo.

Recent History

In 1948 Ceylon attained independence while remaining a member of the British Commonwealth. In 1959 Solomon Bandaranaike, the Prime Minister, was assassinated and in 1960 (after Governments led by Mr. Dahanayake and Mr. Senanayake) his widow took over the post until March 1965. In 1961 legislation to introduce Sinhalese as the only official language caused widespread civil disturbances, especially in the north, and in 1966 legislation was passed enabling Tamil to be used for official purposes in Tamil-speaking areas. A compromise has been reached over the long-standing issue of the Tamils in Ceylon, whereby the Indian government has agreed to accept for repatriation over half the persons of Indian origin in Ceylon, while the remainder will be accorded Ceylonese citizenship. Following a general election in May 1970 a left-wing coalition Government was formed in which the Sri Lanka Freedom Party predominates with Trotskyist and Communist support. Mrs. Bandaranaike resumed the Premiership.

Following an armed insurrection initiated by the Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (People's Liberation Front), a state of emergency was declared throughout Ceylon on March 16th 1971. In April 1972, some 19,000 supporters of the JVP were still in custody.

Government

Ceylon accepts Queen Elizabeth II as Queen of Ceylon and Head of the Commonwealth. Executive power is vested in the Cabinet whose Prime Minister is appointed by the Governor-General. Parliament is uni-cameral. The House of Representatives comprises 157 members, 151 of whom are elected by universal suffrage and 6 of whom are nominated. The country is divided into 21 administrative districts in charge of government agents appointed by the central government. Following Mrs. Bandaranaike's electoral victory in May 1970, it was announced that all links with the British Crown would be ended. Since September 1971, when the Senate was abolished, the House of Representatives has functioned as the sole legislative body. A new constitution is to be promulgated which will include the renaming of Ceylon as the Republic of Sri Lanka and the extension of the life of the present government by six years. Appeals to the Privy Council were abolished on August 10th 1971.

Defence

In 1947 Ceylon signed a mutual defence pact with the United Kingdom. This continues to operate. Ceylon is not a member of the South-East Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO).

Economic Affairs

About one-third of Ceylon's national income is derived from the cultivation, processing and export of tea, rubber and coconuts. Ceylon is the world's second largest producer of black tea. Most of the tea and rubber is cultivated on estates, while coconuts are predominantly a smallholders' crop. In December 1971, nine British-owned tea and rubber estates totalling 18,500 acres were nationalized with compensation. They are to be managed by the new State Plantations Corporation. Somewhat under half of the 52 per cent of the labour force officially classified in the agricultural sector are employed on estates. Domestic agriculture consists in the main of the cultivation of rice, the staple food, but imports of rice are still necessary. Under the Five Year Plan (1972-76), self-sufficiency in rice is expected to be achieved by 1976. The society of Ceylon is predominantly rural, with only about 15 per cent of the population living in towns, and a rapidly expanding population, concentrated in the south and south-west, has created heavy pressure on the densely populated zones.

The only commercially important mineral is graphite, although there are also deposits of iron ore, monazite, ilmenite sands, limestone, clay and kaolin. In the absence of coal and oil, Ceylon is developing her water resources and the Maskeli Oya and Samanlawewa projects are expected to produce sufficient power to meet immediate domestic requirements. Manufacturing and handicraft industries at present primarily supply the domestic market, and the three traditional primary products continue to account for over 90 per cent of total exports. The United Kingdom is Ceylon's principal trading partner, followed by the People's Republic of China, with which Ceylon has concluded a rice-rubber barter agreement.

The government sector extends over many branches of economic activity. There are fifteen state-sponsored industrial corporations, and insurance, some transport facilities and oil distribution have been nationalized.

Transport and Communication

Much of Ceylon is hilly and thickly wooded, difficult of access by road and rail. The railways are state-owned with more than 1,000 miles of track. The state also runs a national omnibus service. Air Ceylon connects the main towns of the north and east to Colombo, and there are international services. The port of Colombo is one of the most important in the East.

Social Welfare

There is an island network of hospitals, clinics and dispensaries where treatment is free. An institute for training and research in community development was set up in 1966. Rice, the staple food, is subsidized by the state.

Education

Education is compulsory and free between the ages of five and fourteen. Enrolment in 1970 at elementary stage represents 89 per cent of children between 5 and 11 and 33 per cent of those of secondary school age (12 to 17). There are four universities (two secular, two Buddhist) and many technical colleges.

Tourism

As a stopping place for luxury cruises and by virtue of the spectacle of its Buddhist festivals, ancient monuments and natural scenery, Ceylon is one of Asia's most important tourist centres. Good motor roads connect Colombo to the main places of interest.

In 1971 an estimated 40,000 visitors came to Ceylon.

Visas are not required to visit Ceylon by nationals of Australia, Austria, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, German Federal Republic, Ireland, Italy, Malaysia, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Singapore, Sweden, Switzerland, U.S.A.

Sport

Football and cricket are the most popular games.

Public Holidays

Note: On August 8th 1971, Ceylon reverted to the international calendar from the former Buddhist calendar. 1972: June 4, July 25, August 24, September 22, November 20, December 20.

The following holidays have also been declared (1972): September 26 (Bandaranaike Day), November 4 (Deepavali Festival Day), November 8 (Idul-Fitr—Ramazan Festival), December 25 (Christmas Day).

Weights and Measures

Imperial weights and measures are in standard use.

Currency and Exchange Rate

The currency unit is the Ceylon Rupee of 100 cents.

Coins: $\frac{1}{2}$, 1, 2, 5, 10, 25, 50 cents.

Notes: 1, 2, 5, 10, 50, 100 rupees.

Official exchange rate: 15.57 rupees = £1 sterling.

5.99 rupees = U.S. $1.

The rupee floats against the dollar and other currencies.

THE CONSTITUTION

The laws which embody the Constitution of Ceylon are contained in the Ceylon Independence Act of 1947 and in a number of Orders-in-Council. Amendments to the Constitution require a majority vote by two-thirds of the total membership of the House of Representatives.

PARLIAMENT*

The Ceylon Parliament consists of the House of Representatives. The House of Representatives has 157 members, of whom 151 are elected and 6 nominated. The island is divided into 145 electoral districts, which have been so arranged as to make possible the representation of minorities united by race, religion or other strong ties; but if after a general election the Governor is of the opinion that any important group or interest is inadequately represented, he may appoint up to 6 members of the House. The normal life of the House is 5 years and there is universal adult suffrage. The age limit for elections has been extended to over 18 years.

The Parliament has the power and the duty to legislate for the peace, order and good government of the island. Importance is attached to the need to make it constitutionally impossible for any one community or religious group to be favoured or neglected, or for Parliament to interfere with the constitution of any religious body without its consent, and specific legislation has been passed to this end.

Note: A new constitution is to be promulgated which will declare Ceylon a free sovereign and independent republic, "the Republic of Sri Lanka".

* The Senate was abolished on September 27th, 1971.

THE CABINET

The Cabinet is collectively responsible to Parliament. The Prime Minister, who must be the leader of the largest Party or Group in the House of Representatives, is appointed by the Governor-General, who then appoints the other Ministers on the Prime Minister's advice.

REVISION OF THE CONSTITUTION

In January, 1958, a select committee of the two Houses of Parliament was appointed to consider the revision of the Constitution. In January, 1959, its report was issued. Among others the following recommendations were made:

1. The inclusion of Indian and Pakistani residents, who are Ceylon citizens, on the common electoral roll.
2. Equal numbers of citizens in the electoral districts of each province.
3. The restriction of multi-member electoral districts to secure representation of racial interests.

Legislation has already been passed implementing some of these recommendations.

LANGUAGE

Sinhala became the official language of administration by law on 1 January 1961, and the change was made complete on 1 January 1964. In January 1966 Tamil was introduced as the alternative official language in the northern and eastern provinces.

DISTRICT COURTS

There are twenty-eight District Courts in Ceylon. They have unlimited original civil jurisdiction and criminal jurisdiction in respect of all offences which are not within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. In the exercise of their criminal jurisdiction, District Courts try only cases committed to them for trial by Magistrates' Courts.

MAGISTRATE'S COURTS

There are thirty-four Magistrates' Courts in Ceylon. A Magistrates' Court may not pass a sentence heavier than the following, except where an Ordinance has specially empowered it to do so:

- (a) Imprisonment up to six months.
- (b) Fine up to Rs.100.
- (c) Whipping if the offender is under 16 years.

COURTS OF REQUESTS AND RURAL COURTS

There are thirty Courts of Requests in the island, and they have original civil jurisdiction in all actions in which the debt, damage or demand, or the value of land in dispute, does not exceed a stipulated amount. The courts, with the exception of the Colombo Court, are presided over by a District Judge or a Magistrate, who acts as Commissioner of Requests in addition to his duties as a District Judge or Magistrate. The Colombo Court is presided over by a separate Commissioner. There are forty-five Rural Courts in Ceylon.

RELIGION

BUDDHISM

Seventy-five per cent of the population are Theravada Buddhist. Buddhism was introduced into Ceylon in the third century B.C. by Prince Mahinda, son of the Indian King Asoka. There are 12,000 Buddhist Bhikkhus (monks), living in 6,000 temples on the island. They are educated in Pirivenas (temple schools), numbering 150. Two Pirivenas founded 85 years ago were raised to university status by Act of Parliament in 1959, in order to provide higher education for both Bhikkhus and laymen in the medium of the Sinhala language.

Ceylon Regional Centre of the World Fellowship of Buddhists: 6 Paget Road, Colombo 5; Sec. W. P. DALUWATTA.

Buddhist Congress: Pres. HENRY AMARASURIYA.

HINDUISM

The Tamil population of Ceylon, including those long settled in the island as well as the immigrants from India, are Hindus. The Hindu population numbers over two million.

ISLAM

The majority of the Muslims in Ceylon are styled Moors or Moormen, and claim descent either from Arab immigrants or the Indian traders from the mainland who settled in the island. The rest are Malays, mostly descended from soldiers and labourers from Java and Sumatra introduced into the island by the Dutch. There are a few Afghans and other Muslim settlers. Arab merchants dominated trade in the island until the appearance of the Portuguese in the sixteenth century. The total Muslim population is over 600,000.

CHAD

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Chad is a landlocked state in north central Africa, stretching south from Libya and the Tropic of Cancer to the Central African Republic, Niger and Cameroon to the west and the Sudan to the east. The climate is hot, arid in the desert north and very wet (annual rainfall 196 inches) in the south. The official language is French, but Arabic and various African languages are widely spoken. About half the population are Muslims living in the north; most others follow animistic beliefs. There are a few Christians. The flag consists of vertical blue, yellow and red stripes. The capital is Fort-Lamy.

Recent History

Formerly a province of French Equatorial Africa, Chad became independent in 1960. In 1962 a new Constitution providing for a President as Head of State was adopted. Chad is a member of the French Community, UDEAC and OCAM. Civil disturbances began in 1963 with riots in Fort-Lamy and a full-scale rebellion broke out in 1965, concentrated mainly in the Borkou, Ennedi and Tibesti regions of the north, where the nomadic Tuareg-Berbers have been traditionally opposed to their black, southern compatriots, but also later spreading to the borders with Cameroon and Central African Republic. The National Liberation Front (FROLINAT) has assumed leadership of the rebellion. Until 1971 the Chad Government was heavily dependent on French military forces, but their numbers have been reduced as the security situation has improved. At one point there were over 2,500 soldiers or advisers from France assisting the Chad Government; by the end of 1972, there should be 1,100.

Some rebel leaders in the centre and east of the country were reconciled to the Government in January 1971, and in April and May many political prisoners were released. In a major cabinet reshuffle in May several former detainees were brought into the Government, half of whose members were then, for the first time, Muslims. However, FROLINAT pledged itself to continue to fight for the overthrow of the present Government.

On August 27th it was reported that there had been an attempted coup d'état in Fort Lamy in which both Libya and FROLINAT were alleged to have been implicated. Diplomatic relations were broken off with Libya, who later formally recognized FROLINAT and opened an office for it in Tripoli. Niger's attempts at reconciliation between Chad and Libya have so far failed.

Government

Executive power lies with the President assisted by a Council of Ministers. Legislation is carried out by the Legislative Assembly, elected by universal direct suffrage for a five-year term. Chad has officially been a one-party state since 1965. The country is divided for administrative purposes into 14 Prefectures.

Defence

Chad's army numbers about 2,600 men. There are also some 4,000 men in the National Guard and other paramilitary forces. In addition there are 600 French Officers (to be reduced to 500 by the end of 1972) and 600 other French soldiers assisting the Chad military forces.

Economic Affairs

The economy is agricultural, 96 per cent of the population working on the land or moving about the desert. The chief product is cotton, which forms 80 per cent of exports. Cattle, sheep and camels are raised. There is fishing in Lake Chad and the Chari and Logone rivers. The minerals exploited are natron and tungsten; in 1969 the American Conoco company was awarded extensive oil exploration concessions. The little foreign trade is mostly with the Franc Zone. The state depends on substantial French budgetary and other aid.

Transport and Communications

There are no railways in Chad but an extension of the Trans-Cameroon railway into Chad is planned, thus connecting N'Gaoundéré in Cameroon with Moundou, and eventually Fort Archambault, in Chad. The river Chari is navigable from Fort-Lamy near to Lake Chad to Fort Archambault in the far south. There are six aerodromes.

Social Welfare

An Employment Code guarantees a minimum wage and other rights for employees. Medical institutions in 1966 comprised 5 hospitals, 38 medical centres, and over a hundred infirmaries and dispensaries.

Education

Schools are divided into primary, secondary and technical categories. In 1967 there were 180,000 children at school, representing 30 per cent of children of school age.

Tourism

Chad provides a variety of scenery from the dense forests of the south to the deserts of the north. Wild animals abound, especially in the two national parks and five game reserves; there is excellent hunting, mainly around Fort Archambault.

Visas are not required to visit Chad by nationals of the following countries: Andorra, Central African Republic, Congo (Brazzaville), Dahomey, Federal Republic of Germany, France, Gabon, Guinea, Ivory Coast, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Monaco, Niger, Rwanda, Senegal, Togo, Upper Volta and Zaïre.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), April 26 (Birth of the Prophet), July 14, August 11 (Independence Day), September 8 (Ascension of the Prophet), November 28 (Proclamation of the Republic), November 8 (Id ul Fitr), December 25 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year), January 11 (National Holiday), January 16 (Id ul Adha), February 6 (Muslim New Year).

CHILE

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Chile is a long, narrow country stretching for 4,480 km. along the Pacific coast of South America from Peru and Bolivia in the north to Cape Horn in the far south. It is separated from Argentina to the east by the high Andes mountains. Both the mountains and the cold Humboldt Current influence the climate; between Arica in the north and Punta Arenas in the extreme south, some 4,000 km., the average maximum temperature varies by no more than 13°C. The central region enjoys a temperate climate, average temperature ranging from 3°C in winter and 29°C in summer. Annual rainfall ranges from 0.04 inches in the northern desert to 105 inches in the south. The language is Spanish. There is no state religion but Roman Catholics represent over 85 per cent of the population. The flag is divided horizontally, the lower half red, the upper half having a white star on a blue square left, the remainder being white. The capital is Santiago.

Recent History

Despite economic difficulties, Chile has enjoyed comparative political stability since 1920, and it is now one of the few Latin American states not under military control. Chile is a founder member of the United Nations and a member of the Organization of American States, of the Alliance for Progress and the Latin American Free Trade Association. In 1964 Sr. Eduardo Frei, the Christian Democrat candidate, was elected President and his major work was the "Chileanization" of the U.S.-owned copper mines and the implementation of agrarian reform. In general elections held in March 1969 the Christian Democrats were returned with a majority of 31.6 per cent, the right-wing Partido Nacional taking second place in the polls. In the elections of September 1970 the Marxist candidate of Unidad Popular, a coalition of five left-wing parties including the Communist party, Dr. Salvador Allende, was elected President by a narrow majority. Dr. Allende promised to transform Chilean society by constitutional means and amongst measures designed to bring about "social emancipation" were the nationalization of private banks, the nationalization of the nitrates and copper industries, the intensification of agrarian reforms to give land to the peasants and the extension of government control over foreign trade. Public opinion approved the nationalization of the copper industry but this measure has brought the government into conflict with the American government over the question of compensation for the three main companies concerned. The visit of Dr. Fidel Castro in November 1971 polarized Chilean politics and after demonstrations for and against the government a state of emergency was declared in Santiago as the visit was ending. It is the government's intention to give Chile a unicameral legislature as its reform programme is imperilled by its minority position in Congress. Accusations that the Minister of the Interior was acting unconstitutionally led to a cabinet crisis at the end of 1971 and public disquiet over cost of living increases and food shortages contributed to the government's defeat in two Congressional by-elections in January of 1972. Chile is a member of LAFTA and the Andean Development Corporation.

Government

Executive power is vested in the President, who is elected by popular vote for six years. The legislative organ is the National Congress, consisting of a Senate of 45 members and a Chamber of Deputies of 147 members. All citizens of eighteen or over are eligible to vote. Late in 1969 the Congress approved a reform granting greater independence to the President.

Defence

Military service is compulsory at 19 years of age, but exemption is frequently obtained. The Army has a strength of 38,000, the Air Force 8,000 and the Navy 14,000. A Military Assistance Pact with the U.S.A. was signed in 1952.

Economic Affairs

Chile is the world's fourth largest producer and second largest exporter of copper. Copper sales account for eighty per cent of the country's foreign exchange earnings. Copper and nitrate deposits are mainly concentrated in the arid north of the country, while further south there are important deposits of gold, silver, coal and iron-ore. Oil production is concentrated in Magallanes in the extreme south and provides about half of the national requirement. One third of the population live on the land, particularly in the fertile central region. Chile has great agricultural potential and produces some of the finest wines in the world, but inefficient utilization of land resources has made it necessary for thirty per cent of the nation's food to be imported. Recent agrarian reforms, involving the distribution of land to the peasants, have led to a further fall in home food production. During 1971 state control was extended to banking, including foreign banks, the textile industry, coal and iron mining and the cement industry. The nationalization programme has caused relations to become strained with the American government as Chile claims that the three largest American companies owe her $388 million for excess profit and lack of investment. The government's $8,000 million six-year development programme to encourage new industry and improve housing, education and health services is to draw ninety per cent of its finance from the nationalized copper industry. However the fall in world copper prices and the disappearance of Chile's former favourable trade balance has forced the government to call on its sixteen creditor countries to reschedule approximately $1,300 million falling due for repayment between 1970 and 1974, and could jeopardize the development plan.

Transport and Communications

The length of railway track is over 5,000 miles, of which some 4,250 are state-owned. There are 70,549 km. of roads of which eleven per cent are paved. There are 1,350 miles of navigable rivers. The chief ports are Valparaiso, Talcahuano, Antofagasta, San Antonio and Punta Arenas; a new port is planned at San Vicente, Concepción. Air transport is provided by the state airline Línea Aerea

CHILE—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY)

Nacional, Ladeco and several foreign airlines, and a new international airport is in service at Pudahuel outside Santiago. Plans are going ahead to extend the provincial airport network.

Social Welfare

Employees, including agricultural workers, receive benefits for sickness, unemployment and retirement and there are dependents' allowances. Between 1964 and 1967 the number of trade unions in Chile rose from 1,900 to 3,600. There is a National Health Service which was established in 1952. In 1968, the Curative Medicine Law was passed for the benefit of over 600,000 middle class families previously ineligible for medical care or low-cost hospitalization. As a result of this law, many of the smaller state and private welfare services are now disappearing. A law on accidents at work and occupational diseases was also passed, affording protection for every worker in Chile.

Education

Education is free and compulsory between the ages of six and fourteen. Over 90 per cent of the population are literate (95 per cent in the towns). Much has been done recently to improve and extend education; 1969 constituted the second year of the present Government's educational reform. The duration of primary school education has been extended from six to eight years, new academic and technical syllabuses have been drawn up for the secondary school course, a period of four years, and for the first time in Chile community centres for adult education have been introduced. In 1968 the educational budget was 1,555 million escudos, and the illiteracy rate for 1970 is estimated to have dropped from 16.4 per cent to 10 per cent. There are eight universities with over 60,000 students.

Tourism

The long Andes range of mountains is the chief attraction to tourists. There are good beaches and many lakes, the largest of which is Llanquihue.

Visas are not required to visit Chile for a period of up to 90 days. This applies to all nationalities.

Sport

The State plays an important part in the promotion and development of national sports, and has established hundreds of sports centres throughout the country. Football is the most popular sport. The World Cup competition was held in Chile in 1962, the Chilean eleven reaching the semi-final. Skiing and fishing are extremely popular. The international world ski championships were held in Portillo in 1966.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), May 21 (Navy Day), September 18 (Independence Day), September 19 (Army Day), October 12 (Discovery of America), November 1 (All Saints' Day), December 25 (Christmas Day).

1973: January 1 (New Years' Day), March 20 (Good Friday).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is officially in force.

Currency and Exchange Rate

The currency unit is the escudo of 100 centésimos and 1,000 psos. There have been frequent devaluations in recent years.

Coins: 2, 5, 10 centésimos.

Notes: 50, 100 pesos; $\frac{1}{2}$, 1, 5, 10, 50, 100 escudo.

Exchange rates: On December 6th 1971 the Banco Central introduced a four-tier exchange rate (see finance section below).

THE CONSTITUTION

THE CONSTITUTION of 1925, somewhat amended, remains in force today. It provides for a unitary state and a republican form of government; a bi-cameral legislature and executive power vested in the President, who is elected by direct popular vote. If the presidential candidate with the largest number of votes has not obtained more than half the votes cast—as happened in 1952 and 1958—Congress decides which of the two candidates with the highest number shall be President. The President is ineligible, on retirement, for immediate re-election.

He has wide powers of appointment and dismissal of Cabinet Ministers and some political officials. He is responsible for the maintenance of order and may, in the event of disturbance, declare a state of siege if Congress is not in session. He is also responsible for the conduct of foreign policy.

The President enjoys a modified veto on bills submitted by Congress, his rejections or amendments being overruled if a two-thirds majority of both Chambers so votes. Legislation may be initiated by the Chambers or by the President, who is empowered to issue the decrees he may deem necessary for the execution of the laws. Members of his Cabinet, who cannot be members of Parliament, may attend sessions of Congress and speak, but may not vote.

Congress, whose ordinary sessions last from May 21st to September 18th, and whose extraordinary sessions last the rest of the year, consists of a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies. The former has 50 members, elected for eight years by ten provincial groups of departments, each group electing five Senators. One-half the Senate is renewable every four years. The Chamber of Deputies has 150 members, elected for four years by departments or groups of departments on the basis of proportional representation.

All voting is by ballot. All citizens over the age of 18 are entitled to vote.

The Republic is divided into 25 Provinces (Aconcagua, Antofagasta, Arauco, Atacama, Aysén, Bío Bío, Cautín, Chiloé, Colchagua, Concepción, Coquimbo, Curicó, Linares, Llanquihue, Magallanes, Malleco, Maule, Ñuble, O'Higgins, Osorno, Santiago, Talca, Tarapacá, Valdivia, Valparaíso).

THE PRESS

Although freedom of the press is assured, use has been made by the Government of the law passed in 1958 on the Internal Security of the State which grants power to "suspend for twenty-four hours the sending, repetition, transportation, delivery or transmission of printed matter, documents, newspapers, etc." which is judged to constitute a transgression of the law. These measures are, however, exceptional.

As a quarter of the inhabitants of Chile live in Santiago and Valparaíso, the circulation of provincial papers is not large, some appearing only on alternate days or once and twice a week. A list of some newspapers in the larger towns is given below.

Ministerio de Obras Públicas: Dirección de Vialidad, Morandé 59-3° piso, Santiago; the authority responsible for roads; the total length of roads in Chile in 1968, excluding unimproved roads, was 70,549 km., of which 11 per cent were paved. The road system comprises the Pan American or Longitudinal Highway extending 3,500 km. from north to south, completely paved, and about 50,000 km. of transversal roads. Since 1961 the World Bank and the IADB have together granted over $40 million to improve the main road system. International highways are under construction to Salta, Mendoza, San Juan and Bariloche in Argentina. A 4-lane highway from Santiago to Rancagua is completed, and another is being constructed from Padre Hurtado to San Antonio. Other important projects are the building of the Lo Prado tunnel and the bridges over the Maipo and Bio-Bio rivers.

PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The People's Republic of China covers a vast area of Eastern Asia with Mongolia to the north, the Soviet Union to the north and west, Pakistan to the west and India, Nepal and South-East Asia to the south. The climate ranges from sub-tropical in the far south to an annual average temperature of below 50°F (10°C) in the north and from the monsoon climate of East China to the aridity of the north-west. The language is Chinese (Mandarin); in the south and south-east local dialects are spoken. The Tibetans, Uighurs, Mongols and other groups have their own languages. The traditional religions and philosophies of life are Confucianism, Buddhism and Taoism. Muslims number about 10 million and in 1949 there were between three and four million Christians. The flag is plain red with one large and four small gold stars in the top left-hand corner. The capital is Peking.

Recent History

The Allied defeat of Japan in 1945 was followed by civil war in China until 1949 when the Communists under Mao Tse-tung became masters of the country. Between 1949 and 1959 a close relationship was maintained with the Soviet Union but subsequently relations have become embittered. Chinese forces participated on the North Korean side in the Korean War of 1950-52. The People's Republic is not a member of the United Nations and is not recognized by the United States. It claims sovereignty over Taiwan (Formosa) now governed by General Chiang Kai-shek, the pre-1949 ruler of China. Late in 1962 Chinese troops were engaged in a short frontier war with India in disputed Himalayan territory in Ladakh and to the north of the Indian province of Assam. Early in 1964 France recognized the People's Republic, which since the breach with the U.S.S.R. has attempted to diversify its foreign associations. China exploded her first nuclear device late in 1964 and by the end of 1968 had successfully completed eight nuclear tests. In November 1965 Chairman Mao Tse-tung launched the "Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution". The motivation and aims of this movement remain obscure, but it proved a prolonged campaign of rectification, bringing about widespread changes in Party and State organs and personnel. Many individuals were publicly criticized, including the Head of State, Liu Shao-chi, who was dismissed from all Party and State posts in October 1968. In April 1969 the long-awaited Ninth Congress of the Chinese Communist Party took place. The personnel changes of the Cultural Revolution were confirmed and Lin Piao was officially designated Mao's heir.

However the death of certain Chinese leaders in an air crash over Mongolia on September 17th 1971 seemed to indicate that a power struggle had taken place which appeared to be confirmed when Lin Piao, Huang Yung-sheng, Chief of Staff of the People's Liberation Army (P.L.A.), Wu Fu-hsien, Chief of the Air Force and the Political Commissar of the Navy, Li Tso-peng ceased to make any public appearances. No further references were made to Lin Piao after October 8th and the traditional parades held to mark National Day (October 1), were cancelled allegedly for "reasons of economy".

In April 1970, China's first earth satellite was launched successfully. Diplomatic relations were established with a further fifteen states in 1971 bringing to nearly seventy the number of states which have recognized China. Moreover on October 26th, the People's Republic was finally admitted to the UN Security Council as one of the five permanent members by a substantial majority. Foreign Minister Marshal Chen Yi died in January 1972, and was succeeded by Chi-Peng-fei.

President Nixon visited Peking in late February 1972 where he had talks with Mao Tse-tung, Chou En-lai and other Chinese leaders.

Government

China is a unitary state. Directly under the Central Government there are 21 provinces, five autonomous regions (including Tibet) and three municipalities (Peking, Shanghai, Tientsin). The Constitution provides for a National People's Congress, with over 3,000 deputies elected every four years by universal suffrage, with the State Council as its executive organ. Local authorities under the provinces include special districts, counties (hsien) and rural districts (hsiang). The constitution lays down that each local authority is to have an elected people's congress. The Communist Party, under the chairmanship of Mao Tse-tung, is the controlling authority in the country. In 1961 its membership was said to be 17 million. The Party's directing body is the Politburo.

Since November 1965 many new organs have been established within the party, the Army, and the Administration to promote the revolution; these organs overlap and partially replace the systems described above. By September 1968, Revolutionary Committees (alliances of elements of the Army, the Communist Party, and the revolutionary masses) had been established to take over the administration of each of the 29 provinces, autonomous regions and special municipalities. By the end of 1971 provincial party committees set up in the wake of the Cultural Revolution had been established in all major administrative regions.

Defence

The People's Liberation Army, which triumphed over the Nationalist forces in 1949, was re-modelled under Soviet guidance during the Korean War, but has subsequently reverted to the earlier system, without formal ranks and insignia. It is now said to consist of around 2½ million men. China is divided into 13 military regions which are in turn subdivided into 23 military districts. An air force and navy were formed at the same period. Selective conscription is in force for a minimum of four years' enlistment.

Economic Affairs

Agriculture is China's main industry and agricultural produce the largest single contributor to the export trade. Approximately two-fifths of total output derives from the agricultural sector, which employs over two-thirds of the working population. Mainly arable crops are grown: rice principally south of the Yangtze, and wheat and millet mainly north of that river. Substantial quantities of wheat are imported from Australia, Canada and South America. The Communist regime aims at achieving self-sufficiency through the internal development of China's natural resources and domestic industries based on this wealth. (For official figures for mining and industry, see Statistical Survey, p.737). There are large deposits of iron ore, which support the iron and steel industry at Anshan, Shanghai, Paotow and Wuhan. Other important minerals are tin, molybdenum, tungsten and antimony. The traditional location of industry, in the north-east, north and east (particularly Shanghai and Tientsin), remains the major centre but industrial development has been dispersed throughout the country.

The development of the economy since 1949 has been within the framework of three five-year plans to build a socialist economy and to industrialize the country. Ownership of farm lands was transferred to the peasants at an early stage, and from 1955 to 1958 collectives were established over the whole country. The gradual take-over by the state of industry and commerce was speeded up after 1955. During the "Great Leap Forward" of 1958 (a campaign to mobilize fully for economic development the vast population) rural and urban communes were set up as administrative units but the system of producers' collectives was re-introduced during the "three bitter years" between 1959 and 1961, caused by bad harvests, the withdrawal of Soviet aid and internal disorder. Industry was allocated the major share of investment under the first two plans but the development of agriculture was later given prominence. Progress since 1959 is uncertain: few statistics have been issued since then, and the extent of the disruption caused by the "Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution" is not yet known.

Transport and Communications

In 1958 railways were responsible for nearly 80 per cent of the freight turnover by modern means of transport; the total length of railway lines exceeded 31,000 km. In the same year, 40,000 km. of inland waterways were navigable by steamships and civil air routes totalled 33,000 km. Coastal shipping is also important. Since 1964 a number of foreign airlines have been permitted to set up regular services to Peking, Canton and Shanghai. Six Trident 2E aircraft were added to China's growing fleet of aircraft in August 1971.

Since 1949 an ambitious programme of railway construction has been undertaken, especially in the west and north-west. Roads are unevenly developed, but by 1966 were estimated to total about 550,000 km.

Social Welfare

Western and traditional Chinese medical attention is available in the cities, and to a lesser degree in rural areas. Since the Cultural Revolution, some 330,000 medical workers have settled in the countryside and an additional 400,000 doctors and nurses have been recruited into mobile teams to tour the villages according to the New China News Agency. About 1 million "barefoot doctors" or semi-professional peasant physicians assist with simple cures and treatment. Large factories and other enterprises provide social services for their employees. Wage-earners qualify for pensions.

Education

A great expansion has occurred since 1949 in numbers receiving education at all levels, and education is almost universal. Primary schooling covers five years and middle school six years. In 1959 it was claimed that 37 per cent of the adult population was literate. Following the closing of many schools and universities during the Cultural Revolution, PLA-worker teams took over their administration, entrance examinations were abolished and selection for admission was based on political assessment. By 1971 many colleges and universities had re-opened but initial enrolment is reportedly low.

Tourism

Tourism is still of limited extent. Tours are organized for party groups visiting China and the ordinary tourist still requires a visa. Western-style hotels exist in Peking, Shanghai, Canton and other large centres.

Sport

Football and basketball are popular in schools and other institutions. Athletics and swimming are encouraged. Chinese table-tennis players are among the world's best.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), August 1 (Army Day), October 1 (National Day).

1973: February 3-6 (Lunar New Year).

Weights and Measures

1 catty (jin) = 0.5 kg. or 1.1023 lb.

1 picul (dan) = 0.05 metric ton or 0.0492 long ton

1 mou = 0.0667 hectare or 0.1647 acre.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The principal unit of currency is the yuan, which is divided into a hundred cents.

Notes: 1, 2, 5, and 10 yuan.

Exchange rate: 5.9 yuan = £1 sterling

2.45 yuan = $1 U.S.

1.67 yuan = 1 Soviet rouble.

THE CONSTITUTION

This Constitution was adopted on 20 September 1954 by the First National People's Congress of the People's Republic of China at its first session.

The preamble speaks of the Chinese people's great victory when, in 1949, the People's Republic of China was founded. This new people's democracy is in a state of transition to socialism; the needs of this phase are reflected in the Constitution. The people's democratic united front, led by the Communist Party of China, is directing the transformation of society. China's different nationalities will become more closely united; their varying needs will, however, be respected. The indestructible friendship of China with the U.S.S.R. and the People's Democracies will be strengthened, and the policy of establishing and extending diplomatic relations with all countries on the principle of equality, mutual benefit and respect for each other's sovereignty and territorial integrity continued, with the aim of furthering the cause of world peace and the progress of humanity.

Chapter I. General Principles

Article 1—The People's Republic of China is a people's democratic state led by the working class and based on the alliance of workers and peasants.

Article 2—All power in the People's Republic of China belongs to the people, who exercise their power through the National People's Congress and the local people's congresses.

These and all other organs of state practise democratic centralism.

Article 3—The People's Republic of China is a unified, multi-national state.

All the nationalities are equal, and have freedom to use their own languages, and to practise their own customs.

Discrimination against, or oppression of, any nationality, and acts which undermine the unity of the nationalities are prohibited.

Regional autonomy applies in areas entirely or largely inhabited by national minorities. National autonomous areas are inalienable parts of the People's Republic of China.

Article 4—The People's Republic of China, by relying on the organs of state and the social forces, and by means of socialist industrialization and socialist transformation, ensures the gradual abolition of systems of exploitation and the building of a socialist society.

Article 5—The ownership of the means of production today mainly takes the following forms: state ownership, co-operative ownership, ownership by individual working people, and capitalist ownership.

Article 6—State-owned economy is owned by the whole people; it is the leading force in the national economy and the material basis on which the state carries out socialist transformation. The state ensures priority for its development.

All mineral resources and waters, as well as forests, undeveloped land and other resources which the state owns by law, are the property of the whole people.

Article 7—Co-operative economy is either socialist economy collectively owned by the working masses, or semi-socialist economy in part collectively owned by the working masses. Such partial collective ownership is a transitional form by means of which individual peasants, handicraftsmen and other individual working people organize themselves in their advance towards collective ownership by the working masses.

The state protects the property of the co-operatives, and guides their development. It regards producers' co-operatives as the chief means for the transformation of individual farming and individual handicrafts.

Article 8—The state protects peasant ownership of land and other means of production according to law.

The state encourages individual peasants to increase production and to organize producers', supply and marketing, and credit co-operatives voluntarily.

The policy of the state towards rich-peasant economy is to restrict and gradually eliminate it.

Article 9—The state protects the ownership of the means of production by handicraftsmen and other non-agricultural individual working people, according to law, and encourages them to improve the management of their affairs and to organize producers', and supply and marketing co-operatives voluntarily.

Article 10—The state protects the ownership by capitalists of the means of production and other capital according to law.

The policy of the state towards capitalist industry and commerce is to use, restrict and transform them. The state makes use of the positive qualities of capitalist industry and commerce which are beneficial to national welfare and the people's livelihood, restricts their negative qualities and guides their transformation into various forms of state-capitalist economy, by means of control exercised by administrative organs of state, the leadership given by state-owned economy, and supervision by the workers.

The state forbids any kind of illegal activity by capitalists which endangers the public interest, disturbs the social-economic order, or undermines the economic plan of the state.

The state protects the right of citizens to ownership of lawful income, of savings, houses and the means of life (Article 11), and to inherit private property according to law (Article 12).

Article 13—The state may, in the public interest, buy, requisition or nationalize land and other means of production both in cities and countryside according to provisions of law.

Article 14—The state forbids any person to use his private property to the detriment of the public interest.

Article 15—By economic planning, the state directs the growth and transformation of the national economy to bring about the constant increase of productive forces, in this way enriching the material and cultural life of the people and consolidating the independence and security of the country.

Article 16—Work is a matter of honour for every citizen of the People's Republic of China who is able to work. The state encourages initiative and creative activity of citizens in their work.

Article 17—All organs of state must rely on the masses of the people, constantly maintain close contact with them, heed their opinions and accept their supervision.

Article 18—All persons working in organs of state must be loyal to the people's democratic system, observe the Constitution and the law and strive to serve the people.

Article 19—The People's Republic of China safeguards the people's democratic system, and punishes and suppresses all treasonable and counter-revolutionary activities.

The state deprives feudal landlords and bureaucrat-capitalists of political rights for a specific period of time according to law; at the same time it provides them with a way to live, in order to enable them to reform through work and become citizens who earn their livelihood by their own labour.

Article 20—The armed forces of the People's Republic of China belong to the people; their duty is to safeguard the gains of the people's revolution and of national construction, and to defend the sovereignty, territorial integrity and security of the country.

Chapter II. The State Structure

SECTION I. THE NATIONAL PEOPLE'S CONGRESS

The National People's Congress of the People's Republic of China is the highest organ of state power (Article 21), and the only organ exercising the legislative power of the state (Article 22).

Article 23—The National People's Congress is composed of deputies elected by provinces, autonomous regions, municipalities directly under the central authority, the armed forces and Chinese resident abroad.

The number of deputies to the National People's Congress, including those representing national minorities, and the manner of their election, are prescribed by electoral law.

Article 24—The National People's Congress is elected for a term of four years.

Two months before the term of office of the National People's Congress expires, its Standing Committee must carry to completion the election of deputies to the next National People's Congress. Should exceptional circumstances arise preventing such an election, the term of office of the sitting National People's Congress may be prolonged until the first session of the next National People's Congress.

Article 25—The National People's Congress meets once a year, convened by its Standing Committee. It may also be convened whenever its Standing Committee deems this necessary or one-fifth of the deputies so propose.

Article 26—When the National People's Congress meets, it elects a presidium to conduct its session.

Article 27—The National People's Congress exercises the following functions and powers:

- (1) to amend the Constitution;
- (2) to enact laws;
- (3) to supervise the enforcement of the Constitution;
- (4) to elect the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman of the People's Republic of China;
- (5) to decide on the choice of the Premier of the State Council upon recommendation by the Chairman of the People's Republic of China, and of the component members of the State Council upon recommendation by the Premier;
- (6) to decide on the choice of the Vice-Chairmen and members of the Council of National Defence upon recommendation by the Chairman of the People's Republic of China;
- (7) to elect the President of the Supreme People's Court;
- (8) to elect the Chief Procurator of the Supreme People's Procuratorate;
- (9) to decide on the national economic plan;
- (10) to examine and approve the state budget and the financial report;
- (11) to ratify the status and boundaries of provinces, autonomous regions, and municipalities directly under the central authority;
- (12) to decide on general amnesties;
- (13) to decide on questions of war and peace; and

(14) to exercise such other functions and powers as the National People's Congress considers necessary.

Article 28—The National People's Congress has power to remove from office:

- (1) the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman of the People's Republic of China;
- (2) the Premier and Vice-Premiers, Ministers, Heads of Commissions and the Secretary-General of the State Council;
- (3) the Vice-Chairmen and members of the Council of National Defence;
- (4) the President of the Supreme People's Court;
- (5) the Chief Procurator of the Supreme People's Procuratorate.

Article 29—Amendments to the Constitution require a two-thirds majority vote, and laws and other bills a majority vote, of all the deputies.

Article 30—The Standing Committee is the permanent body of the Congress. It is composed of the Chairman, the Vice-Chairmen, the Secretary-General and members, all elected by the Congress.

Article 31—The Standing Committee exercises the following functions and powers:

- (1) to conduct the election of deputies to the National People's Congress;
- (2) to convene the National People's Congress;
- (3) to interpret the laws;
- (4) to adopt decrees;
- (5) to supervise the work of the State Council, the Supreme People's Court and the Supreme People's Procuratorate;
- (6) to annul decisions and orders of the State Council where these contravene the Constitution, laws or decrees.
- (7) to revise or annul inappropriate decisions of organs of state power of provinces, autonomous regions, and municipalities directly under the central authority;
- (8) to decide on the appointment or removal of any Vice-Premier, Minister, Head of Commission or the Secretary-General of the State Council when the National People's Congress is not in session;
- (9) to appoint or remove the Vice-Presidents, judges, and members of the Judicial Committee of the Supreme People's Court;
- (10) to appoint or remove the Deputy Chief Procurators, procurators and members of the Procuratorial Committee of the Supreme People's Procuratorate;
- (11) to decide on the appointment or recall of plenipotentiary envoys to foreign states;
- (12) to decide on the ratification or abrogation of treaties concluded with foreign states;
- (13) to institute military, diplomatic and other special titles and ranks;
- (14) to institute and decide on the award of state orders, medals and titles of honour;
- (15) to decide on the granting of pardons;
- (16) to decide, when the National People's Congress is not in session, on the proclamation of a state of war in the event of armed attack against the state or in fulfilment of international treaty obligations concerning common defence against aggression;
- (17) to decide on general or partial mobilization;
- (18) to decide on the enforcement of martial law throughout the country or in certain areas; and
- (19) to exercise such other functions and powers as are vested in it by the National People's Congress.

Article 32—The Standing Committee exercises its functions and powers until the next National People's Congress elects a new Standing Committee.

Article 33—The Standing Committee is responsible to the National People's Congress and reports to it; the Congress has power to recall Committee members.

Article 34—The Congress establishes a Nationalities Committee, a Bills Committee, a Budget Committee, a Credentials Committee and other necessary committees.

The Nationalities and Bills Committees are under the direction of the Standing Committee when the Congress is not in session.

Article 35—Investigation committees may be constituted to enquire into specific questions when the Congress, or its Standing Committee if the Congress is not in session, deems it necessary.

All organs of state, people's organizations and citizens concerned are obliged to supply necessary information to these committees.

Article 36—Deputies to the National People's Congress have the right to address questions to the State Council, or to the Ministries and Commissions of the State Council, which are under obligation to answer.

Article 37—No deputy may be arrested or placed on trial without permission of the Congress or, when it is not in session, of its Standing Committee.

Article 38—Deputies are subject to the supervision of the units which elect them. These electoral units have power to replace at any time the deputies they elect, according to the procedure prescribed by law.

SECTION 2. THE CHAIRMAN OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

Article 39—The Chairman of the People's Republic of China is elected by the National People's Congress. Any citizen of the People's Republic of China who has the right to vote and stand for election and has reached the age of thirty-five is eligible for election as Chairman of the People's Republic of China.

The Chairman's term of office is four years.

Article 40—The Chairman, in accordance with decisions of the National People's Congress or its Standing Committee, promulgates laws and decrees; appoints or removes the Premier, Vice-Premiers, Ministers, Heads of Commissions, the Secretary-General of the State Council, and the Vice-Chairmen and members of the Council of National Defence; confers state orders, medals and titles of honour; proclaims general amnesties and grants pardons; proclaims martial law; proclaims a state of war; and orders mobilization.

Article 41—The Chairman represents the People's Republic of China in its relations with foreign states, receives foreign envoys and, in accordance with decisions of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, appoints or recalls plenipotentiary envoys to foreign states and ratifies treaties.

Article 42—The Chairman commands the armed forces of the country, and is Chairman of the Council of National Defence.

Article 43—The Chairman convenes a Supreme State Conference, in which the Vice-Chairman of the Republic, the Chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, the Premier of the State Council and other persons concerned take part, whenever necessary and acts as its chairman.

He submits its views to the National People's Congress, its Standing Committee, the State Council, or other bodies concerned for their consideration and decision.

Article 44—The Vice-Chairman of the People's Republic of China exercises such functions and powers of the Chairman as the Chairman may entrust to him.

The provisions governing the election and term of office of the Chairman of the Republic apply also to the Vice-Chairman (see Article 39).

Article 45—The Chairman and the Vice-Chairman of the Republic of China exercise their functions and powers until the new Chairman and Vice-Chairman elected by the next National People's Congress take office.

Article 46—Should the Chairman for reasons of health be unable to perform his duties over a long period, the Vice-Chairman exercises the functions and powers of Chairman on his behalf.

Should the office of Chairman fall vacant, the Vice-Chairman succeeds to it.

SECTION 3. THE STATE COUNCIL

Article 47—The State Council of the People's Republic of China, that is, the Central People's Government, is the executive of the highest organ of state power and the highest administrative organ of state.

Article 48—The State Council is composed of the Premier, the Vice-Premiers, the Ministers, the Heads of Commissions and the Secretary-General; its organisation is determined by law.

Article 49—The State Council exercises the following functions and powers:

(1) to formulate administrative measures, issue decisions and orders and verify their execution, in accordance with the Constitution, laws and decrees;

(2) to submit bills to the National People's Congress or its Standing Committee;

(3) to co-ordinate and lead the work of Ministries and Commissions;

(4) to co-ordinate and lead the work of local administrative organs of state throughout the country;

(5) to revise or annul inappropriate orders and directives of Ministers or of Heads of Commissions;

(6) to revise or annul inappropriate decisions and orders of local administrative organs of state;

(7) to put into effect the national economic plan and provisions of the state budget;

(8) to control foreign and domestic trade;

(9) to direct cultural, educational and public health work;

Chief Procurator: CHANG TING-CHENG elected by N.P.C. for four years.

Deputy Chief Procurators: HUANG HUO-HSING, CHANG SU.

Local People's Procuratorates: undertake the same duties at the local level. Ensure that the judicial activities of the people's courts, the execution of sentences in criminal cases, and the activities of departments in charge of reform through labour, conform to the law; institutes, or intervenes in, important civil cases which affect the interest of the State and the people.

RELIGION

Bureau of Religious Affairs: Peking; Dir. HSIAO HSIEN-FA.

ANCESTOR WORSHIP

Ancestor worship is believed to have originated with the deification and worship of all important natural phenomena. The divine and human were not clearly defined; all the dead became gods and were worshipped by their descendants. The practice has no code or dogma and the ritual is limited to sacrifices made during festivals and on birth and death anniversaries.

CONFUCIANISM

Confucianism is a philosophy and a system of ethics, without ritual or priesthood. The respects accorded Confucius are not paid to a prophet or god, but to a great sage whose teachings promote peace and good order in society and whose philosophy encourages moral living.

TAOISM

China Taoist Association: Peking; Chair. CH'EN YING-NING.

Taoism originated as a philosophy expounded by Lao Tse, born 604 B.C. The establishment of a religion was contrary to his doctrines, but seven centuries after his death his teachings were embodied into a ritual.

BUDDHISM

Chinese Buddhist Association: f. 1953; Pres. SHIROB-JALTSO; Sec.-Gen. CHAO P'U-CH'U.

Buddhism was introduced in China from India in A.D. 61, and now bears little resemblance to the religion in its original form, a number of native Chinese legends, traditions, rites and deities having been added. It is estimated that the present number of Buddhist temples in China is 50,000 with 500,000 monks and nuns.

ISLAM

China Islamic Association: Peking; f. 1953; Chair. BURHAN SHAHIDI.

According to Muslim history, Islam was introduced into China in A.D. 651. Its number of adherents in China is estimated at about 10 million, chiefly among the Uighur and Hui people.

CHRISTIANITY

During the 19th century and the first half of the 20th large numbers of foreign Christian missionaries worked in China. The Chinese People's Republic has steadily discouraged all foreign influences in Chinese religious affairs.

TRANSPORT AND TOURISM

RAILWAYS

Ministry of Communications: Peking; controls all railways through regional divisions. The railway network has been extended to all provinces and regions except Tibet, and totalled over 36,000 km. in 1965, in addition to special railways serving factories and mines. Recently-opened lines include those between Lanchow and Urumchi, Tankianghow and Wuhan and Kweiyang and Chiangkow; the Hwa-Foo railway (140 km.) through Anwei Province; a 50-km. line between An-loo and Wei-chia-tien in Hupeh; the Ping-Mei in Northern Kwangtung which will eventually connect with Kanchow in Kiangsi Province. A new road and railway bridge over the Yangtze River at Nanking was opened at the end of 1968.

ROADS

In 1964 there were some 200,000 km. of paved roads and 350,000 km. of unsurfaced roads.

INLAND WATERWAYS

General Inland Navigation Bureau: Controls river and canal traffic. There are 160,000 km. of inland waterways in China, 48,000 of which are open to steam navigation. The main rivers are the Yellow, Yangtze and Pearl. The Yangtze is navigable by vessels of 10,000 tons as far as Wuhan, over 1,000 km. from the coast. Smaller vessels can continue to Chungking. Over one-third of internal freight traffic is carried by water.

SHIPPING

Ministry of Communications: Peking.

The greater part of China's shipping is handled in eight major ports: Dairen (Talien), Chinchuangtao, Tientsin, Tsingtao, Lienyunkang, Shanghai, Canton and Chanchiang (Liuchow). Two-thirds of the handling facilities are mechanical, and harbour improvement schemes are constantly in progress.

China Ocean Shipping Company: Canton; the only Chinese line which operates its own ships outside territorial waters.

FOREIGN LINES SERVING CHINA

Blue Funnel Line: Liverpool; services to Shanghai.

Glen Line: London; services to Chinese ports.

Rickmers-linie GmbH: Hamburg; services to Canton.

COLOMBIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Colombia covers 1,138,914 sq. km. in the north-west of South America with the Caribbean Sea to the north and the Pacific to the west. Its continental neighbours are Venezuela, Brazil, Peru and Ecuador, while Panama connects it with Central America. The coastal areas have a tropical rain forest climate, the plateaux are temperate and in the Andes there are areas of permanent snow. The language is Spanish. There is freedom of religion; the state religion, to which 90 per cent of the population adhere, is Roman Catholicism. There are small Protestant and Jewish minorities. The flag consists of horizontal yellow, blue and red stripes. The capital is Bogota.

Recent History

Between 1948 and 1957, Colombia was torn by civil war, known as La Violencia, between Conservative and Liberal factions. For the greater part of this period, the country was under the dictatorship of Gen. Rojas Pinilla, who was overthrown by a military junta in 1957. Democratic government was re-established with a system of National Front, by which the two principal parties, Liberal and Conservative, would alternate in power in four year periods. This arrangement is due to end in 1974. In May 1966 Dr. Carlos Lleras Restrepo was elected Liberal President for a four-year term. Despite much political unrest and continuing guerrilla warfare Dr. Lleras Restrepo was able to bring about economic recovery after the crisis left by Gen. Rojas Pinilla. Presidential elections were held in April 1970 and Dr. Misael Pastrana Borrero was elected by a very small majority over Gen. Rojas Pinilla. Dr. Pastrana has been hindered in his attempts to continue Dr. Lleras Restrepo's economic success by his minorities in both chambers of Congress and the breakdown of the political arrangement of 1957. Colombia is a member of the Organization of American States, the Alliance for Progress, the Latin American Free Trade Association and the United Nations.

Government

The Constitution is that of 1886, which has been revised several times since its promulgation. Executive power is exercised by the President (assisted by a Cabinet) who is elected for a four-year term by universal adult suffrage. He must be alternately a member of the Conservative and Liberal Parties. Legislation is carried out by Congress, consisting of the Senate (106 members elected for four years) and the House of Representatives (204 members elected for four years). The country is divided into 22 Departments. Two new Departments, El César and Sucre, were formed in 1967.

Defence

Military service is compulsory for one year between the ages of eighteen and thirty. The strength of the Army, Navy and Air Force is about 15,000 in peacetime and 30,000 in wartime.

Economic Affairs

The economy depends principally on coffee, of which Colombia is one of the world's largest producers and which accounts for over 70 per cent of exports. Agriculture employs about half the labour force, and efforts are now being made to diversify secondary exports, especially bananas, cotton, sugar, textiles, tobacco, timber, hides, meat and livestock, cement, pharmaceuticals and metal products. Colombia produces 90 per cent of the world's emeralds and is the largest gold producer in Latin America. It is one of the few countries where platinum is found. Colombia's oil production is the third largest in South America and substantial deposits have recently been found in the south at Putumayo, whence a pipeline will be built over the Andes to the coast. A new pipeline from the oilfields of Yariri to the port of Cartagena was opened in 1962 and there are three refineries. Steel and cement are the chief industrial products but other manufactures are being started. In 1966 an economic frontier integration programme with Ecuador was launched. The first four-year stage is costing $101.9 million and the second ten-year stage will amount to total cost of $260 million. There are also integration projects with the other "Andean Group" countries, Venezuela, Peru, Bolivia and Chile. An IBRD loan of U.S. $16.7 million will finance the first three-year stage of a ten-year livestock development programme. Colombia's population is increasing at the rate of 3.2 per cent annually and the creation of new jobs in the mining and oil industries and the development of agricultural potential are foremost in the government's economic programme. However this was jeopardized in 1971 by a fall in the world price of coffee and a rise in imports.

Transport and Communications

The high mountains make transport difficult. There are 23,267 miles of roads, including three highways, and 2,140 miles of railways. Much freight and cattle as well as passenger traffic is carried on the River Magdalena, which is navigable for 900 miles from Barranquilla on the Atlantic coast to Puerto Berrio. A new sea-level canal is planned between Urahá on the Caribbean and Málaga on the Pacific at a cost of $422m. Capable of carrying vessels up to 20,000 tons the actual canal will be 25 km., but the total distance, including the Atrato and San Juan rivers, will be 420 km. A new port will be built at Urahá at a cost of $4.1m. Five national airlines provide internal and international services. Among them is Avianca, the oldest commercial airline in South America. A new jet airport is to be built at Cali, and another at Bucaramanga, at a cost of 60m. pesos.

Social Welfare

Social welfare is organized by the Institute of Social Security, which provides benefits for sickness, industrial accidents and unemployment. Large firms must provide life insurance for their employees and there is a comprehensive system of pensions.

COLOMBIA—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY)

Education

Education is free but not compulsory, since facilities are inadequate. In 1968 there were 33,949 schools with 3,421,343 pupils. There are 19 public and 16 private universities. There is 60 per cent literacy.

Tourism

The main tourist attractions are the Andes mountains of up to 19,000 ft., the extensive forests and jungles and pre-Colombian relics and monuments of Colonial art.

Visas are not required to visit Colombia by nationals of Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, German Federal Republic, Greece, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom.

Sport

The principal sports are football, horse-racing, cycling, baseball and polo. Tejo, a kind of discus-throwing game, is also popular.

Public Holidays

1972: May 11 (Ascension Day), May 15 (Sacred Heart and Thanksgiving Day), May 28 (Corpus Christi), June 29 (S.S. Peter and Paul), July 20 (Independence Day), August 7 (Battle of Boyacá), August 15 (Assumption), October 12 (Discovery of America), November 1 (All Saints' Day), November 11 (Independence of Cartagena), December 8 (Immaculate Conception), December 25 (Christmas Day).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), January 6 (Epiphany), March 19 (St. Joseph's Day), April 20-22 (Easter).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rate

The currency unit is the Peso of 100 Centavos.

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50 Centavos, 1 Peso.

Notes: 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500, 1,000 Pesos.

Exchange rate (March 1972): 54.75 Pesos = £1 sterling.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution now in force was promulgated in 1886 and has been amended from time to time. Following the fall of the Rojas Pinilla régime in May 1957, the Constitution was amended to introduce a sixteen-year period of bipartisan government. Under this system the Liberal and Conservatives are equally represented in both houses of Congress, in departmental and municipal legislatures and in the national and departmental cabinets. Under the 1886 Constitution, the country is governed by a President and a Congress consisting of two Chambers. All citizens over the age of 21 are eligible; women obtained the right to vote in 1955. Liberty of the press, freedom of speech and religious toleration are guaranteed. Military service is obligatory for a period of one year for men between the ages of 21 and 30.

THE PRESIDENT

Executive power is vested in the President of the Republic, who is elected by popular suffrage for a four-year term of office. By the amendments to the Constitution introduced in 1959, the President must be alternately a member of the Liberal and Conservative Parties.

The President is assisted in the government of the country by a Cabinet which he appoints. A substitute is elected by Congress, subject to bi-annual re-appointment, to act in the event of a Presidential vacancy. The President appoints the governors of the twenty-two Departments, the four Intendencias and the four Commissaries. The Cabinet resigns annually on August 7th to allow the President to replace Ministers if he desires to do so.

CONGRESS

Legislative power is exercised by Congress, which is composed of the Senate and the House of Representatives. Members of both chambers are elected by direct suffrage for a period of four years, in the following proportion: Senate—2 senators for each Department and one more for every 200,000 inhabitants or portion greater than 100,000, which have an excess over the first 200,000. House of Representatives—2 representatives for each Department and one more for every 100,000 inhabitants or portion greater than 50,000 which have an excess over the first 100,000. Whenever a new census is approved, the proportion both of senators and representatives will increase in the same proportion as the increase in population.

The Presidents in each House are elected for sixty days.

NATIONAL ECONOMIC COUNCIL

Direction of the nation's finances is in the hands of the Controller-General, who is appointed for two years. A National Economic Council including five ministers and also representatives of banking, industrial and agricultural interests, has functioned since 1935.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

For administrative purposes the country is divided into twenty-two departments, three intendencias and six commissaries. The twenty-two departments of the republic are further divided into municipalities. Governors for the Departments are appointed by the President, but regional legislatures are elected by the local inhabitants and enjoy considerable autonomy, including the management of local finances. Mayors for the municipalities are appointed by the governors.

Various constitutional reforms were promulgated in December 1968, including the following amendments: to increase the membership of the Senate from 106 to 112, and reduce the Chamber of Representatives from 204 to 198; to increase from two to four years the term of office of representatives; to eliminate the two-thirds majority required for matters of importance; to enable the Government to legislate by decree for a maximum period of 90 days in any one year in the event of an economic crisis, though such decrees must relate only to the matters which caused the crisis; from 1970, proportional representation will be allowed in departmental and municipal elections; the same principle will apply to congressional elections after 1974.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Following the Constitutional Amendment of 1957, the Conservatives and Liberals must hold political parity in Congress, the Cabinet, the Governorships, the Supreme Court and the Municipal Councils. The Conservatives and the Liberals are the only parties legally recognized, but other parties may function if they work through these basic parties.

The ten-year old government coalition between Conservatives and Liberals is known as the Frente de Transformación Nacional.

Partido Conservador (Frente Nacional): Bogotá; formerly divided into three factions, the Party became reunited in 1963; Leaders MARIANO OSPINA PÉREZ, GUILLERMO LEÓN VALENCIA.

Partido Liberal: Av. Jiménez 8-56, Bogotá; divided 1958 into two factions: Liberal Oficial, part of the government coalition, led by ALBERTO LLERAS CAMARGO and CARLOS LLERAS RESTREPO, and the Movimiento Revolucionario Liberal, leftist opposition group, led by ALFONSO LÓPEZ MICHELSON and JUAN JOSÉ TURBAY; reunited 1967, Pres. VÍCTOR MOSQUERA CHAUX; Sec. Gen. HECTOR ECHEVERRÍ CORREA.

Alianza Nacional Popular (Anapo): Bogotá; totalitarian aims; Leaders: GUSTAVO ROJAS PINILLA, MARÍA EUGENIA ROJAS DE MORENO, JOSEFINA VALENCIA DE HUBACH.

Partido Comunista: banned in Colombia.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Supreme Court of Justice, which sits in Bogotá, is divided into four subsidiary courts of Civil Cassations, Criminal Cassation, Labour Cassation and Constitutional Procedure. The twenty-four judges of the Supreme Court are elected for life; vacancies are filled by election by the members. For matters of great importance and government business, the three courts of the Supreme Court sit together as a Plenary Court.

The country is divided into judicial districts, each of which has a superior court of three or more judges. There are also other Courts of Justice for each judicial district, and judges for each province and municipality.

President of the Supreme Court: GUILLERMO OSPINA FERNÁNDEZ.

Vice-President: HERNÁN TORO AGUDELO.

PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF THE CONGO— CONGO (BRAZZAVILLE)

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Congo (Brazzaville) runs north from the Atlantic to Cameroon and the Central African Republic. To the east, across the Congo River (renamed the Zaire by the Kinshasa Government), is the Republic of Zaire. Gabon lies to the west. The climate is tropical with temperatures averaging 70°F–80°F (21°C–27°C) throughout the year with an annual rainfall of about 48 inches. The official language is French. Just over half the people follow traditional beliefs, with Roman Catholic, Protestant and Muslim minorities. The flag has two triangles of red and green separated by a yellow diagonal stripe. The capital is Brazzaville.

Recent History

Formerly part of French Equatorial Africa, the Republic of Congo became autonomous within the French Community in 1958 and fully independent in August 1960. Fulbert Youlou and Alphonse Massamba-Debat were the first two Presidents of the Republic. A period of unrest and attempted coups began in mid-1966 and culminated in August 1968 in the dissolution of the National Assembly, the creation of the National Council of the Revolution (CNR), headed by Capt. Ngouabi, and the abrogation of the 1963 Constitution. In September, after more unrest, President Massamba-Debat resigned and in December the C.N.R. became the supreme political authority and its president, Major Ngouabi, head of state. At the end of 1969 the Republic's sole party approved a radical reorganization of the country's system of government, and the state and the party took their present titles.

Since the end of 1968 there have been many reported attempts to overthrow the government, the latest being in February 1972. Relations with neighbouring Congo (Kinshasa), now Zaire, have also periodically been strained. Zaire's unilateral change of name of the Congo River to Zaire caused fresh dispute in October 1971.

Following student unrest, President Ngouabi in December conducted a purge of the Party Political Bureau and the Council of State, which removed his right-hand man since 1968, Vice-President Raoul, from all his posts.

The People's Republic is a member of the Conférence des Chefs d'Etat de l'Afrique Equatoriale, OCAM, the French Community, UDEAC, the OAU and the UN.

Government

The Congolese Workers' Party (Parti Congolais du Travail—P.C.T.) is the ultimate source of political authority in the state. Through district councils and regional assemblies the wishes of the people are transmitted up to the Central Committee and Political Bureau. The Chairman of the Political Bureau, who is also First Secretary of the Central Committee, heads the Council of State, which is the council of Ministers. The Second Secretary of the Central Committee chairs meetings of the Council and proposes ministerial appointments to it.

Defence

The army, police and civil defence forces were amalgamated into a national gendarmerie in August 1968. This was in turn replaced by a popular militia in March 1970. There is now an army of 2,000 men, a gendarmerie of 1,500, a police force of 850, and small naval and air forces.

Economic Affairs

Congo's economy depends on the export of primary goods, mainly hardwoods, diamonds, palm oil and sugar, output of which exceeds that of the other OCAM countries. There is little industry except the processing of foodstuffs. Apart from diamonds the only other mineral of importance is potash. Most trade is with France from whom the Congo receives grants, loans and technical aid. The European Economic Community also assists. In recent years French aid has amounted to over 1,000 million Francs CFA per annum.

Transport and Communications

The River Congo and its tributary the Oubangui are the principal means of transportation and Brazzaville is an important port on the River Congo. There are two railway lines, one from Pointe Noire on the Atlantic to Brazzaville with a branch to the iron ore mines at Franceville in Gabon. Road milcages are low. Work began in 1963 on a road to link Comilog railway in Gabon with the forest area of Mossendjo-Nyanga, helped by a grant from the European Economic Community. This will raise forestry production by one-third. Congo has its own internal air service and is a member of Air Afrique.

Social Welfare

In January 1963 a pension scheme was started by the National Social Security Board, which is also responsible for family allowances and workmen's compensation schemes. The Government also runs hospitals and health centres.

Education

There are not enough primary schools but there is a relatively high literacy rate—education will soon be compulsory from 6 to 16. In 1965 all private schools were taken over by the State. 2,459 million Francs CFA was devoted to education in the 1969 budget. A number of students go to France for technical instruction, while the Centre d'Enseignement Supérieur, which forms the nucleus of the Université de Brazzaville, founded in 1966, caters for about 1,000 students.

Tourism

There are no special facilities for tourism.

Visas: Citizens of all states, with the exception of France, require visas to visit the People's Republic of the Congo.

Sport

Football, volleyball, basketball and athletics are the principal sports and Congo competes with neighbouring states and within the French Community. The first African Games were held in Brazzaville in July 1965.

THE CONSTITUTION

PROMULGATION OF THE CONSTITUTION

The Chairman of the Central Committee of the Congolese Workers' Party (PCT), President of the Republic, Chief of State, Chairman of the Council of State.

Whereas, the Act of August 14th, 1968, establishing the National Council of the Revolution;

Whereas, the Fundamental Act of August 14th, 1968, amending the Constitution of December 8th, 1963, of the Republic of the Congo;

Whereas, the Act No. 13 of the National Council of the Revolution, dated December 28th, 1969, summoning the party congress;

Whereas, Act No. 14 of the National Council of the Revolution, dated December 30th, 1969, establishing the closing of this congress;

Whereas, the work of the constituent congress of the Congolese Workers' Party held at Brazzaville, December 28th-30th, 1969;

Whereas, the statutes of the Congolese Workers' Party and the Constitution of the Republic of the Congo, adopted December 30th, 1969, by the above-mentioned constituent congress;

Whereas, the powers conferred by said statutes upon the Chairman of the Congolese Workers' Party and the powers conferred by the Constitution of December 30th, 1969, upon the President of the Republic, Chief of State, and President of the Council of State;

Hereby orders:

Article 1. The Constitution of the People's Republic of the Congo adopted on December 30th, 1969, by the constituent congress of the Congolese Workers' Party, is hereby promulgated.

Article 2. The Constitution of the People's Republic of the Congo, attached to this ordinance, shall be published in the Journal officiel de la République.

Constitution of the People's Republic of the Congo

The ultimate purpose of the class struggle is the seizure of power. When the proletariat confronts the bourgeoisie, it must have the heart to seize power so as to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat. It is through this power that it will be able to organize the new society; it is through the dictatorship of the proletariat that the proletariat will be able to crush the other classes and stop the exploitation of man by man.

The birth of a vanguard party, a party of the proletariat, could not possibly fit in with the archaic structures of the colonial state.

Since the PCT represents a victory of the Congolese proletariat, it was quite normal that a new state should be born, along with the popular institutions which will tend to put an end to the long night of domination.

FIRST PART. FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

Title I. The People's Republic of the Congo

1. The Congo, a sovereign and independent state, is a people's republic, one, indivisible, and secular, in which all power springs from the people and belongs to the people.

2. Sovereignty resides in the people and all public powers spring from the people through a single people's party, the PCT, whose organization is spelled out in its statutes.

3. Outside the party the popular masses exert power by means of the representative organs of state power, consisting of the people's councils. These bodies are freely elected by the people and range from the people's councils of the communes, via the people's councils of the districts, all the way to the people's councils of the regions.

4. All representative agencies of state power are elected by the citizens through direct, equal, secret universal suffrage. In all agencies of the state power the representatives of the people are responsible to the party agencies. All acts of government agencies, of the administration, and of the courts must be based on the law.

5. The slogan of the People's Republic of Congo is: WORK—DEMOCRACY—PEACE. Its basic principle is the government of the people, by the people, and for the people. Its flag has a rectangular shape, it is a lively red, and at the top, to the left of the flag pole, it has an insignia representing two green palms crossed along their bottom, in whose middle there are represented a crossed sickle and hammer in golden yellow, all of this surrounded by a golden yellow, five-pointed star. National anthem: Les Trois Glorieuses. The seal of state and the arms of the Republic are spelled out by law.

Title II. Public Liberties and the Freedoms of the Human Personality

6. The human person is sacred. The state has the obligation to respect and protect it. Everyone has the right to free development of his personality, amid respect for the rights of others and for public order. The liberty of the human person is inviolable. No one can be charged, arrested, or detained except in cases determined by the law promulgated here prior to the infraction which this law is concerned with.

7. Domicile is inviolable. Requisitions may be ordered only in the forms and under the conditions provided for by law.

8. Secrecy of letters and all other forms of correspondence may not be violated, except in case of criminal investigation, mobilization, and state of war.

9-14. (Not available.)

15. The People's Republic of Congo grants the right of asylum on its territory, to foreign nationals who are persecuted because of their activities in support of democracy, the national liberation struggle, freedom of scientific and cultural work, and for the defence of the rights of the working people.

16. Defence of the fatherland is the sacred duty of all citizens of the People's Republic of the Congo. Treason against the people is the greatest crime.

19. All nationals are guaranteed freedom of conscience and religion. Religious communities are free in questions having to do with their faith and its outward exercise. It is forbidden to abuse religion and the Church for political purposes. Political organizations based on religion are banned.

20. Marriage and the family are under the protection of the state. The state determines the legal conditions for marriage and for the family. A legal marriage may be contracted only before the competent agencies of the state. Parents whose children were born out of wedlock have the same obligations and duties toward these children as they have toward their legitimate children.

Title III. Social and Economic System

30. In the People's Republic of the Congo, the means of production consist of the common property of the people which is in the hands of the state, property belonging to the people's co-operative organizations, as well as property of private persons or corporations.

31. The land is the property of the people. No real estate or traditional law shall validly oppose any initiative taken by the state or the local communities in an effort to improve the land. Everyone shall freely dispose of the product of the land, the fruit of his own work. In the name of the people, the state shall regulate the individual or collective use of the land, as required.

32. In order to protect the vital interests of the people, to raise their standard of living, and to make use of all possibilities and all economic forces, the state directs the economic life and development of the country according to a general plan. Basing itself on the economic sector of the state and on the sector of the co-operatives, it exercises general control over the sector of the private economy.

With a view to the implementation of its general plan, the state will base itself on the labour union organizations of workers and employees, on the peasant co-operatives, and possibly on other organizations of the working masses.

33. Private property as well as the right to inheritance of private property are guaranteed. No one may use his private property rights to the detriment of the community. Limitations on private property may be ordered by government regulation when this is in the general interest. Expropriation may take place only on the basis of a law.

SECOND PART. ORGANIZATION OF STATE

Title IV. President of the Republic and Council of State

34. The Chairman of the Central Committee of the PCT is the President of the Republic and the Head of State. He is responsible for national unity, for the implementation of the constitution, and for the regular operation of the government. He guarantees the continuity of the state. He is the guarantor of national independence, of the integrity of the territory, and of the compliance with the provisions of international agreements.

35. The President of the Republic is elected for a five-year term by the party congress in accordance with the party statutes.

Presidential elections are mandatory every fifth year in the term of the President of the Republic and must be held at a date determined by the party Central Committee.

36. The President of the People's Republic of Congo will appoint the Vice-Chairman of the Council of State, upon nomination by the party Central Committee. He will terminate his functions after notice from the Central Committee. He presides over the meetings of the Council of State. He causes the preparation and maintenance of the minutes of Council of State meetings. His deputy is the Vice-Chairman of the Council of State, as required.

37. On the basis of a proposal from the vice-chairman of the Council of State, following an opinion from the members of the Politburo, the President of the Republic will appoint the other members of the Council of State and terminate their functions.

38. When a vacancy in the office of the President of the Republic, for any reason whatever, or the disability of the President is established by the Central Committee, summoned for this purpose and decreeing with an absolute majority of its members, the functions of the President of the Republic—with the exception of the powers enumerated in Articles 38, 39, 45, and 47—shall be temporarily carried out by a member of the Politburo appointed by the Central Committee of the Congolese Workers' Party. The party congress shall be convened within three months after the establishment of this vacancy for the purpose of electing the new President of the Republic.

39. At the time of his inauguration the President of the People's Republic shall take the following solemn oath before the Central Committee of the Congolese Workers' Party:

"I swear loyalty to the Congolese people, to the Revolution, and to the Congolese Workers' Party. Guided by Marxist-Leninist principles, I pledge to defend the party statutes and the Constitution, to devote all my strength to the triumph of the proletarian ideals of the Congolese party through work, democracy, and peace."

40. The President of the party shall legislate by ordinance-law in enlarged session of the Politburo and the Council of State.

41. The President shall control the exercise of regulating authorities by the Council of State under the conditions spelled out by law. He shall sign ordinances and decrees. The acts of the President of the Republic shall be countersigned by the Vice-Chairman of the Council of State and the ministers involved, with the exception of those provided for in Articles 44-47.

42 and 43. (Not contained in original text.)

44. The Chairman of the Party Central Committee, President of the People's Republic, and Head of State may—when circumstances so require and after an opinion has been obtained from the Politburo and the Council of State—by decree proclaim a state of siege or a state of emergency which shall confer upon him special powers under the conditions determined by law.

45 and 46. (Not contained in original text.)

47. The Council of State is the highest executive and administrative agency of the People's Republic of Congo. It includes the following:

The Chairman of the Central Committee of the Congolese Workers' Party, President of the Republic, Chief of State, who shall preside over the Council, the Vice-Chairman of the Council of State; and the ministers and secretaries of state.

48. The Council is responsible to the President of the People's Republic, the Head of State.

49. The Vice-Chairman of the Council of State shall direct the action of the Council of State. He shall see to the implementation of laws and ordinances. He shall exercise regulatory power under the control of the Head of State.

50. The acts of the Vice-Chairman of the Council of State shall be countersigned by the ministers responsible for their execution.

51. Apart from cases expressly provided for in the articles of the Constitution, the Council of State shall mandatorily be informed of the following:

Decisions concerning the general policy of the Republic; agreements with foreign powers; bills and drafts of laws; ordinances, decrees, and regulations; proclamation of a state of siege and a state of alert.

52. The Council of State of the People's Republic of the Congo:

(a) will co-ordinate the activities of the ministers, the commissions, the government agencies and other institutions under their direct control;

CONGO (BRAZZAVILLE)—(THE CONSTITUTION, THE GOVERNMENT)

- (b) will prepare the economic plan of the state and the budget and will submit them to the Central Committee for approval; it will also supervise their execution;
- (c) will take all measures necessary to assure and defend the constitutional system and protect the rights of citizens;
- (d) will create commissions and institutions for the application of the directives of the Council of State;
- (e) will determine the internal organization of ministries and institutions within its area of competence.

Title V. International Treaties and Agreements

55. The President of the Republic is in charge of the overall direction of international negotiations. He shall sign and ratify international treaties and agreements.

56. Peace treaties, trade treaties, treaties pertaining to international organizations, treaties committing government finances, treaties modifying dispositions of a legislative nature, treaties pertaining to the status of persons or involving the cession, exchange, or addition of territory may be ratified only on the basis of a law. They shall take effect only after they have been properly ratified.

No cession, exchange, or addition of territory is valid without the agreement of the Congolese people who shall be called upon to express themselves through a referendum, after consultation of the population groups involved.

57. (Not contained in original text.)

58. Regularly ratified treaties and agreements have higher authority, as of their publication, than laws, with the reservation that each agreement or treaty is properly implemented by the other party.

Title VII. The Agencies of Administrative and Local Government Units

59. (Not contained in original text.)

60. The organization and operation of the public services of the state shall be determined by law.

61. The people's councils are agencies of state power in the localities, the communities, the districts, and the regions.

62. Special laws shall determine the juridical status, power, attributes, and operation of these agencies.

Title VIII. Revision

63. The initiative for the revision of the Constitution is held by the PCT Central Committee. Revision is final after it has been approved by the Central Committee.

64. No revision proceedings may be started or pursued if they infringe upon territorial integrity. The popular form of the state cannot be the subject of a revision.

COSTA RICA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Costa Rica forms a part of the Central American isthmus with the Caribbean to the east and a longer Pacific coast line to the west. The climate is warm and damp in the lowlands—average temperature 81°F (27°C)—and cooler on the Central Plateau—average temperature 72°F (22°C), where two thirds of the population live. Eighty per cent of Costa Ricans are of European descent and the country has one of the highest birth-rates in Central America. The language is Spanish. The state religion is Roman Catholicism. The flag consists of horizontal bands of blue, white, red, white and blue, the red band being twice the width of the others. The capital is San José.

Recent History

Since 1948, the predominant figure in Costa Rican politics has been José Figueres. Leader of the socialist Partido de Liberación Nacional, which seized power in 1948, he has been President three times (1948–49, 1953–58 and 1970–). Under him, Costa Rica has become one of the most democratic countries in Latin America. In 1948, the armed forces were abolished and banks were nationalized, and since then great social improvements have been made. In the intervening periods Presidents were elected who were opposed to Figueres' socialism, but no attempt was made to reverse the progress already made.

Government

Under the Constitution of 1949 executive power is vested in the President assisted by two Vice-Presidents and a Cabinet. The President is elected for a four-year term and must receive 40 per cent of the votes. The legislative organ is the unicameral Legislative Assembly of 57 members elected for four years. Parliamentary and presidential elections are held by compulsory adult suffrage.

Defence

There have been no Armed Forces since 1948.

Economic Affairs

The economy depends mainly on agriculture. Coffee is the most important product, accounting for about half the exports. Bananas, cocoa, honey, cattle and, more recently, sugar are the other important exports. The first sugar refinery began production in June 1968. Rice, corn and beans are produced mainly for home consumption. Forests cover large areas of the country. Mineral deposits are chiefly of limestone and a little gold. Substantial sulphur deposits were discovered in 1966 and prospecting for bauxite is under way. Industry is on a small scale, the main products being textiles, chemicals, leather goods and furniture. Hydro-electric power is being developed in the highlands. Trade is principally with the U.S.A., though Costa Rica is playing an increasingly important role in the Central American Common Market. In 1969 the World Bank granted two loans totalling $18.5 million to Costa Rica for the expansion of electric power and telecommunications facilities. In recent years continuing balance of payments difficulties have undermined the stability of the colón.

Transport and Communications

There are some 3,000 miles of all-weather roads, including 410 miles of the Inter-American Highway. Three railway companies operate 437 miles of track. The main ports handling external trade are Limón on the Caribbean coast and Puntarenas and Golfito on the Pacific coast, and there are local shipping services to Panama. The main towns are connected by internal air services and international air transport is provided by the national airline Líneas Aéreas Costarricenses and six foreign companies.

Social Welfare

A Labour Code provides benefits for employees and there are insurance schemes covering sickness, old age and death. There is no centralized health service, but there are various independent organizations, some of them state-subsidized, governing hospitals, clinics and all medical services.

Education

All education is free and elementary education is compulsory between the ages of six and twelve. Official secondary education is free and consists of two stages: a three-year basic course followed by a more highly specialized course of two years. Escuelas Normales and Escuelas Normales Superiores provide training courses for primary and secondary school teachers respectively. At 80 per cent Costa Rica has the highest literacy rate in Central America. In 1968 28.3 per cent of the budget was spent on education. There are about 3,000 primary schools and more than 100 secondary schools, with a total of nearly 400,000 pupils. There is a university at San José.

Tourism

The main tourist features are the Irazú and Poas volcanoes, the Orosi waterfalls and relics of Spanish colonial civilization. Tourists also visit San José, the capital, and the Pacific beaches of Puntarenas.

Visas are required by all visitors.

Sport

Football is the national sport and basketball, boxing, baseball, golf, tennis and swimming are also popular.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Anniversary of the Second Battle of Rivas and Labour Day), June 1 (Corpus Christi), June 29 (St. Peter and St. Paul), July 25 (Anniversary of the Annexation of Guanacaste Province), August 2 (Feast of Our Lady of the Angels), August 15 (Feast of the Assumption and Mother's Day), September 15 (Independence Day), October 12 (Columbus Day), December 8 (Feast of the Immaculate Conception), December 25 (Christmas Day), December 28–31 (Bank Holidays).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), March 19 (Feast of St. Joseph), April 20–22 (Easter), April 11 (Anniversary of the Battle of Rivas).

COSTA RICA—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY, STATISTICAL SURVEY)

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is officially in force, but old Spanish weights are sometimes used in country districts:

- 1 libra = 1.014 lb.
- 1 arroba = 25.35 lb.
- 1 quintal = 101.4 lb.
- 1 fanega = 11 Imperial bushels.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the Colon of 100 Centavos

Coins: 5, 10, 25, 50 Centavos; 1, 2 Colones.

Notes: 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500, 1,000 Colones.

In common with the other members of the Central American Common Market, Costa Rica has adopted the Central American Peso (C.A. $) for transactions within the Market. This peso is at par with the U.S. dollar.

Exchange rate: 22.55 Colones = £1 sterling.

8.60 Colones = U.S. $1 = C.A. $1.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE present Constitution of Costa Rica was promulgated in November 1949; the present government has submitted three draft resolutions concerning further presidential terms, the banking system and the system of autonomous state agencies. A committee of lawyers was set up in mid-1967 to study the possibility of reforming the Constitution.

The government is unitary: provincial and local bodies derive their authority from the national government. The country is divided into seven provinces administered by a governor who is appointed by the President. The provinces are divided into cantons, and each canton into districts. There is an elected municipal council in the chief city of each canton, the number of its members being related to the population of the canton. The municipal council supervises the affairs of the canton. Municipal government is closely regulated by national law, particularly in matters of finance.

The government consists of three branches: legislative, executive and judicial. Legislative power is vested in a single chamber, the Legislative Assembly, which meets in regular session twice a year—from May 1st to July 31st, and from September 1st to November 30th. Special sessions may be convoked by the President to consider specified business. The Assembly is composed of 57 deputies elected for four years. The chief powers of the Assembly are to enact laws, levy taxes, authorise declarations of war and, by a two-thirds vote, suspend, in cases of civil disorder, certain civil liberties guaranteed in the Constitution.

Bills may be initiated by the Assembly or by the Executive and must have three readings, in at least two different legislative periods, before they become law. The Assembly may override the presidential vote by a two-thirds vote.

The Executive branch is headed by the President, who is assisted by his Cabinet. The President may not serve two successive periods of office, but may be re-elected after eight years. If he should resign or be incapacitated, the executive power is entrusted to the First Vice-President, and from him to the Second Vice-President, and finally to the President of the Legislative Assembly.

"The President sees that the laws and the provisions of the Constitution are carried out, and maintains order. He has power to appoint and remove his ministers and diplomatic representatives; and to negotiate treaties with foreign nations (which are, however, subject to ratification by the Legislative Assembly). He is assisted in his duties by a Cabinet, each member of which is head of an executive department.

A novel feature of the Costa Rican Constitution is the clause outlawing a national army. Only by a continental convention or for the purpose of national defence may a military force be organised.

Suffrage is universal, compulsory and secret for persons over the age of 20; or, if they are completely independent, for persons over 18 years of age.

CUBA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Cuba is the largest island in the Caribbean, lying 90 miles south of Florida, U.S.A. Its other neighbours are Mexico, Jamaica and Haiti. The climate is tropical with the annual rainy season from May to October. The average annual temperature is 77°F (25°C) and hurricanes are frequent. The language is Spanish. The population is predominantly Roman Catholic. The flag has five horizontal bands, alternating blue, white, blue, white, blue, with a red triangle close to the staff, charged with a silver star. Havana (La Habana) is the capital.

Recent History

In 1959 the dictatorship of General Batista was overthrown after years of guerrilla war, by Dr. Fidel Castro who gradually established a Communist system of government. In 1961, Cuban exiles with some American support, attempted unsuccessfully to invade the island. The U.S.S.R. aids the Castro regime, economically and militarily, but the installation of rockets by the U.S.S.R. precipitated a crisis with the U.S.A. and late in 1962 the U.S.S.R. dismantled and withdrew the rockets. The country has been under an economic blockade by the U.S.A. since 1962. At the same time, Cuba was suspended from the O.A.S. Since then much social and some economic progress has been made, with aid chiefly from the U.S.S.R.

Government

Since the 1959 Revolution, Government has been administered under the Fundamental Law of the Republic. A President is appointed by the Prime Minister, who governs the country with the help of twenty Ministers. The country is divided into six provinces. There have been no elections since the Revolution.

Defence

Cuba receives considerable aid from communist countries. There is a national army and air force and a small navy. Most fit men and women belong to the Militia. Defence is the third largest item in the budget. Conscription was introduced at the end of 1963. Service is for a three-year period at 17 years of age. Conscripts work on the land in addition to their military duties.

Economic Affairs

Cuba's economy is basically agricultural and is closely organized by the state. In 1968 retailing and other forms of private business were nationalized. There has been some progress in building up local industries. Food rationing has been in force since March 1962, and clothes rationing was introduced in February 1963. The island depends to a large extent on economic aid from the U.S.S.R. and most of Cuba's trade is with the communist bloc, though relations with China have deteriorated. Sugar production occupies half the cultivated land in Cuba and accounts for about 10 per cent of world production. Since 1964 Cuba has aimed to produce 10 million tons of sugar annually by 1970. 1969, however, produced the lowest crop since 1966, several million tons short of the target; in 1970, 8½ million tons were produced, the best total since 1952, but at the cost of diverting labour and resources from other production. Sugar accounts for approximately 85 per cent of Cuban exports. Tobacco is the second largest crop. The recent development of the cattle, poultry and fishing industries has led to claimed annual increases of 20 per cent in milk output and 50 per cent in egg production, while the average annual fish landing has increased rapidly. The production of meat is also important. Cuba is rich in nickel deposits and there is also copper, chromite and manganese.

Transport and Communications

Railways and roads connect towns and important villages and further roads are being built. There are 3,000 miles of railways, and 5,000 km. of highways were completed by 1969 to reach a national total of 40,000 km. Geographically Cuba is a focal point for shipping and air services, but latterly traffic has been much reduced. A new airport was opened in 1966 at Holguín, and another is nearly completed at Bayamo. Following numerous hijacking incidents which have forced aircraft to land at Havana, severe laws to deal with hijackers were introduced in September 1969.

Social Welfare

A social security system provides for the unemployed and gives pensions to the old. Hospitals are free. Health care is the second largest item in the budget. Sick pay and retirement pensions equivalent to the full rate of earnings were introduced for selected categories of workers in 1968.

Education

Education is a very large item in the budget and in recent years illiteracy has been greatly reduced. Education is universal and free up to university level. At the primary stage, between the ages of six and twelve, it is compulsory. "Pre-school" national schools are run by the State for children of five years of age, and day nurseries are available for all children after their forty-fifth day. University students rely on the national scholarship plans, and those with family responsibilities are assisted by the Students Loans Plan. Workers undergoing university courses receive a state subsidy to provide for their dependants. Barracks and large residential houses have been converted to supply the urgent need for new school buildings, but the acute shortage of teachers is probably the major problem. Courses at Intermediate and Higher levels are created in accordance with the needs of the country, with emphasis on technology, agriculture and teacher training. Adult education centres have given basic education to over 350,000 people since 1962.

Tourism

Cuba has much to attract the tourist—forests, mountains, and a coastline with many bays and inlets and excellent bathing. There are the relics of the Spanish colonial days. There have been fewer tourists since the change of regime.

CUBA—(STATISTICAL SURVEY)

Visas: Tourists from the following countries do not require a visa for visits of up to thirty days: Bermuda, Bahamas, Belgium, Canada, France, Denmark, German Democratic Republic, Great Britain, Gibraltar, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland and Yugoslavia.

All travellers require permission to leave Cuba.

Sport

Sports and recreations are organized at national level by the National Institute of Sports, Physical Education and Recreation (INDER). The national sport is baseball and other favourite sports are boxing, basketball, athletics, cycling and swimming. Chess is also a national pastime.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), July 26 (Revolution Day),

December 7 (Day of National Mourning), December 24-25 (legal holiday).

1973: January 1 (Liberation Day), January 2 (Victory Day).

Weights and Measures

Officially the Metric System is in force but the U.S. system is still widely used.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the peso, which is officially worth $1 U.S.; 100 centavos equal 1 peso.

Coins: 1, 5, 20, 40, centavos, 1 peso.

Notes: 1, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100 pesos.

Exchange rate: 2.55 pesos = £1 sterling
1 peso = $1 U.S.

DAHOMY

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Dahomey is a narrow stretch of territory in West Africa, flanked by Nigeria and Togo. The climate is tropical, with average temperatures of 68°-93°F (20°-34°C) and heavy rainfall. It is hotter and drier in the north. French is the official language but each tribe has its own tongue. The majority of the people follow traditional beliefs and customs. Christians, mainly Roman Catholics, make up 15 per cent of the population and Moslems 13 per cent. The flag has a broad green vertical stripe in the hoist and two horizontal bands of yellow and red in the fly. The capital is Porto-Novo.

Recent History

Formerly one of the provinces of French West Africa, Dahomey became a self-governing republic within the French Community in December 1958, and an independent state in August 1960. In 1963, after trade union and student riots, President Hubert Maga's government was overthrown and the army, under Col. Christophe Soglo, brought to power a coalition of Justin Ahomadegbe and S. M. Apithy. In November and December 1965 the army intervened in government twice more and the second time Soglo became President. In December 1967 a group of younger army officers overthrew Soglo and installed Lt.-Col. Alphonse Alley as head of state in preparation for a return to civilian rule. A strong presidential constitution was approved by referendum in March 1968, and presidential elections were held in May. These were annulled after heavy abstentions and Dr. E. D. Zinsou appointed President. The army intervened again at the end of 1969 and more elections were held in 1970. These were suspended because of violence and irregularities and a Presidential Council formed consisting of the three candidates, MM. Maga, Apithy and Ahomadegbe, with the post of President rotating. In February 1972 a section of the army reportedly attempted to assassinate the Chief-of-Staff and overthrow the Government.

Government

The Presidential Council is the supreme organ of state. The chairman is Head of State and the chairmanship rotates among the three members every two years. The Council will rule until general elections are held and a return to constitutional government instituted.

Defence

Citizens of both sexes are liable for military service between the ages of eighteen and fifty-one years. The Army strength is 2,100, the air force 150 and the National Gendarmerie 1,200 men. France provides technical assistance and equipment.

Economic Affairs

About 80 per cent of Dahomey's population work on the land, but farming is generally at subsistence level, and exportable surpluses are limited. France provides most capital outlay, and also subsidizes the current budget. Dahomey is an Associate Member of the EEC and a member of the West African Monetary Union.

Transport and Communications

Transport services are few; three short sections of railway run inland from Cotonou, and the coast road links Togo in the west and Nigeria in the east. The new port at Cotonou was officially inaugurated in August 1965.

Education

Education is provided by both the Government and the Christian missions, but many more schools are needed. There is no higher education and students go either to France or Senegal.

Tourism

Dahomey is making great efforts under the Five-Year Plan to encourage tourism. Safaris can be arranged to visit the two National Parks, the "W" Park and the Park of Pendjari, and the numerous hunting reserves.

Visas are not required by French nationals.

Sport

There is little organized sport but football is generally popular. Big game hunting in the reserves is possible for tourists.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), May 11 (Ascension), May 22 (Whitsun), August 1 (National Day), August 15 (Assumption), November 1 (All Saints), November 8 (Id ul Fitr), December 25 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year), April 23 (Easter Monday)

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The principal unit of currency is the Franc Communauté Financière Africaine (CFA).

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 25 Francs CFA.

Notes: 50, 100, 500, 1,000, 5,000, 10,000 Francs CFA.

Exchange rate: 66½ Francs CFA = £1 sterling
254 Francs CFA = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

A Charter of "fundamental law" was introduced in May 1970 after the Military Directory had established a three-man Presidential Commission. The Charter is to regulate the political life of the state until general elections have been held and constitutional government restored. The Charter was signed by the three members of the Presidential Commission, and its operation is guaranteed by the army.

The Charter provides for a Presidential Commission, a Cabinet and a Consultative Assembly. The "supreme organ of state" is the Presidential Commission. This meets when summoned by two of the members, and has to reach unanimous decisions, except when one member withholds his assent to a decision three times, in which case a majority decision suffices.

Members of the Presidential Commission attend Cabinet meetings. The Consultative Assembly, according to the draft decree issued by the Cabinet in February 1971, has 30 members, divided into economic, social and general policy sections, and advises the Presidential Commission and the Cabinet.

The chairmanship of the Presidential Commission rotates every two years. The Chairman exercises the functions of head of state, leader of the government and chief of the armed forces. For the first period until May 1972, Hubert Maga is Chairman. Justin Ahomadegbe will take over after him, and in 1974 he in turn will be succeeded by Sourou Apithy.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Dominican Republic occupies the eastern 48,442 sq. km. of the island of Hispaniola (76,192 sq. km.) which lies between Cuba and Puerto Rico in the Caribbean Sea. Her only border is with Haiti. The climate is sub-tropical with an average temperature of 80°F (27°C). The island lies in the path of tropical cyclones. The official language is Spanish. Over 60 per cent of the population are Roman Catholics. There are small Protestant and Jewish communities. The flag is red and blue quartered by a white cross. The capital is Santo Domingo.

Recent History

The Dominican Republic was ruled from 1930 to 1961 by the dictatorial government of Rafael Trujillo. After Trujillo's assassination, a transitional government composed of a seven-man Council of State was set up. Elections were held in December 1962 and Juan Bosch of the Dominican Revolutionary Party was elected President. This administration was overthrown by a military coup in September 1963. Six right-wing parties endorsed the appointment of a civilian Triumvirate led by Emilio de los Santos. After a further coup in April 1965 forces of the Organization of American States were called in to restore order. Dr. Hector García Godoy became provisional President; elections were held in June 1966 and resulted in victory for Dr. Joaquín Balaguer. In May 1970, Dr. Balaguer was re-elected for a further four years. Since the elections prominent opposition figures have joined the government and Dominican politics have been marked by violent in-fighting amongst the divided opposition groups. Juan Bosch remains the only notable opposition figure.

Government

Following the elections in May 1970, 27 senators and 74 representatives were elected for 4-year terms.

Defence

The Republic is a member of the Inter-American Defense Board. Armed Forces total about 17,000 men: Army 12,000, Air Force 3,000 and Navy 2,000.

Economic Affairs

Seventy per cent of the population live on the land and most exports are agricultural. The main cash crops are sugar, coffee, cocoa and tobacco. Only two-fifths of the cultivable land is in use and government resettlement schemes have failed. Although there has been a heavy influx of population into the towns, unemployment and under-employment remain high in both rural and urban areas. Manufacturing on a small scale covers a wide range of consumer goods. Mineral resources are being developed, the most important product being bauxite. Foreign oil-companies have undertaken extensive prospecting and the oil-refinery at Nigua is already in operation. The production of ferro-nickel began in 1972. Early in 1972 the Government agreed to pay U.S. $16.2 million to enable the Valdesia dam and hydro-electric project to be completed in 1973. Foreign investment amounted to U.S. $74.1 million in 1970 compared with U.S. $10.9 million in 1967. In 1967, to halt the waste of forest resources, all saw-mills were closed down for a period of at least ten years and the destruction of trees now constitutes a crime.

Transport and Communications

Transport facilities are limited and about 80 per cent of the railways are used solely to carry sugar from the plantations. Roads are the main means of communication and the network includes some modern motorways. There is no inland waterway system and very little coastal shipping. A number of shipping lines link the island with the United States and other Caribbean islands. There are internal and international air services, the international airport being at Punta Caucedo. A second international airport is to be built on the island of Saona.

Social Welfare

There is no comprehensive system of state welfare but the Government provides some medical and health services.

Education

Primary education is free and, where possible, compulsory from the ages of seven to fourteen. In 1969-70 primary school enrolment totalled 726,306 and an estimated 112,286 pupils received secondary education. There are three universities.

Tourism

Efforts are now being made to develop the tourist industry. Hotels, casinos and seaside resorts are being built and tours have been organized to the old Spanish colonial settlements.

Visas are not required to visit the Dominican Republic by nationals of Belgium, Denmark, France, German Federal Republic, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Switzerland and the United Kingdom. A tourist card is available for visits of up to 15 days.

Sport

The favourite sport is baseball but swimming and water sports are also popular.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), May 11 (Ascension Day), June 1 (Corpus Christi), August 15 (Assumption), August 16 (Restoration Day), September 24 (Mercedes), October 12 (Discovery of America), November 1 (All Saints Day), December 25 (Christmas Day).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), January 6 (Epiphany), January 21 (Altagracia), January 26 (Duarte), February 27 (Independence Day), March 19 (St. Joseph), April 19-20 (Maundy Thursday-Good Friday).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is officially in force but the Imperial system is often used.

Currency and Exchange Rate

The currency unit is the Dominican Republic Peso (RD$) of 100 Centavos.

Coins: 1, 5, 10, 25, 50 Centavos; 1 RD$.

Notes: 1, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500, 1,000 RD$.

Exchange rate: 2.55 RD$ = £1 sterling
1.00 RD$ = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

The present constitution of the Dominican Republic was promulgated on November 28th, 1966. Its main points are:

The Dominican Republic is a sovereign, free, independent State; no organizations set up by the State can bring about any act which might cause direct or indirect intervention in the internal or foreign affairs of the State or which might threaten the integrity of the State. The Dominican Republic recognizes and applies the norms of general and American international law and is in favour of and will support any initiative towards economic integration for the countries of America. The civil, republican, democratic, representative Government is divided into three independent powers: legislative, executive and judicial.

The territory of the Dominican Republic is as laid down in the Frontier Treaty of 1929 and its Protocol of Revision of 1936.

The life and property of the individual citizen are inviolable; there can be no sentence of death, torture or any sentence which might cause physical harm to the individual. There is freedom of thought, of conscience, of religion, freedom to publish, freedom of unarmed association, provided that there is no subversion against public order, national security or decency. There is freedom of labour and trade unions; freedom to strike, except in the case of public services, according to the dispositions of the law.

The State will set about agrarian reform, dedicating the land to useful interests and gradually eliminating the latifundios. The State will do all in its power to support all aspects of family life. Primary education is compulsory and all education is free. Social security services will be developed. Every Dominican has the duty to give what civil and military service the State may require of him. Every legally entitled citizen must exercise his right to vote. Citizens are all persons over the age of eighteen and all who are or have been married even if they are not yet eighteen.

Legislative Power is exercised by Congress which is made up of Senate and Chamber of Deputies, elected by direct vote. Senators, one for each province and one for the Distrito Nacional, are elected for four years; they must be Dominicans in full exercise of their citizen's rights, over 25. Their duties are to elect judges, the president and other members of the Electoral and Accounts Councils, approve the nomination of diplomats. Deputies, one for every 50,000 inhabitants or fraction over 25,000 in each province and the Distrito Nacional, are elected for four years and must fulfil the same conditions for election as Senators.

Decisions of Congress are taken by absolute majority of at least half the members of each house; urgent matters require a two-thirds majority. Both houses normally meet on February 27th and August 16th each year for sessions of 90 days, which can be extended for a further 60 days.

Executive Power is exercised by the President of the Republic, who is elected by direct vote for a four-year term. He and the Vice-President must be Dominican citizens by birth or origin, over 30 years of age and in full exercise of their citizen's rights; they must not have engaged in any active military or police service for at least a year prior to their election. They take office on August 16th following their election. The President of the Republic is Head of the Public Administration and Supreme Chief of the armed forces and police forces. His duties include nominating Secretaries and Assistant Secretaries of State and other public officials, promulgating and publishing laws and resolutions of Congress and seeing to their faithful execution, watching over the collection and just investment of national income, nominating, with the approval of the Senate, members of the Diplomatic Corps, receiving foreign Heads of State, presiding at national functions, decreeing a State of Siege or Emergency or any other measures necessary during a public crisis. The President may not leave the country for more than 15 days without authorization from Congress. In the absence of the President, the Vice-President will assume power, or failing him the President of the Supreme Court of Justice.

Judicial Power is exercised by the Supreme Court of Justice and the other Tribunals; no judicial official may hold another public office or employment, other than honorary or teaching. The Supreme Court is made up of at least nine judges, who must be Dominican citizens by birth or origin, at least 35 years old, in full exercise of their citizen's rights, graduates in law and have practised professionally for at least 12 years. There are also five Courts of Appeal, a Lands Tribunal and a Court of the First Instance in each judicial district; in each Municipality and in the Distrito Nacional there are also Justices of the Peace.

Government in the Distrito Nacional and the Municipalities is in the hands of local councils, with members elected proportionally to the number of inhabitants, but numbering at least five. Each Province has a civil Governor, designated by the Executive.

All citizens must exercise their suffrage. Elections are directed by the Central Electoral Council. The Armed Forces are essentially obedient and apolitical, created for the defence of national independence and the maintenance of public order and the Constitution and Laws.

The artistic and historical riches of the country, whoever owns them, are part of the cultural heritage of the country and are under the safekeeping of the State. Mineral deposits belong to the State. There is freedom to form political parties, provided they conform to the principles laid down in the Constitution. Justice is administered without charge throughout the Republic.

This Constitution can be reformed if the proposal for reform is supported in Congress by one third of the members of either house or by the Executive. A special session of Congress must be called and any resolutions must have a two-thirds majority. There can be no reform of the method of government, which must always be civil, republican, democratic and representative.

ECUADOR

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Ecuador occupies 238,561 sq. km on the west coast of South America. Its neighbours are Colombia to the north and Peru to the east and south. The Galápagos Islands, 500 miles out in the Pacific, belong to Ecuador. The climate is affected by the Andes mountains and ranges from the tropical rain forest on the coast and in the eastern region to the tropical grasslands of the central valley and the permanent snowfields of the highlands. The official language is Spanish but Indian languages are very common. About 90 per cent of the population is Roman Catholic and there are Protestant and Jewish minorities. The flag is a horizontal tricolour of yellow, blue and red, the yellow strip being twice the depth of the other two; in the centre is the national emblem. The capital is Quito.

Recent History

In 1961 labour groups, left-wing parties and the Armed Forces overthrew President Velasco Ibarra who was forced into exile. His successor, President Arosemena Gómez was deposed after an Army coup in July 1963. A Military Junta was set up, headed by Rear-Admiral Ramón Castro Jijón, and martial law was proclaimed. This junta was forced to resign in March 1966, and Clemente Yerovi Indaburu was installed as Acting President. Following the elections of October 16th, 1966, Dr. Arosemena Gómez became provisional President. Dr. José María Velasco Ibarra was elected as President in June 1968. In June 1970, with the aid of the army, he declared himself dictator, suspended the constitution and dissolved Congress. But in February 1972 President Ibarra was deposed by the armed forces and General Guillermo Rodríguez, C.-in-C. of the Army. Ecuador claims exclusive fishing rights of two hundred miles along her coastline. This claim has been the source of continuing friction with the United States for some years. Ecuador is a member of the UN, the Organization of American States, the Alliance for Progress and the Latin American Free Trade Association.

Government

In February 1972 the new President, Gen. Rodríguez announced that the Constitution of 1945 would be enforced and a return to civilian government would be achieved in due course. The country is divided into 19 Provinces and the National Territory of the Galápagos Islands. Each Province has a Governor appointed by the President.

Defence

Military service is compulsory for one year at the age of twenty. Defence expenditure is the second largest item in the Budget. The Armed Forces consist of about 32,000 men: Army 20,000, Navy 7,000 and Air Force 5,000.

Economic Affairs

The economy is dominated by three commodities: bananas, coffee and cocoa. Ecuador is the world's largest exporter of bananas. The extensive forests yield valuable hardwoods. Ecuador is the world's largest producer of balsawood. Minerals include gold, silver, lead and petroleum. The major industries are oil-refining, sugar-refining and cement. With the completion of the trans-Andean pipeline linking the oilfields of Oriente Province with the tanker-loading port of Esmeraldas in 1972, Ecuador seems likely to become an important oil-exporting nation. The pipeline's daily capacity will be 250,000 barrels. A Development Plan 1964-73 envisaging expenditure of $250m. p.a. was approved by the Alliance for Progress which is contributing $173m. A programme of border-zone economic integration with Colombia is under way; projects include improving transport facilities and social services. The 1967-76 electricity development programme provides for the installation of four plants with a total capacity of 500,000 kW; one of the projects is at Pisayambo, near Ambato, and will have a total installed capacity of 140,000 kW; total cost of the programme will be 6,200m. sucres, of which 3,500m. will be obtained from abroad. Almost 25 per cent of the 1971 budget was devoted to servicing existing debt repayments and those falling due during 1971 and the new government has promised an austerity programme to restore the government's finances. It is hoped that oil-revenues will eradicate the balance of payments deficit in the near future.

Transport and Communications

Communications are rendered difficult by mountains and forests. There are 615 miles of railway track, the main railway extending from the coast to Quito and beyond. The Pan-American Highway runs for 868 miles through the country with branch roads to the coast. Near the coast the lower reaches of the rivers Guayas, Mira and Esmeraldas are navigable for about 120 miles. There are a number of seaports of which Guayaquil and Manta are the most important. Four Ecuadorean companies and a number of foreign lines operate internal and international air services.

Social Welfare

Social insurance is compulsory for certain groups of both public and private employees. Benefits are available for sickness, industrial accidents, disability, maternity, old age, widowhood and orphanhood. Hospitals and welfare institutions are run by Central Public Assistance Boards.

Education

Education is compulsory where school places are available. All public schools are free, and considerable co-operation exists between them and the private religious schools which continue to play a vital role in the educational system. Primary education covers the ages of six to twelve and secondary education twelve to eighteen. University courses extend for up to six years and include programmes for teacher training. About 50 per cent of primary school pupils proceed to secondary education, of which only 6 per cent reach university. As part of the current literacy campaign a number of adult schools and literary centres have been built. There are seven universities.

Tourism

The main tourist attractions are the magnificent mountain and forest scenery of the highlands, the tropical jungles of the Upper Amazon and the relics of Indian and Colonial Spanish cultures. There are a number of coastal resorts from which deep-sea fishing is possible. Scientific expeditions visit the Galápagos Islands.

Visas are not required to visit Ecuador by nationals of Belgium, Colombia, Denmark, France, German Federal Republic, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom and Uruguay.

Sport

Football and basketball are the most popular sports.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), May 24 (Battle of Pichincha), July 24 (Birth of Simón Bolívar), August 10 (Independence Day), October 9 (Guayaquil Independence), October 12 (Discovery of America), November 2 (All Souls' Day), November 3 (Cuenca Independence), December 25 (Christmas), December 31 (Bank Holiday).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), March 6, 7 (Carnival), April 20-23 (Easter).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rate

The currency unit is the Sucre of 100 Centavos.

Coins: 5, 10, 20, 50 Centavos; 1 Sucre.

Notes: 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500, 1,000 Sucres.

Foreign exchange dealings in the Sucre were suspended in August 1971 when the Sucre was devalued from 18 to 25 to the U.S. $.

THE CONSTITUTION*

THE present Constitution of Ecuador was promulgated by the National Assembly on May 25th, 1967. Under it, legislative power is vested in Congress, which is composed of two chambers. They assemble twice a year for a period of sixty days. Members of the Senate are elected for a four-year term, and may be re-elected. There are two senators for each province and one for the Archipelago of Colón. In addition, fifteen "functional" senators are designated by bodies representative of educational institutions, learned societies, the Press, the armed forces; and by labour, industry, agriculture and commerce, in the sierra and in the litoral.

The Chamber of Deputies has seventy-two members elected for a two-year term. Members are eligible for re-election.

In addition to its law-making duties, Congress supervises the administration and expenditure of the national revenues; ratifies treaties; elects members of the Supreme and Superior Courts; and, from panels presented by the President, the Comptroller-General, the Attorney-General and the Superintendent of Banks. It is also able to overrule the President's amendment or rejection of a bill which it has submitted to him for his approval, and may grant or refuse the grant of extraordinary powers to the President.

The presidential term is four years. An ex-President may only be re-elected after four years have elapsed from the date of his terminating office. The President appoints his own cabinet, the governors of provinces, diplomatic representatives and certain administrative employees, and is responsible for the direction of international relations. In the event of foreign invasion or internal disturbance, extraordinary powers may be given him by Congress, or by the Council of State if Congress is not in session.

The Constitution also provides for a Legislative Committee, consisting of nine members, to draw up bills (with the exception of those dealing with economic questions), and codify and edit laws.

The new constitution is interesting in that it makes specific dispositions concerning Ecuador's possible participation in international associations; it also recognizes international law as the norm of conduct in its relations with associated nations.

As in other post-war Latin-American Constitutions, particular emphasis is laid on the functions and duties of the State, which is given wide responsibilities with regard to the protection of labour; assisting in the expansion of production; protecting the Indian and peasant communities; and organizing the distribution and development of uncultivated lands, by expropriation where necessary.

Every Ecuadorean citizen, male or female, who is literate and over 18 years of age, may vote. Voting is compulsory for all citizens.

* In February 1972 the new President, Gen. Rodríguez, announced that there would be a return to the Constitution of 1945.

EGYPT

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Arab Republic of Egypt occupies the north-eastern corner of Africa, with an extension across the Gulf of Suez into the Sinai region which is usually regarded as lying in Asia. It is bounded to the north by the Mediterranean, to the north-east by Israel, to the east by the Red Sea, to the south by the Sudan, and to the west by Libya. (Since June 1967 the de facto frontier with Israel has been the Suez Canal, and Israel continues to occupy the whole of Sinai and the Gaza strip.) The River Nile runs through the country from south to north, emptying into the Mediterranean Sea. The climate is arid, with a maximum rainfall of only eight inches around Alexandria. More than ninety per cent of the country is desert. Summer temperatures reach a maximum of 110°F (43°C), and winters are mild. Arabic is the official language. Many educated Egyptians speak English or French. Over 90 per cent of the population are Muslims. The remainder are mainly Christians, over a million of whom are Copts. The flag is a horizontal tricolour, red, white, and black; the white stripe is charged with two green stars of five points. The capital is Cairo.

Recent History

In July 1952 a group of young army officers, the "Free Officers", seized power in Cairo. King Farouk was forced to abdicate and Gen. Muhammed Neguib installed as head of the military junta. Egypt was declared a republic the following June, when Neguib became President and Prime Minister, and Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser, who was leader of the Free Officers, Deputy Prime Minister. In November 1954 Neguib was relieved of his posts, and Nasser took over as acting head of state.

In October 1954 Britain and Egypt reached agreement on the Suez Canal, when provision was made for the withdrawal of British troops. In June 1956 a new constitution was approved by the people and Nasser elected President. The following month, after Britain and the U.S.A. had withdrawn their offers of finance for the Aswan High Dam, Nasser announced the nationalization of the Suez Canal Company, so that Canal revenues could be used to finance the Dam. This was a cause of great concern to Israel, Britain and France, and Israel invaded Sinai on October 29th while Britain and France began operations against Egypt two days later. Strong UN and American pressure resulted in a ceasefire on November 6th and supervision by the UN of the invaders' withdrawal.

Egypt and Syria formed the United Arab Republic in February 1958, and ties with the Soviet and East European bloc strengthened. Syria withdrew from the union after the army had seized power there in September 1961, but Egypt retained the title "United Arab Republic". Further attempts at federating Egypt, Syria and Iraq also came to nothing during the early 1960s. Egyptian troops supported republican forces in the civil war in the Yemen, which began in 1962, and were withdrawn only in 1967. By 1966 the financial burden imposed by this military commitment had contributed to a grave economic crisis. But Nasser was able to restore his prestige by strongly supporting Syria as border incidents and tension between it and Israel reached a peak in May 1967. Nasser secured the dissolution of the UN Emergency Force on the U.A.R. frontier, reoccupied Sharm el Sheikh and closed the Straits of Tiran to Israeli shipping. Israel replied on June 5th with large-scale air attacks and later with land invasions. By June 10th, when all participants had accepted a ceasefire, Israel was in control of a large area of Arab territory, including all of Sinai, and the Suez Canal was blocked. Soviet military assistance soon made good the Egyptian losses of the war. The U.A.R. and the other Arab states refused to negotiate direct with Israel, and the ceasefire line saw periodic bouts of action until August 1970, when another ceasefire was arranged between the U.A.R. and Israel.

President Nasser died on September 28th, 1970, and Anwar Sadat, his Vice-President, succeeded him. In April 1971 the U.A.R., Libya and Syria agreed to federate. This plan, together with Sadat's proposals for reopening the Canal, caused a crisis in the Egyptian leadership, which resulted in Sadat dismissing Vice-President Sabri and six ministers. New elections were later held at all levels of government and party. In September 1971 the tripartite Federation of Arab Republics was approved by referendum in all three states, and the United Arab Republic reverted to its former name, taking the title "Arab Republic of Egypt". Despite President Sadat's frequent assertions that 1971 would be "decisive" in the solution of the Arab-Israeli conflict, the uneasy truce between Egyptian and Israeli forces continues.

Government

The highest authority is the President, elected for a six-year term and he appoints a Council consisting of a Prime Minister, a Deputy Prime Minister and Ministers. The People's Assembly consists of 360 members, half of whom must be workers or peasants. The Assembly has a five-year term.

Since September 1971 Egypt has been a member of the Federation of Arab Republics (see Vol. I, Part I).

Defence

Egypt has an army, navy and air force. There is a compulsory two year period of National Service. The President of the Republic is the Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces, and the Ministry of War and the General Command of the Armed Forces are responsible for administration and operation. Much equipment, particularly aircraft, was destroyed in the 1967 war, but this is now being replaced, mainly by the Soviet Union.

Economic Affairs

Most of the population are engaged in agriculture. The chief crops are cotton, onions, wheat, maize, millet, rice and sugar-cane. The country depends very largely on the waters of the Nile for its fertility, and the completion of the Aswan High Dam in 1970 increased the fertile land of Egypt by one third. The planned creation of a huge artificial lake in the Qattara depression would make further substantial increases in Egypt's hydro-electric power resources. A programme of socialism has been substantially accomplished. All banks and insurance companies and most industrial and trading concerns have been nationalized, and steps have been taken to re-distribute land to the poorer peasants. The co-operative movement has been greatly encouraged and in 1964 there were 4,752 production co-operatives and 1,182 consumer co-operatives. In 1966 Suez Canal dues amounted to £95 million. The loss of the Canal revenues and of some tourism since the 1967 war, plus the cost of the war itself and the continuing state of military preparedness since, have severely strained the economy. The current loss of the Sinai oil deposits has been largely compensated for by the discovery of important oilfields in the mainland, and oil production reached some 15 million tons in 1969.

Transport and Communication

The area of the Nile Delta is well served by railways. Lines also run from Cairo southward along the Nile to Aswan, and westward along the coast to Sollum. Roads link the towns. The chief ports are Alexandria and Port Said. Over 21,000 vessels used the Suez Canal, linking the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, in 1965. The River Nile carries much domestic freight and there are long-distance passenger services. Cairo is an important air centre and EgyptAir has branches all over the world. An oil pipeline running from Suez to the Mediterranean is planned.

Social Welfare

Great progress has been made in social welfare services in recent years. There are comprehensive state schemes for sickness benefits, pensions, health insurance and training. An extensive birth control campaign, with over 400 family planning clinics, has been launched with the aim of slowing the rapid population growth. There is a maximum seven-hour day.

Education

Primary education is extended to all children between the ages of six and twelve, and is compulsory. Seventy-eight per cent of all children of primary school age now receive primary education. There are six universities. Education is free at all levels.

Tourism

Egypt has always been a considerable tourist centre. Historical remains of ancient civilisations include the Pyramids and the temples at Abu Simbel. The River Nile is popular for cruises. Over 345,000 people visited Egypt in 1969.

Visas are not required for visits to Egypt by nationals of Algeria, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon and Syria.

Sport

The chief recreations are football, athletics, basketball, horse-racing, tennis and swimming.

Public Holidays

1972: April 26 (Birth of the Prophet), June 18 (Evacuation Day), July 23–26 (Anniversary of the Revolution), November 8 (Ramadan Bairam), December 23 (Victory Day).

THE CONSTITUTION

The Permanent Constitution of the Arab Republic of Egypt was approved by referendum on September 11th, 1971. There are six chapters with 193 articles, many of them based on the 1964 Interim Constitution, but chapters 3 and 4 show a considerable degree of liberalization of the former statutes.

CHAPTER I The State

Egypt is an Arab Republic with a democratic, socialist system based on the alliance of the working people and derived from the country's historical heritage and the spirit of Islam.

The Egyptian people are part of the Arab nation, who work towards total Arab unity.

Islam is the religion of the State; Arabic is its official language and the Islamic code is a principal source of legislation. The State safeguards the freedom of worship and of performing rites for all religions.

Sovereignty is of the people alone which is the source of all powers.

The protection, consolidation and preservation of the socialist gains is a national duty: the sovereignty of law is the basis of the country's rule, and the independence of immunity of the judiciary are basic guarantees for the protection of rights and liberties.

The Arab Socialist Union is the political organization of the State which represents the alliance of the working forces of the people; the farmers, workers, soldiers, the intelligentsia and national capitalism.

CHAPTER 2

The Fundamental Elements of Society

Social solidarity is the basis of Egyptian society, and the family is its nucleus.

The State ensures the equality of men and women in both political and social rights in line with the provisions of Moslem legislation.

Work is a right, an honour and a duty which the State guarantees together with the services of social and health insurance pensions for incapacity and unemployment.

War wounded and the wives of one war fallen and their sons have priority of employment.

The economic basis of the Republic is the socialist based on sufficiency and justice. It is calculated to prevent exploitation and to level up differences between classes.

The people control all means of production and regulate the national economy according to a comprehensive development plan which determines the role of Arab and foreign capital.

Property is subject to the people's control. It is made up of the property of the State, in other words, of the people, which comprise natural resources, the main structure of production, heavy industries, public utilities, banks, insurance companies, the import business, and the most part of medium sized and metallurgical industries, and the export trade, the Co-operative Property made up of co-operative societies and Private Property which is safeguarded and may be sequestered only by court order in accordance with the law.

Property shall be expropriated only by law and against fair compensation. Nationalization shall also be by law for public interest considerations or socialist objectives.

Agricultural holding may be limited on by law.

The State follows a comprehensive central planning and compulsory planning approach based on quinquennial socio-economic and cultural development plans whereby the society's resources are mobilized and put to the best use.

The public Sector assumes the leading role in the development of the national economy. The State provides absolute protection of this Sector as well as the property of co-operative societies and trade unions against all attempts to tamper with them.

CHAPTER 3

Public Liberties, Rights and Duties

All citizens are equal before the law. Personal liberty is a natural right and no one may be arrested, searched, imprisoned or restricted in any way without a court order.

Houses have sanctity, and shall not be placed under surveillance or searched without a court order with reasons given for such action.

EGYPT—(THE CONSTITUTION)

The law safeguards the sanctities of the private lives of all citizens; so have all postal, telegraphic telephonic and other means of communication which may not therefore be confiscated, or pursued except by a court order giving the reasons, and only for a specified period.

Public rights and freedoms are also inviolate and all calls for atheism and anything that reflects adversely on divine religions is prohibited.

The freedom of opinion the press, printing and publications and all information media are safeguarded.

Press censorship is forbidden, so are warnings, suspensions or cancellations through administrative channels. Under exceptional circumstances as in cases of emergency or in war time, censorship may be imposed on information media for a definite period.

Egyptians have the right to permanent or provisional emigration and no Egyptian may be deported or prevented from returning to the country.

Citizens have the right to private meetings in peace provided they bear no arms. Egyptians also have the right to form societies which have no secret activities or are hostile to the government. Public meetings are also allowed within the limits of the law.

CHAPTER 4

Sovereignty of the Law

All acts of crime should be specified together with the penalties for the acts.

Recourse to justice, it says, is a right of all citizens, and those who are financially unable, will be assured of means to defend their rights.

Arrested persons may protest against their detention and their protests should be decided upon within a prescribed period otherwise they should be released.

CHAPTER 5

System of Government

The President, who must be at least 40 years old, is nominated by at least one-third of the members of the People's Assembly, approved by at least two-thirds, and elected by popular referendum. His term is for six years and he 'may be re-elected for another subsequent term.' He may take emergency measures in the interests of the state but these measures must be approved by referendum within 60 days.

The People's Assembly, elected for five years, is the legislative body and approves general policy, the budget and the development plan. It shall have 'not less than 350' elected members, at least half of whom shall be workers or farmers, and the President may appoint up to ten additional members. In exceptional circumstances the Assembly, by a two-thirds vote, may authorize the President to rule by decree for a specified period but these decrees must be approved by the Assembly at its next meeting. In normal circumstances, the President may object to a draft law and return it to the Assembly within 30 days but if it is again passed by a two-thirds majority it becomes law. Loans and any projects entailing expenditure of state funds must be approved by the Assembly.

The Assembly may pass a vote of no confidence in a Deputy Prime Minister, a Minister or a Deputy Minister, provided three days' notice of the vote is given, and the minister must then resign. In the case of the Prime Minister, the Assembly may "prescribe" his responsibility and submit a report to the President: if the President disagrees with the report but the Assembly persists, then the matter is put to a referendum: if the people support the President the Assembly is dissolved; if they support the Assembly the President must accept the resignation of the government. The President may dissolve the Assembly prematurely, but his action must be approved by a referendum and elections must be held within 60 days.

Executive Authority is vested in the President, who may appoint one or more vice-presidents and appoints all ministers. He may also dismiss the vice-presidents and ministers. The President has 'the right to refer to the people in connection with important matters related to the country's higher interests.' The Government is described as 'the supreme executive and administrative organ of the state'. Its members, whether full ministers or deputy ministers, must be at least 35 years old. Further sections define the roles of Local Government, Specialized National Councils, the Judiciary, the Higher Constitutional Court, the Socialist Prosecutor General, the Armed Forces and National Defence Council and the Police.

CHAPTER 6

General and Transitional Provisions

No law shall normally have retroactive effect, but this may be changed, except in criminal matters, with the approval of a majority of the Assembly. Articles of the constitution may be revised, at the suggestion of the President or one-third of the Assembly, but the revision must be submitted for approval by a public referendum. The term of the present President shall date from his election as President of the United Arab Republic.

PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY

ELECTIONS

ELECTIONS OCTOBER 27th AND NOVEMBER 3rd, 1971

Of the 360 seats 53 per cent were won by farmers and workers.

Speaker: HAFEZ BADAWI.

POLITICAL PARTY

Arab Socialist Union: Cairo; f. 1957 as the National Union, renamed 1961; the sole political party; Chair. President SADAT; Acting Sec.-Gen. Dr. Aziz Sidky; the Higher Executive Cttee. has 9 members; the Central Cttee. has 230 members, 200 elected from ASU governorates' conferences, and 30 appointed members (2 to represent the police, 2 the students and 4 the armed forces "after the consequences of aggression have been removed"); and the Nat. Congress is the largest representative body of the ASU.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Courts of Law in Egypt are basically divided into four categories as follows:

1. The Supreme Court (called The Court of Cassation)
2. The Courts of Appeal
3. The Primary Tribunals
4. The Summary Tribunals

Each Court contains criminal and civil chambers.

1. The Supreme Court

The highest Court of Law in Egypt. Its sessions are held at Cairo and its jurisdiction covers the whole Egyptian territory.

Final judgements rendered in criminal and civil matters may be referred to the Supreme Court—by the accused or the Public Prosecution in criminal matters, and by any of the litigants in civil matters—in cases of misapplications or misinterpretations of the law as applied by the competent court in final judgement, as well as in case of irregularity in the form of the judgement or the procedures having effect on that judgement.

The Supreme Court is composed of the Chief Justice, four Deputy-Chief Justices and thirty-six Justices.

2. Courts of Appeal

There are six Courts of Appeal situated in the more important Governorates of Egypt: Cairo, Alexandria, Asyut, Mansura, Tanta, and Beni Suef. Each of these courts contains a criminal chamber, The Assize Court, to try cases of felonies, and a civil chamber to hear appeals filed by any of the litigants in civil matters against a judgement rendered by the primary tribunal, where the law so permits.

President in Cairo: M. MAHMOUD ABD-EL-LATIF.

3. Primary Tribunals

In each Governorate, there is a Primary Tribunal, each of which contains several chambers. Each chamber is composed of three Judges. Some of these chambers try criminal cases, whilst others hear civil litigations.

Primary Tribunals sit as Courts of Appeal in certain cases, according to circumstances.

4. Summary Tribunals

Summary Tribunals are branches of the Primary Tribunals and are situated in the different districts of Egypt. Each of these tribunals is composed of a single Judge.

Summary Tribunals hear civil and criminal matters of minor importance according to certain details.

The Sharia Courts or courts of Islamic Law, and the religious courts maintained by non-Muslim minorities have been abolished since 1955.

The Public Prosecution

The Public Prosecution is headed by the Attorney-General and consists of a large number of Attorneys, Chief Prosecutors and Prosecutors, who are distributed among the various districts of Egypt. The Public Prosecution is represented at all criminal Courts and also at litigation in certain civil matters. Furthermore, the enforcement of judgement rendered in criminal cases is controlled and supervised by the Public Prosecution.

Attorney-General: AHMAD MUSA.

The Supreme Judicial Council

This Council exists to guarantee the independence of the judicial system from outside interference. Under the presidency of the Chief Justice, the Supreme Judicial Council contains the following members:

- the Chief Justice
- two Deputy Chief Justices
- the Under-Secretary of State for the Ministry of Justice
- the Attorney-General
- the President of the Court of Appeal in Cairo
- the President of the Primary Tribunal in Cairo.

All matters concerning the promotion, discipline or otherwise of the members of the judicial system are referred to this Council.

An Arbitration Bureau was set up in 1966 to investigate cases between state and public sector organizations.

RELIGION

Over 94 per cent of Egyptians are Muslims, and almost all of these follow Sunni tenets. The four tenets are represented in Egypt and all follow the Holy Koran and the Sunna. Villagers adhere strictly to Islamic rites and teachings. Since the Fatimide dynasty, Egyptians have attached great importance to the decoration of their mosques. St. Mark is considered to be the first founder of the Coptic Church after Jesus. The Coptic Church is known historically as the Church of Alexandria or the Egyptian Coptic Orthodox Church, and is still considered the main Eastern church. There are over a million Copts in Egypt forming the largest religious minority, there is no discrimination of any kind against them, and they have contributed greatly to the cultural life of Egypt. Besides the Copts there are other Christian minorities numbering about a quarter of a million and consisting of Greek Orthodox, Roman Catholics, Armenians and Protestants. There is also a small Jewish minority.

Sheikh of Al Azhar: MUHAMMAD EL FAHHAM.

Grand Mufti of Egypt: Sheikh KHATIR MUHAM MUHAMMAD.
Coptic Orthodox Church: Azbakkia, Cairo; f. 61 A.D.

Coptic Catholic Church: Patriarch Cardinal STEPHANOS I. SIDAROUSS, 34 Sh. Ibn Sandar, Koubbeh Bridge, Cairo; 4 dioceses; 120,000 mems.; publ. Al Salah.

Greek Catholic Patriarchate: P.O.B. 50076 Beirut, Lebanon; 16 rue Daher, Cairo; Patriarch of Antioch, of Alexandria and of Jerusalem His Beatitude MAXIMOS V HAKIM; 475,000 mems. in the Middle East.

Greek Orthodox Church: Patriarch CHRISTOPHOROS II.

Armenian Apostolic Church: 179 Ramses Ave., Cairo, P.O.B. 48-Faggala; Archbishop MAMPRE SIROUNIAN.

Armenian Catholic Patriarchate: 36 Mohammed Sabri Abou Alam Street, Cairo; Archbishop RAPHAEL BAYAN.

Maronite Church: Archbishop PIERRE DIB.

Jewish Community: Office of the Chief Rabbi, Rabbi HAIM DOUEK; 13 Sebil-el-Khazindar St., Abbassia, Cairo.

THE PRESS

The press of Egypt is far more advanced than that of any other country in the Arab Middle East. Circulation of the leading newspapers such as al-Ahram, Akhbar al-Yom and al-Akhbar reach figures of 250,000 and more, whereas even the bigger newspapers in other Arab countries sell no more than about 20,000 per issue.

Several of the Cairo newspapers and magazines have important circulations in other Arab countries although entry in Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Tunisia is at present either restricted or altogether banned for political reasons.

Newspapers were placed under the control of the National Union (later reformed as the Arab Socialist Union) by a decree issued by President Nasser in May 1960. Journalists were obliged to obtain licences from the National Union and publishing houses, hitherto free, were placed under its control. All the important newspapers and magazines are now owned and controlled by the Government, although the four big publishing houses of al-Ahram, Dar al-Hilal, Dar Akhbar al-Yom and Dar al-Gomhouriya, operate as separate entities and compete with each other commercially. The Government allows the publishing houses a considerable amount of freedom in dealing with domestic affairs but comment on foreign affairs entirely reflects the views of the Government. Dar al-Hilal is concerned only with magazines and publishes al-Mussawar, Hawa'a and al-Kawakeb. Dar Akhbar al-Yom publishes the daily newspaper al-Akhbar and the weekly newspaper Akhbar al-Yom, the weekly magazines Akher Saa and El Guil el Gedid.

Dar al Gomhouriya publishes the daily al-Gomhouriya, the daily English language paper Egyptian Gazette, the daily French newspaper Le Progrès Egyptien and the afternoon paper al-Misaa.

The most authoritative daily newspaper is the very old established al-Ahram. Other popular large circulation magazines are Rose al-Youssef, Sabah al-Kheir and Izaa w'al Television. Minority language groups are catered for by the Greek language papers Tachydromos and Phos and the Armenian language papers Arev and Houssaper.

EL SALVADOR

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

El Salvador occupies 20,935 sq. km. of the Pacific coast of the isthmus of Central America. It is bounded by Guatemala to the west and Honduras to the north and east. The climate varies from the tropical coastal plain to the temperate uplands. The language is Spanish. Eighty-eight per cent of the population are Roman Catholic. The flag consists of three horizontal stripes, blue, white and blue, the central stripe bearing the national coat of arms. The capital is San Salvador.

Recent History

In 1966 General Fidel Sánchez Hernández, leader of the conservative Partido de Conciliación Nacional, a former minister of the interior, was elected president. Long-standing animosity between El Salvador and Honduras was sparked off into armed conflict after a Salvadorean victory in the eliminating rounds of the World Cup in 1969. Although El Salvador was largely successful in the so-called "football war" which followed, the war caused her internal difficulties as Honduras expelled 50,000 illegal Salvadorean immigrants from her territory and closed her border to Salvadorean imports and exports in transit. These measures, which threaten the existence of the Central American Common Market, have been circumvented by El Salvador and contacts have reopened with Honduras to seek a way of re-activating C.A.C.M. As the Market's most industrialized country and largest exporter this is of great importance to El Salvador's long term economic prospects. In March 1970 the ruling Partido de Conciliación Nacional gained heavily in congressional and municipal elections. In the presidential elections of 1972 Col. Arturo Armando Molina, the candidate favoured by President Sánchez Hernández, emerged as the victor over his closest rival, José Napoleón Duarte, the leader of the left-wing coalition party Unión Nacional Opositora. Col. Armando will take office for a five-year period on July 1st, 1972. El Salvador is a member of the UN, the Organization of American States, the Alliance for Progress and the Organization of Central American States.

Government

Executive power is vested in the President, elected by popular vote for a five-year term, assisted by the Cabinet. The legislative organ is the unicameral Legislative Assembly consisting of 52 deputies elected by proportional representation. The country is divided into 14 departments.

Defence

A period of National Service is compulsory between the ages of eighteen and thirty. The total strength of the Army, Navy and Air Force is fixed annually by the Legislative Assembly and is never less than 3,000 men. In 1969 it totalled 6,600. El Salvador has a military bloc alliance with Guatemala and Nicaragua.

Economic Affairs

The economy is agricultural and about 60 per cent of the population work on the land. The principal crop is coffee, which furnishes half of exports. Other products are cotton, maize, rice and sugar. Commercial fisheries have been established in recent years, and fish and shellfish are the third biggest export earner. Industry is being developed and a steel works has been erected. Electric power has been substantially increased by building a dam across the Lempa river. El Salvador is associated with the other Central American states in the Central American Common Market.

Transport and Communications

The transport network is well developed. Railways are operated by two companies and there are 450 miles of track. The Pan American Highway bisects the country and a parallel coastal highway with interconnecting roads is under construction. The chief port is Acajutla, where improvements costing 12m. colones are under way. La Unión and La Libertad also provide good port facilities. Two domestic airlines and four foreign ones provide international services from the airport at Ilopango, which is equipped for jet aircraft. The country is too small to require internal air transport.

Social Welfare

The social welfare system provides for medical services and benefits for industrial injuries, sickness, maternity and old age.

Education

There are about 3,500 public and private schools with over 400,000 pupils, a national university with some 4,000 students, and a recently established private university.

Tourism

El Salvador was one of the centres of the ancient Mayan civilization and the ruined temples and cities are of great interest. The volcanoes and lakes of the uplands provide magnificent scenery and there are fine beaches along the Pacific coast.

Visas are not required to visit El Salvador by nationals of Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua or any West European country (except Italy and Portugal).

Sport

El Salvador has a number of stadiums for national and international fixtures. Football, basketball, baseball and athletics are the most popular sports, and numerous lakes and beaches are used for water sports.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution of January 1962 provides for a republican, democratic and representative form of government, composed of three Powers—Legislative, Executive, and Judicial—which are to operate independently. Voting is a right and duty of all citizens over eighteen years of age. Presidential and congressional elections may not be held simultaneously.

The Constitution binds the country, as part of the Central American Nation, to favour the total or partial reconstruction of the Republic of Central America. The Executive may, with the approval of the Legislature, endeavour to bring this about in a federal or unitary form, without seeking the approval of a constituent assembly, provided that republican and democratic principles are respected and the basic rights of individuals and of groups fully guaranteed in the new State.

The Legislative Power is vested in a single Chamber, the Legislative Assembly, whose members are elected every two years and are eligible for re-election. The Assembly meets in ordinary session on June 1st and December 1st. Extraordinary sessions may be convened by the Executive or by the Permanent Commission. The Assembly's duties include the choosing of the President and Vice-President of the Republic from the two citizens who shall have gained the largest number of votes for each of these offices, if no candidate obtains an absolute majority in the election. It also selects the members of the Supreme and subsidiary courts; of the Elections Council; and the Accounts Court of the Republic. It fixes taxes; gives power to the Executive to negotiate internal and external loans; sanctions the Budget; regulates the monetary system of the country; determines the conditions under which foreign currencies may circulate; and suspends and re-imposes constitutional guarantees. The right to initiate legislation may be exercised by the Assembly (as well as by the President through his ministers and by the Supreme Court). The Assembly may over-ride by a two-thirds majority the President's objections to a Bill which it has sent to him for approval.

The President is elected for five years, his term beginning and expiring on July 1st. The principle of alternation in the presidential office is established in the Constitution, which states the action to be taken should this principle be violated. The Executive is responsible for the preparation of the Budget and its presentation to the Assembly; the direction of foreign affairs; the organization of the armed and security forces; and the convening of extraordinary sessions of the Assembly. In the event of his death or incapacity, the Vice-President takes his place for the rest of the presidential term; and, in case of necessity, the Vice-President may be replaced by one of the three Designates elected by the Legislative Assembly for a period of two years.

The Judicial Power is exercised by a Supreme Court and by other competent tribunals. The Supreme Court is composed of ten members elected by the Legislature. It alone is competent to decide whether laws, decrees and regulations are constitutional or not.

EQUATORIAL GUINEA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Equatorial Guinea, formerly Spanish Guinea, consists of the islands of Fernando Póo, Corisco, Great Elobey and Small Elobey, and Annobón, and the mainland territory of Río Muni, on the west coast of Africa. Cameroón lies to the north and Gabon to the east and south of Río Muni, while Fernando Póo lies offshore from Cameroon and Nigeria. The small island of Annobón lies far to the south, beyond the Portuguese possessions of Príncipe and São Tomé. The climate is hot and humid with average temperatures over 80°F. (26°C.). The official language is Spanish. In Río Muni the Fang language is spoken, as well as those of coastal tribes such as the Combe, Bujeba, etc., while in Fernando Póo the principal local language is Bubi, though Pidgin English and Ibo are also widely understood. The main religion is Catholicism, with reduced nuclei of Protestants in Santa Isabel and in Río Muni. The flag has green, white and red horizontal bands with a blue triangle superimposed. The capital is Santa Isabel in Fernando Póo.

Recent History

After 190 years of Spanish rule, which had been nominal on Fernando Póo until 1858 and in Río Muni until around the beginning of the twentieth century, independence was declared on October 12th, 1968, following a referendum among the whole population on the proposed constitution. In presidential elections held in September 1968 the Prime Minister of the autonomous government, Sr. Bonifacio Ondo Edu was defeated by Sr. Francisco Macías Nguema. Sr. Macías formed a coalition government from all the parties represented in the new National Assembly. Equatorial Guinea is a member of the OAU and United Nations. Relations with Spain became strained early in 1969 after a series of anti-white incidents, and an attempted coup d'état by the Foreign Minister, Atanasio Ndongo Miyone, who was killed. The President announced in March 1969 that a new constitution would be drafted to replace that "imposed" by Spain before independence.

Government

Under the independent constitution, Equatorial Guinea is a democratic republic with a presidential system of government. The executive is directly responsible to the President, while there is an elected legislature of 35 deputies. A Council of the Republic has the function of resolving conflicts between the executive and legislative bodies. Justice is independent of the executive; the highest court is the Supreme Tribunal. Each of the two Provinces has its own Provincial Council elected by universal suffrage.

Defence

There is a small army. Spain withdrew her forces following the crisis of March 1969.

Economy

The economy is almost entirely based on agriculture, the principal products being cocoa, coffee, palm-oil, bananas and okoumé timber. About 90 per cent of the total cocoa production comes from Fernando Póo, where there are 1,000 plantations (800 African-owned) covering more than 41,000 hectares. In Río Muni 10,200 hectares are devoted to cocoa. Coffee and timber are mainly produced in Río Muni, which is heavily forested. The main markets for timber exports are Spain and Federal Germany. Livestock is insignificant and fishing is still little developed, except off Fernando Póo, where a Spanish concern operates a fishing fleet. Industry is completely in Spanish hands, except for a few Fernandino entrepreneurs. Exploration for oil, both onshore and offshore, has begun. Spain covered the budget deficit with a subsidy of about 426 million pesetas in 1969-70, and she also advanced the gold quota necessary for the admission of Equatorial Guinea to the IMF. In addition Spain assisted in the creation of a national bank and ensured the convertibility of the Guinean peseta. Spanish aid has been formalized by the conclusion of an agreement on economic co-operation.

The per capita annual income on Fernando Póo is about $330, while in Río Muni, where the bulk of the population lives, it is about $130.

Transport and Communications

Main roads link the principal centres in the two provinces with about 160 km. of road on Fernando Póo and about 1,015 km. in Río Muni. The principal communications between the provinces are by air. There are no railways.

Social Welfare

There is a fairly adequate health service with 5 hospitals and a leprosy centre. In 1966 there were 1,635 beds. With the exception of 5 or 6 Africans all the doctors were Spanish at independence, and their departure after the March 1969 crisis has created serious problems which are still unresolved, despite international assistance.

Education

Elementary schools provide compulsory education until the age of 12, and primary schools continue it until 14. Secondary education is provided by one centre in Santa Isabel, another at Bata and a third in the Río Muni frontier outpost of Ebebiyin. Sixth formers sit for the Bachillerato General. Bata has a technical secondary school which prepares for the Bachillerato Laboral. Santa Isabel also has an Escuela Superior, which has educated all the older political and administrative personnel of the country. Bata and Santa Isabel each have a teacher-training school. There is no university and about 100 students study abroad, mainly in Spain.

Tourism

Tourism is hardly developed at all. Entry of Spanish nationals is subject to an authorization from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Santa Isabel.

Public Holidays

Weights and Measures

The metric system is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the Guinea peseta, divided into 100 centimos.

Notes: Pesetas 1,000, 500, 100, 50, 25, 5, 1.

Coins: Pesetas 100, 50, 25, 5, 2, 50, 1; Centimos 50, 10, 5.

66.0 pesetas = U.S. $1.

STATISTICAL SURVEY

Area: 28,051 sq. km. (Rio Muni 26,000 sq. km.).

Population: (1960) Rio Muni 183,377 (2,864 Europeans),
Fernando Póo 61,557 (4,170 Europeans), Annobón
1,403, Santa Isabel (capital, on Fernando Póo) 37,185, Bata (in Rio Muni) 27,024. (1968) Total estimated population 250,000.

The European population has decreased considerably since the March 1969 crisis, and there are now probably less than 100 Spaniards left in Rio Muni and about 1,000 on Fernando Póo.

Agriculture: Cocoa 1966-67, 38,207 tons; 1968, 33,192 tons. Coffee 1967, 8,065 tons; 1968, 8,450 tons.

Livestock (1964): 3,000 cattle, 24,100 sheep, 28,150 goats.

Forestry (1967): 337,438 tons of timber.

Electricity Production (1967): Fernando Póo 9,470,000 kWh,
Rio Muni 5,700,000 kWh.

Budget (1969-70): Revenue 712,470,000 pesetas, Expenditure 1,139,045,701 pesetas.

External Trade (1966): (million pesetas) Imports 1,278;
Exports 1,817.

Transport (1967): Shipping: ships entering 663, ships leaving 663; Civil Aviation: passengers arriving Santa Isabel 13,863, passengers leaving Santa Isabel 14,166; passengers arriving Bata 7,350, passengers leaving Bata 7,681.

Education: (1966) 147 elementary schools with 21,421 pupils, 32 primary schools with 1,565 pupils, and 271 teachers; (1966-67) 2,095 (310 white) secondary students; about 100 students study abroad, mostly in Spain.

THE CONSTITUTION

The constitution of Equatorial Guinea was approved by referendum on August 15th, 1968, and came into force on October 12th, 1968.

The constitution recognizes the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights, and proclaims the democratic nature of the Republic. The system of government is presidential, and all governing bodies are elected by universal adult suffrage.

The executive body is a Council of Ministers, appointed by the President and responsible to him. The legislative arm is an elected Assembly of 35 deputies, who also exercise some control over the actions of Ministers. A Council of the Republic, with three members each from Fernando Póo and Rio Muni elected by the respective Province Councils, has the function of mediating in any dispute between the executive and legislature, and of resolving any conflict of authority between the central government and the Province Councils.

The two Province Councils have specified responsibilities under the constitution; the Councils are elected by universal adult suffrage.

The administration of justice is guaranteed by the Constitution according to principles of independence, security of office and responsibility. The Supreme Tribunal, situated in Santa Isabel, is the highest judicial authority.

Guinean nationals are defined for the purposes of elections as all persons of African origin born in Equatorial Guinea, and their children, provided in both cases that they possessed Spanish nationality before October 12th, 1968. There are four electoral districts: Rio Muni (19 deputies), Fernando Póo (12 deputies), Annobón (2 deputies) and the islands of Corisco, Elobey Grande and Elobey Chico (2 deputies). In the first two, representation is proportional, based on party lists; in the two smaller districts, there is a simple majority list system.

Representation in the Council of Ministers is also proportional; at least one third of the members must be drawn from Fernando Póo.

Banco Español de Crédito: Santa Isabel.

Banco Exterior de España: León 1, Apdo. 39, Santa Isabel; branch in San Carlos.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Comité Sindical del Cacao: Fernando Póo; grouping of cocoa planters (mainly Spanish owners or leasers and some Portuguese) which buys, stocks and sells the product; used to have paramount role on Fernando Póo.

Cámaras Oficiales Agrícolas de Guinea: Fernando Póo and Rio Muni; buys cocoa and coffee from African planters, who are partially grouped in co-operatives.

TRANSPORT AND TOURISM

ROADS

Fernando Póo: a semi-circular tarred road serves the northern part of the island from Santa Isabel down to Batete in the west and from Santa Isabel to Bacake Grande in the east, with a feeder road from San Carlos to Moka and Bahía de la Concepción; total length about 160 km.

Rio Muni: a tarred road links Bata with Rio Benito in the west; another road partly tarred, links Bata with the frontier post of Ebcbiyin in the east and then continues into Gabon; other earth roads join Acurenam, Mongomo de Guadalupc and Nsork; total road network about 1,015 km.

SHIPPING

The main ports are Santa Isabel (general cargo), San Carlos (bananas), Bata (general cargo), Rio Benito and Puerto Iradier (timber).

Compañía Transmediterránea: serves Barcelona-Cádiz-Santa Isabel-San Carlos-Bata route and the Bilbao-Cádiz-Equatorial Guinea route, sailing alternately from Barcelona and Bilbao, usually once a month; in 1968 there were six ships for the transatlantic service and two more for internal traffic between Fernando Póo, Rio Muni and Annobón (via São Tomé).

Arrivals and repatriation of Nigerian workers takes place through the Santa Isabel-Calabar service.

Of the 663 ships entering and leaving Guinea in 1967 534 were Spanish, 31 German (of the Woermann Linie), 27 British and 10 Norwegian.

CIVIL AVIATION

Santa Isabel airport is of the international 'A' type.

Iberia Company: four flights a week linking Santa Isabel and Bata with Douala in Cameroon; Convair and DC-7C planes are used; flights subsidized by the Spanish government.

Air Cameroun also links Bata with Douala.

ETHIOPIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Empire of Ethiopia extends inland from the Red Sea coast. It has a long frontier with Somalia near to the Horn of north-east Africa. The Sudan lies to the west and Kenya to the south. The climate is mainly temperate because of the high plateau terrain, with an average annual temperature of 55°F (13°C), abundant rainfall and low humidity. The lower country and valley gorges are very hot. The official language is Amharic but English is widely used, and Arabic is spoken in the Eritrea province. The Ethiopian Coptic Church has a wide following in the north and on the southern plateau. In much of the south and east there are Muslims and followers of animist beliefs. The flag consists of three horizontal stripes, green, yellow and red. The capital is Addis Ababa.

Recent History

Since the liberation of Ethiopia from Italian occupation in May 1941, the Emperor Haile Selassie I has ruled the country, receiving initial aid from Britain. In 1952 Eritrea, formerly a UN Trust Territory administered by Italy, was federated to Ethiopia. It became a Governorate in 1962; a banned Eritrean separatist movement (Eritrean Liberation Front—ELF) is still active. In 1960 an attempted coup d'état during the Emperor's absence was crushed by loyal forces. In December 1970, most of Eritrea was placed under military rule following guerrilla action and sabotage by ELF elements in the province. The Emperor continues to play a leading part in international diplomacy. Addis Ababa is the headquarters of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), and the UN Economic Commission for Africa (ECA).

Government

Government is vested in a Council of Ministers responsible to the Emperor, and a parliament consisting of a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies. The Senators are nominees of the Emperor; Deputies are elected by universal suffrage. Ethiopia is divided into 14 General Governorates and 82 Provinces.

Defence

Ethiopia maintains a Regular and a Territorial Army of 45,000 men, an Air Force of 3,000 and a Navy of 1,400. The United States operates a strategic military centre at Asmara, and also has a number of military advisers in the country.

Economic Affairs

Coffee is the most valuable crop and export. Grain crops, oilseeds and hides and skins are also exported. There is scope to develop forestry and industry, growth depending on better transport and the exploitation of hydro-electric power. Nearly 90 per cent of the population still works on the land and there is much poverty, per capita income being amongst the lowest in Africa. Rapid population growth has tended to cancel out recent gains in agricultural production.

Transport and Communications

There is a railway from Addis Ababa to Djibouti and a narrow-gauge track from Massawa to Akordat near the Sudan border. There are plans to extend the railway in the south to provide a service between Nazareth and Sidamo. There are 6,300 km. of all-weather roads and 20,000 km. of dry-weather roads. Bus services link provincial centres to the capital. There are 33 airfields. The port of Assab can handle up to a million tons of goods a year, and attracts some of the trade which formerly went to French-governed Djibouti.

Social Welfare

The scope of modern health services has been greatly extended since 1960, but they still reach only a small part of the population. With foreign assistance health centres and clinics are steadily expanding into the rural areas.

Education

Education in Ethiopia is free. However, only about 10 per cent of eligible children attend schools, of which there are few in rural areas and still fewer outside the Amharic areas. Thus little progress has been made in reducing the illiteracy rate of about 90 per cent, and the shortage of educated personnel is a serious brake on economic development. There are universities at Addis Ababa and Asmara.

Tourism

The chief tourist attractions are big game hunting, the early Christian monuments and churches, and the ancient capitals of Gondar and Axum.

Visas are required by all visitors.

Sport

Football, athletics, cycling, basketball, swimming, boxing, horse-riding and tennis are all popular sports.

Public Holidays

1972: May 5 (Liberation Day), July 23 (Emperor's Birthday), August 22 (Assumption), September 11 (New Year's Day), September 27 (Feast of Maskal), November 2 (Coronation Day).

1973: January 7 (Christmas), January 19 (Feast of Timkat), January 22 (St. Michael), February 19 (Martyrs Day), March 2 (Battle of Aduwa).

(Note: Ethiopia uses its own solar calendar; the Ethiopian year 1964 began on September 12th, 1971.)

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is officially in use. There are many local weights and measures.

Currency and Exchange Rate

The Ethiopian Dollar, divided into 100 cents, is the unit of currency, based on 5.52 grains of fine gold.

Coins: 1, 5, 10, 25 and 50 cents.

Notes: $1, $5, $10, $20, $50, $100, $500.

Exchange rate: $6.0 Eth. = £1 sterling

THE CONSTITUTION

The present constitution came into force in 1955 and under its terms divides political power between the Emperor and a bicameral parliament.

THE EMPEROR

The Emperor appoints Ministers, determines the powers of Ministries and controls officials. With the advice and consent of Parliament he may declare war. As Commander-in-Chief he appoints officers and may determine the size of the armed forces. He may declare a state of siege, martial law or national emergency. The Emperor directs Foreign Affairs. He alone has the right to settle disputes with foreign powers and to ratify treaties and other international agreements. All treaties requiring territorial adjustment or financial expenditure require the approval of both Houses of Parliament. The Emperor has the right to originate legislation and other resolutions in Parliament and to proclaim laws when they have been passed by Parliament. He convenes annual and extraordinary sessions of Parliament and has the right to dissolve the same by an order providing at the same time for the appointment of a new Senate and/or election of a new Chamber of Deputies, within four months from the date of the order. He appoints the members of the Senate but the members of the Chamber of Deputies are elected.

In April 1966 a Cabinet of Ministers selected by the Prime Minister was approved by the Emperor. This was the first occasion on which such a procedure was adopted.

MINISTERS

The Prime Minister is appointed by the Emperor to whom he submits the proposed Cabinet Ministers. The Cabinet is responsible to the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister and Cabinet are collectively responsible for legislative proposals to the Emperor and to Parliament. The Prime Minister presents to Parliament proposals of legislation made by the Council of Ministers and approved by the Emperor and presents to the Emperor the proposals of legislation approved by Parliament and decrees proposed by the Council of Ministers. All Ministers have the right to attend any meeting of either Chamber of Parliament and to speak there. They may be obliged to attend, either in person or by deputy, in either Chamber on the request of a majority vote and to answer verbally or in writing questions concerning their office.

PARLIAMENT

Parliament is composed of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The Chamber has 210 members elected by universal adult suffrage every four years. The Senate is composed of a maximum of 105 members appointed by the Emperor for a term of six years with one-third of its members reaching the end of their term every two years. Senators may be reappointed for more than one term. The Chambers may meet in joint session or separately. The date of their regular sessions is fixed by the Constitution. Laws may be proposed to either or both Chambers either by the Emperor or by ten members of either Chamber. Proposals for legislation approved by both Chambers are sent to the Emperor who may return them for further consideration. In case of emergency during a Parliamentary recess decrees may be promulgated by the Emperor having the force of law but such decrees must subsequently be ratified by Parliament. No taxation may be imposed except by law and all financial legislation must originate in the Chamber of Deputies.

ERITREA

In 1950 a UN resolution provided for the federation of Ethiopia and Eritrea. The new constitution came into force in September 1952.

Late in 1962 Eritrea was incorporated as a Governorate of Ethiopia and the separate Assembly was dissolved. (There are now fourteen Governorates in Ethiopia.)

PARLIAMENT

SENATE

President: Lt.-Gen. ABBY ABEBE.

105 members appointed by H.I.M. The Emperor for a term of six years.

CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES

(General Election, June-July 1969)

President: The Hon. ATO SEIFE TADEFFE.

250 members elected by universal adult suffrage every four years.

POLITICAL PARTIES

No political parties are allowed, but there are two opposition groups with separatist aims which operate clandestinely:

Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF): Damascus, Syria; f. 1963; Leader OSMAN SALEH SABBE.

ELF has perhaps 1,000-2,000 men under arms and even more supporters in Eritrea. Mainly Muslim, its aim is the separation of Eritrea from Ethiopia, which incorporated the region as its most northern province in 1963. ELF causes widespread disruption to communications, destroying trains and attacking planes of Ethiopian Air Lines. Actual battles with government forces are less frequent, though the commander of the security forces was killed by the ELF in November 1971. The Front's control is most effective in the less populated parts of the province in the north. ELF announced in November 1971 that the first "Congress of the Eritrean Revolution" was being held in the liberated areas of Eritrea.

West Somalia Front: f. 1970; based in the east of Ethiopia and representing the Somali of Ogaden; allied with the ELF.

The Supreme Imperial Court: Addis Ababa.

President: Afe Negus TESHOME HAILE MARIAM.

The President sits with two other judges. The Court has eight divisions each presided over by a Vice Afe Negus. The Supreme Court has jurisdiction only to hear appeals from the High Court. Appeals can go from the Supreme Imperial Court to the Emperor sitting in Chilot (Court) in accordance with Ethiopian custom.

The High Court: Addis Ababa; sits in 12 Divisions each of 3 Judges: 1. Appeals; 2. Criminal; 3. Civil; 4. Land; 5. Government.

Taqalai Ghizat High Courts (General Governorate High Courts): each Court has a presiding judge and two other judges. There are no foreign judges. The Governor-General of a province may sit as the presiding judge, criminal and civil.

Awraja Ghizat Courts (Provincial Courts): composed of three judges, criminal and civil.

Warada Ghizat Courts (Regional Courts): criminal cases and limited civil actions.

Meketel Warada Courts (Sub-Regional Courts): one judge sits alone with very limited jurisdiction, criminal only.

CHRISTIANS

Imperial Ethiopian Orthodox Union Church: official Church of the Emperor and State; founded in the fourth century A.D. There are about 19 million members.

His Holiness the Patriarch ABUNA TEWOFLOS, P.O.B. 1283, Patriarchate, King George IV St., Addis Ababa.

FIJI

INTRODUCTION

Fiji, which gained independence in October 1970, consists of more than 800 islands, of which 100 are inhabited, situated about 1,200 miles south of the equator in the Pacific Ocean. The climate is tropical with temperatures ranging from 60° to 90°F (16°–32°C). The population includes Fijians, Indians, Chinese, Europeans and Melanesian and Polynesian peoples from other island groups including Tonga. The capital and chief port is Suva.

A new Constitution was introduced in 1966. It provided for an enlarged franchise and an expanded Legislative Council, almost wholly elected. On independence, Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara became Prime Minister and formed his first Cabinet, seven of whom were the elected and three the official members of the former Council of Ministers.

There will be elections in late spring of 1972 for a House of Representatives of 52 members compared with the present membership of 36. There are to be Fijian, Indian and General rolls. On the General roll are electors, mainly Europeans and Chinese, who are not eligible for inclusion on the Fijian and Indian rolls. Twelve Fijians, 12 Indians and 3 General members will be elected on communal rolls. Ten Fijians, 10 Indians and 5 General members will be elected on national rolls.

At the constitutional conference it was agreed that after these elections are held a Royal Commission would be set up to recommend the most appropriate method of election and representation in the future. The terms of reference are to be agreed by the Prime Minister with the Leader of the Opposition.

In addition to the House of Representatives, there is an Upper House, the Senate. In this, 8 members are appointed by the Great Council of Fijian Chiefs; 7 by the Prime Minister; 6 by the Leader of the Opposition; and 1 by the Council of Rotuma—an island 400 miles distant from Suva.

With independence, the post of Governor, which carried with it the power of veto in certain matters was abolished. Instead of a Governor there is now a Governor-General, Sir Robert Foster, who represents the Queen. Her Majesty continues to be the Head of State in Fiji. Immediately after independence Fiji joined the British Commonwealth and the United Nations.

Agriculture is the main basis of the economy, and raw sugar and coconut products made up about 66 per cent of total exports in 1970. Rice, bananas, dairy produce and vegetables are important products. Gold mining is a major export industry and secondary manufacturing industries are developing steadily. Forestry has a big potential. The 1971–75 Development Plan provided for an expenditure of $F75 million.

Fiji lies on the main route between Australia and New Zealand and North America, and is the centre of communications in the southwestern Pacific. The international airport is at Nadi, about 130 miles from Suva. Suva Wharf and Lautoka Wharf were reconstructed in 1962 and 1963. There are no main railways but about 440 miles of light tracks carry sugar cane to the mills.

THE CONSTITUTION

At present the Constitution derives from an Order in Council of September 1966, providing a Governor, a Council of Ministers and a Legislative Council. After independence, in October 1970, the post of Governor was replaced by that of Governor-General. The Legislative Council is to be replaced by the late spring of 1972 by an elected 52-member House of Representatives.

Virtually all adults are eligible to register as electors. Twenty-seven members of the new House of Representatives (12 Fijians, 12 Indians and 3 others) will be elected on the communal roll and 25 members (10 Fijians, 10 Indians and 5 others) on the national roll (a cross-voting system by which all races vote together). After these elections it has been agreed that a Royal Commission would be set up to recommend the most appropriate method of election and representation in the future.

Governor-General: Sir ROBERT FOSTER.

FRENCH OVERSEAS TERRITORIES

FRENCH OVERSEAS DEPARTMENTS

GUADELOUPE

MARTINIQUE
RÉUNION

The Overseas Departments (Départements d'Outre-Mer) are integral parts of the French Republic, administered by a Prefect, with elected General Councils and with elected representatives in the French National Assembly and Senate of the Republic in Paris. The administrative structure is the same as in other French Departments; however, each of the Overseas Departments has its own Court of Appeal. Educational services are attached to the Bordeaux educational district for the Caribbean Departments, and to the Marseilles district for Réunion.

Ministry of Overseas Departments and Territories: 27 rue Oudinot, Paris 7e.

Minister: PIERRE MESSMER.

Secretary-General: MICHEL GROLLEMUND.

GUADELOUPE

Guadeloupe is the most northerly of the Windward Islands in the east Caribbean; Dominica lies to the south, and Antigua and Montserrat to the north-west. Guadeloupe is formed by two large islands, Grande-Terre and Basse-Terre, separated by a narrow sea channel, with a smaller island, Marie-Galante, to the south-east. There are also a number of small dependencies. The capital is the town of Basse-Terre; the other main town and principal commercial centre is Pointe-à-Pitre on Grande-Terre.

Guadeloupe was first occupied by the French in 1635, and has been an integral part of the French Republic since 1815. She gained departmental status in 1946.

The economy is based on sugar cane, which is mainly exported to France, together with its by-products molasses and rum, and smaller amounts of bananas, vanilla and cocoa. As in the other island departments, the population is rising quickly and there is considerable emigration; attempts are being made to create processing industries and to develop the tourist potential of the islands.

STATISTICS

Area and Population (1968): Area: 1,780 sq. km. Dependencies (La Désirade, Petite-Terre, Les Saintes, Marie-Galante, Saint-Barthélemy, Saint Martin) 271 sq. km. Population: 323,000, Basse Terre (capital) 13,336 (1968), Pointe-à-Pitre 26,200 (1968).

FRENCH GUIANA

French Guiana lies on the coast of South America with Surinam to the west and Brazil to the south and east. Much the largest of the Overseas Departments, it is also the least densely populated. The climate is humid, with a season of heavy rains from April to July and another short rainy season in December and January. The population includes nomadic Indians, Creoles, Africans and Europeans. The capital and main centre of population is Cayenne.

French occupation commenced in the early seventeenth century, and after periods of Dutch and English rule Guiana reverted to France in 1816. She gained departmental status in 1946.

The economy is based on forestry and agriculture; cassava, bananas, maize and other tropical crops are grown for local consumption, while sugar cane is the only cash crop of importance. There are vast timber reserves and important mineral sources, particularly of gold and bauxite. Extractive industries are being developed. France set up one of her principal space research stations at Kourou, following the closure of her Saharan station in Algeria in 1967.

MARTINIQUE

Martinique is one of the Windward Islands in the east Caribbean, with Dominica to the north and St. Lucia to the south. The island is dominated by the volcanic peak of Mont Pelée. The population is of mixed origin, including some descendants of immigrants from the former French Indo-China. The capital is Fort-de-France.

Martinique has been in French occupation since 1635, became an integral part of the Republic in 1790 and gained department status in 1946.

The economy is agricultural, based on sugar cane and tropical fruits. There is extensive emigration to France and to a lesser extent to French Guiana, but there are also many Frenchmen from the mainland in service as civil servants. A number of tax exemptions are designed to encourage industrial and commercial development.

GABON

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Gabon is an equatorial country on the west coast of Africa with Cameroon to the north and the Congo (Brazzaville) to the south and east. The climate is tropical with an average temperature of 79°F (26°C) and an annual rainfall of 98 inches. The official language is French but Bantu dialects are widely spoken. About 65 per cent of the population are Christians, mainly Roman Catholics. Most of the others follow animist beliefs. The flag consists of horizontal green, gold and blue stripes. The capital is Libreville.

Recent History

Formerly a province of French Equatorial Africa, Gabon gained internal autonomy in 1957. In 1958 it joined the French Community and attained independence in August 1960. Gabon is a member of the Conference of Heads of State of Equatorial Africa. French intervention under a defence treaty assisted in suppressing a military coup against the Government in February 1964. A general election was held in mid-April 1964. The first President, Léon M'ba, died in November 1967 and was succeeded by the Vice-President, Albert Bongo.

Government

The Constitution of 1967 vests executive power in the President and a Council of Ministers appointed by him. The legislative organ is the unicameral National Assembly of 47 Deputies elected by universal suffrage for a five-year term. The country is divided into 9 administrative regions, each under a Prefect.

Defence

Cadres have been formed with a view to building up an Army, Navy and Air Force. A Treaty of Military Assistance is in force with France.

Economic Affairs

Although timber production has declined over the last five years forestry is still the main industry. Mineral production has been rising steadily. Crude oil production, already fifth highest in Africa, is expected to increase substantially in the future as the result of new discoveries. The manganese deposits at Moanda in the south form one of the world's richest sources. There have also been recent discoveries of major iron ore deposits at Mékambo in the north-east. Other minerals produced are uranium and gold, and an oil refinery for the five states of the UDEAC is being built at Port-Gentil. Agricultural products include palm oil, coffee, cocoa and rice. There is fishing in the lagoons, rivers and lakes. A Five-Year Plan, 1966-70, provided for the investment of about £37 million, mainly to develop natural resources. Gabon is an associate member of the European Economic Community (EEC), and a member of the Central African Economic and Customs Union (UDEAC), and the Afro-Malagasy Joint Organization (OCAM).

Transport and Communications

There is a 47-mile cableway and a 184-mile railroad linking the manganese mines at Moanda with the Congo (Brazzaville) port of Pointe-Noire. Another line is planned for the newly-discovered iron ore deposits at Mékambo. There are 1,000 miles of national roads and 1,500 miles of regional roads. The widespread forests make air transport very important and there is an airport capable of handling jets at Libreville. The two Atlantic ports are at Libreville and Port Gentil.

Social Welfare

There is a national Fund for State Insurance, and the aged and the sick are given assistance at several centres.

Education

Education is undertaken by state and mission schools. In 1966 there were 631 schools with 83,897 pupils, representing 90 per cent of children of school age. There is one higher education institute, and many students go to France for university and technical training.

Tourism

The main attraction is the world-famous hospital of the late Dr. Schweitzer at Lambaréné. Wild animals abound in the forests and there is excellent hunting. Fishing takes place in coastal and inland waters.

Public Holidays

1972: May 1 (Labour Day), May 11 (Ascension), May 22 (Whit Monday), August 15 (Assumption), August 17 (Independence Day), November 1 (All Saints), November 11 (Armistice Day), December 25 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year's Day), April 23 (Easter Monday).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in official use.

Currency and Exchange Rate

There is a customs union with the Congo (Brazzaville), Cameroon and the Central African Republic. The currency unit is the Franc CFA, which was devalued with the French franc in August 1969.

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 25 Francs CFA.

Notes: 50, 100, 500, 1,000, 5,000, 10,000 Francs CFA.

THE CONSTITUTION

(Revised, February 1967)

Preamble: Upholds the Rights of Man, liberty of conscience and of the person, religious freedom and freedom of education. Sovereignty is vested in the people, who exercise it through their representatives or by means of referendum. There is direct, universal and secret suffrage.

Head of State: The President is elected by direct suffrage for a seven-year term and is eligible for re-election. He is Head of State, of the administration and of the Armed Forces. The President may, after consultation with his Ministers and the leaders of the National Assembly, order a referendum to be held. There is a Vice-President elected by direct suffrage. He will replace the President in case of his disability for any reason.

Executive Power: Executive power is vested in the President and the Council of Ministers, who are appointed by the President and are responsible to him. The President presides over the Council.

Legislative Power: The National Assembly is elected by direct suffrage for a seven-year term and normally holds two sessions a year. It may be dissolved or prorogued for up to 18 months by the President, after consultation with the Council of Ministers and the President of the Assembly. The President may return a Bill to the Assembly for a second reading when it must be passed by a majority of two-thirds of the members. If the President dissolves the Assembly, elections must take place within 40 days.

Judicial Power: The President guarantees the independence of the Judiciary and presides over the Conseil Supérieur de la Magistrature. There is a Supreme Court and a High Court of Justice. The High Court, which is composed of deputies of the National Assembly elected from among themselves, has power to try the President or members of the government.

THE GAMBIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Gambia is a narrow territory around the River Gambia in West Africa, surrounded on three sides by Senegal. The climate is tropical, and away from the river swamps most of the country is savanna bush. English is the official language; the principal vernacular languages are Mandinka and Woloff. The main religions are Islam and Christianity, with some adherents of Animism. The flag is of red, blue and green horizontal bands, with two white stripes bordering the centre blue band. Bathurst is the capital.

Recent History

The Gambia made continuous progress towards independence from 1888, when it became a Crown Colony. In May 1962 a new constitution came into effect, and after a general election, the leader of the People's Progressive Party, Dr. (later Sir) Dauda K. Jawara, took office as Premier. Full internal self-government followed in October 1963. In February 1965 Gambia became an independent country within the Commonwealth and in November 1970 took Republican status. Special agreements with Senegal cover defence, external affairs, and development of the Gambia River basin.

Government

Legislative power is exercised by Parliament; the House of Representatives is made up of an elected Speaker, the Attorney-General, 32 elected members, four elected Head Chiefs, and four nominated members. Executive authority is in the hands of the President, Vice-President and Cabinet. The Supreme Court and the former protectorate High Court merged in 1965.

Defence

There are no armed forces as such, but the 560-strong civil police includes a field force of 150 men.

Economic Affairs

The economy is based on peasant cultivation of groundnuts which account for over 90 per cent of The Gambia's exports. The acreage under rice is increasing, progress towards self-sufficiency being aided by the Republic of China (Taiwan). Textiles and clothing are significant items of The Gambia's imports. The Senegalese-Gambian Inter-Ministerial Committee has been meeting since 1961, and on February 7th, 1969 announced agreement in principle on a customs union. Budgetary aid from the U.K. continued until 1967. The Gambian pound was devalued with sterling in November 1967.

Transport and Communications

Roads in and near Bathurst are bitumenized and this has now been extended to the provinces, 330 miles of the 730 miles of roads being all-season, but in outlying parts they may be closed during the rains, from mid-July to early November. There are no railways. River transport is commonly by launch. The port of Bathurst receives about 250 ships annually, and there are intermittent sailings to and from North Africa, the Mediterranean and the Far East. There is an airport of international standard outside Bathurst at Yundum.

Social Welfare

There is a well-equipped modern hospital at Bathurst, a small hospital at Bansang in the middle river area, and a network of health centres and dispensaries throughout the country. In addition, there is a tuberculosis sanatorium and a leprosy settlement; treatment for leprosy is available also at fifty clinics. Maternity and child welfare clinics are found at 21 centres.

Education

In The Gambia there are over 100 schools with about 20,000 pupils, half of these being at Bathurst. Primary education is free but not compulsory. Gambia High School at Bathurst provides full secondary courses to University entrance, and the Catholic Mission runs separate secondary schools for boys and girls. Education is being expanded in rural areas. In 1968 the literacy rate was estimated at around 15 per cent in English and about 20 per cent in Arabic.

Tourism

The territory has potential as a winter tourist resort. The fort on James Island and the Stone Circles are sights of interest. As well as the traditional sport of wrestling, Gambia offers sailing, shooting and fishing. There is a haven for bird watchers, over 400 species of birds having been recorded.

Visas are not required to visit the Gambia by nationals of: Belgium, Denmark, Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Sweden, Turkey, and United Kingdom.

Sport

Wrestling is the traditional national sport, as well as fishing, sailing, shooting, golf, cricket, and association football. Athletics, tennis, squash, badminton and volleyball are also available.

Public Holidays

1972: May 24 (Commonwealth Day), April 26 (Birth of the Prophet), August 15 (Assumption), November 8 (Id ul Fitr), December 25-26 (Christmas).

1973: January 1 (New Year), January 15 (Id ul Kebir), February 18 (Independence Day), April 20-23 (Easter), April 21 (The Queen's Birthday).

Weights and Measures

Imperial weights and measures are used. Importers and traders also use the metric system.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The unit of currency is the dalasi, divided into 100 butut.

Coins: 1, 5, 25, 50 butut.

Notes: 1, 5, 25 dalasi.

1.92 dalasi = U.S. $1.

Justice of Appeal: J. B. MARCUS JONES.

The Bathurst Magistrates Court, the Court of Requests and the Magistrates Court of the Kombo St. Mary Division: the subordinate courts are all courts of summary jurisdiction presided over by a Magistrate or in his absence by two or more lay Justices of the Peace. They have limited civil and criminal jurisdiction, and appeal lies from these courts to the Supreme Court.

The Muslim Courts have jurisdiction in matters between, or exclusively affecting, Muslim Gambians and relating to civil status, marriage, succession, donations, testaments and guardianship. The Courts administer Muslim Law. A Cadi, or a Cadi and two assessors, preside over and constitute a Muslim Court. Assessors of the Muslim Courts are Justices of the Peace of Muslim faith.

Group Tribunals are established by the Government under the Group Tribunals Ordinance, 1933. Group Tribunals may try criminal cases which can be adequately punished by 12 months' imprisonment or a fine of £25 or both, and civil cases up to a £50 suit value. Their jurisdiction in land matters is unlimited.

GHANA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Ghana lies on the west coast of Africa between the Ivory Coast and Togo. The climate is tropical with temperatures of 70°–90°F (21°–32°C) and rainfall of 80 inches a year on the coast, decreasing inland. English is the official language, but there are eight major national languages. Many people follow traditional beliefs and customs. Christians make up 42 per cent of the population. The flag has three horizontal stripes of red, gold and green, the gold stripe being charged with a five-pointed black star. The capital is Accra.

Recent History

Formerly the British Crown Colony of the Gold Coast, Ghana became an independent state in March 1957. Ghana played a leading part in forming two African Groups, subsequently dissolved: the Union of African States and the Casahlanca Group.

On February 24th, 1966, President Nkrumah was overthrown by a coup d'état and a National Liberation Council (NLC) of army and police personnel established to rule by decree. On August 22nd, 1969, the Constituent Assembly, set up by the N.L.C., promulgated the constitution of the Second Republic of Ghana, and, after general elections on August 29th, the return to civilian rule took place. Dr. K. A. Busia and the Progress Party formed the first government under the new constitution, headed by a triumvirate-presidency. On August 31st, 1970, Edward Akufo-Addo was elected President of the Republic by an electoral college for a four-year term.

In the wake of increasing economic troubles, which resulted in a 44 per cent devaluation of the cedi in December 1971, and moves against opposition to the Progress Party in the army, civil service and trade unions, the army seized power again on January 13th, 1972. Under the leadership of Col. I. K. Acheampong, the army detained ministers and other government officials (Dr. Busia was out of the country at the time), abolished the constitution and all political institutions, and set up a National Redemption Council to govern.

Government

The Constitution provides for a President, elected by an electoral college, a Prime Minister appointed by the President from the majority party in the Assembly and a National Assembly, at present of 140 members. Safeguards against abuse of power, such as interference with elections, the judiciary, the press etc., are written into the constitution.

Defence

The defence forces consist of units of the Army 16,500, Air Force 1,100 and Navy 1,000. There is a police force of about 9,000. The headquarters of the Defence Commission of the Organization of African Unity is in Accra.

Economic Affairs

Ghana is primarily an agricultural country, and cocoa, of which she is the world's largest producer, is by far the largest export. Other cash crops include copra, palm oil and kernels, coffee and kola nuts. Over 100 farms are state run. Hardwoods, diamonds and gold are also important. Industrial development is mainly concerned with processing food and raw materials for export. A scheme has been launched—with international aid—to exploit the water power of the Volta River, and in January 1966 the main dam at Akosombo was inaugurated. Ghana opened an oil refinery in 1963, and at the end of 1968 signed agreements with two American companies for the exploration and exploitation of oil both inland and off-shore. An aluminium smelting plant being built as part of the Volta River project began production in 1967.

The Busia government's 44 per cent devaluation of the cedi was rescinded by the new military regime in February 1972.

Transport and Communications

The rail network forms a rough triangle linking Accra and Takoradi on the coast with the inland centre of Kumasi. Road traffic is of increasing importance, the Government operating cross-country bus services. Driving on the right-hand side of the road was adopted in 1965. Construction began in 1964 on a metalled road link to Ivory Coast. National air and shipping lines have been formed.

Social Welfare

The Government provides hospitals and medical care at nominal rates, and there is a Government pension scheme, but national insurance schemes have yet to be implemented. The Ministry of Labour and Social Welfare deals with both urban and rural problems including literacy, child welfare and factory legislation.

Education

Primary, secondary and technical education are free, and compulsory for children aged six to twelve in the primary schools and twelve to sixteen in the middle schools. The number of schools has greatly increased during the past decade. There are two universities with over 3,000 students and a new university college has been set up at Cape Coast.

Tourism

Ghana is seeking to develop her tourist trade. The attractions include fine beaches, game reserves, and the old British, Dutch and Portuguese trading forts and castles.

Visas are not required to visit Ghana by nationals of: Australia, Canada, The Gambia, India, Ireland, Malawi, Malaysia, New Zealand, Nigeria, Pakistan, Sierra Leone, South Africa (non-whites), United Kingdom and Colonies, or Zambia.

Sport

Ghana's national sport is football and she has three times won the West African Football Competition. Horse racing, tennis, boxing and athletics are popular. The Central Organization of Sports was established in 1960 to develop an active participation in sport and athletics.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

The Assembly was dissolved in January 1972, following the army coup d'état.

POLITICAL PARTIES

The ban imposed on political parties in February 1966 was lifted on May 1st, 1969, but reimposed in January 1972 after the coup d'état.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Civil law in force in Ghana is based on the Common Law, doctrines of equity and general statutes which were in force in England in 1874, as modified by subsequent Ordinances. Ghanaian customary law is, however, the basis of most personal, domestic and contractual relationships and the Supreme Court has power to enforce it. Criminal law is based on the Criminal Code, enacted at the end of the nineteenth century and dependent on English Criminal Law, and since amended at intervals.

The Supreme Court: The Supreme Court of Ghana was constituted on July 1st, 1960. It consists of the Chief Justice as President and not less than six other Judges of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court of Ghana is the highest and final Appellate Court on both civil and criminal matters.

The Court of Appeal: The Court of Appeal consists of the Chief Justice and not less than five Judges of the Court of Appeal. It has jurisdiction to hear and determine appeals from any judgement, decree or order of the High Court.

The High Court: The High Court of Ghana consists of the Chief Justice and not less than twelve Puisne Judges and has an original jurisdiction in all matters, civil and criminal. Trial by jury is practised in criminal cases in Ghana and the Criminal Procedure Code, 1960, provides that all trials on indictment shall be by a jury or with the aid of Assessors.

The Circuit Court: Circuit Courts were created in 1960, and the jurisdiction of a Circuit Court consists of an original jurisdiction in civil matters where the amount involved does not exceed NC4,000. It has also jurisdiction with regard to the guardianship and custody of infants, and original jurisdiction in criminal matters in case of offences other than offences where the maximum punishment is death or life imprisonment. Finally it has appellate jurisdiction from decisions of any District Court situated within its circuit.

District Courts: District Magistrates exercise summary jurisdiction throughout the country. In criminal cases Magistrates have jurisdiction to impose sentences of imprisonment up to one year and fines not exceeding NC500. They also hear civil suits in which the amount involved does not exceed NC1,000.

Juvenile Courts have been set up in Accra, Kumasi, Koforidua, Sekondi, Tamale, Sunyani and Ho. They consist either of three citizens selected from a panel of Juvenile Court Magistrates or of a Stipendiary Magistrate sitting with two of the panel. The public is excluded from proceedings of Juvenile Courts which are empowered to place a child in the care of a relative, Probation

GHANA—(JUDICIAL SYSTEM, RELIGION)

Officer or other suitable person, to negotiate with parents to secure the good behaviour of a child.

Local Courts: Local Courts now replace the former Native Courts. They have both civil and criminal jurisdiction. In civil cases they enjoy exclusive jurisdiction in cases where customary law is involved and in personal suits up to £100. They have limited criminal jurisdiction and cannot impose a fine exceeding £25 or a sentence of three months imprisonment. However, they have unlimited jurisdiction as to persons of all races living within their areas of jurisdiction. Control is exercised by the Judges of the Circuit and High Court by way of appeals and reviews in accordance with the Courts Act, 1960. Appeals lie either to the Circuit or High Court, depending on the nature of the suit and thence to the Supreme Court. Whilst in land causes a person aggrieved by any decision may appeal to the High Court, in succession causes he may appeal to the Circuit Court and thereafter to the Supreme Court if the value of the subject-matter exceeds £100.

Chief Justice: Mr. Justice N. A. OLLENU.

Supreme Court Judges: E. A. L. BANNERMAN, CHARLES CRABBE, OBUADABANG LARBI, J. B. SIRIBOE.

High Court Judges: MRS. ANNIE JIAGGE, J. KINGSLEY-NYINAH, E. N. P. SOWAH, P. E. N. K. ARCHER, R. J. HAYFRON-BENJAMIN, G. KORANTENG-ADDOW, SAMPSON BAIDOO, J. S. A. ANTERKYI, D. F. ANNAN, ENOCH EDUSEI, R. H. FRANCOIS, S. M. BOISON, E. K. WIREDU.

GUATEMALA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Guatemala is one of the seven territories of the Central American isthmus and is bounded to the north and west by Mexico with Honduras and El Salvador to the east and south. It has a long Pacific coastline and a narrow outlet on to the Caribbean. The climate is tropical in the lowlands with an average temperature of 83°F (28°C) and more temperate in the central highland area with an average temperature of 68°F (20°C). The official language is Spanish, but Indian dialects are widely spoken. Most of the people are Roman Catholics; there are a few Protestants. The flag consists of vertical stripes of blue, white and blue, the white stripe bearing the national coat of arms. The capital is Guatemala City.

Recent History

In 1954 President Arbenz Guzmán was overthrown by a coup led by Castillo Armas with U.S. assistance. Armas was assassinated in 1957, and Ydigoras Fuentes ruled until he was deposed by a military coup in 1963. César Méndez Montenegro was elected President in 1966. Much terrorist activity broke out during his term and amongst the worst outrages were the murder of the U.S. and West German ambassadors in 1968 and 1970 respectively. The right-wing Gen. Carlos Arana Osorio was elected President in March, after a turbulent campaign. Violence continued during 1970 reaching a peak in September 1970 with several concentrated attacks by guerrillas on right-wing groups. A state of emergency was imposed in November 1970. This resulted in fewer but no less violent attacks and reprisals by Right and Left extremists. Despite the ending of the emergency in November 1971, the violence continues. Guatemala remains steadfast in her claim to the territory of British Honduras (Belize) and has made several attempts to negotiate with the United Kingdom on this question.

Government

Executive and legislative power is vested in the President, assisted by a Cabinet of ten Ministers. A new Constitution was promulgated in September 1965.

Defence

A military bloc alliance exists with El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

Economic Affairs

The economy is predominantly agricultural and nearly one-third of the land is cultivable. Cotton, maize and coffee are the principal products, coffee accounting for about half the exports. The extensive forests provide timber and chicle. Mineral products include lead, zinc and chrome and there are commercial deposits of copper, uranium ore, sulphur and mercury. Sugar refining and beverages are the main industries and other light consumer goods are produced. Two oil refineries have been constructed. Nickel deposits will be exploited near Lake Izabal after an agreement made in February 1971 between the government and International Nickel's Eximbal company. Guatemala should receive U.S. $808m. in tax revenue in the first twenty years of exploitation. Foreign trade is largely with the United States. In 1960 a common market was established with El Salvador and Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica joining later to form the Central American Common Market. The National Development Plan 1971-75 was adopted in July 1971 by Gen. Arana Osorio's administration and aims at encouraging the growth of agriculture, expanding tourism to under-developed areas of the country and improving education and health services. Its target is a 7.8 per cent annual growth in gross domestic product.

Transport and Communications

There are 862.4 km. of railways operated by one state-owned and one private company, and 11,200 km. of roads. The first road in the Petén region is now being built. The chief ports are Puerto Barrios, San José, and Santo Tomás de Castilla and a new commercial fishing port is to be built on the Pacific coast at an estimated cost of 15 million quetzales. Internal and international flights are provided by two Guatemalan and five foreign lines.

Social Welfare

Social security is compulsory, all employers with five or more workers being required to enrol with the State Institute of Social Security. Benefits are available to registered workers for industrial accidents, sickness, maternity, disability, widowhood and hospitalization. A seven-year programme of rural aid involving expenditure of 44 million quetzales was instituted in 1964.

Education

Elementary education is free and, in urban areas, compulsory. Primary education lasts for six years and secondary education for five years. An intensive programme to eradicate illiteracy was launched at the end of 1964. A secondary education project involving expenditure of U.S. $12.6 million was initiated in 1969. There are two state and two private universities.

Tourism

The main attractions lie in the mountain regions, with their volcanoes, lakes and mountain villages which remain much the same as in the days of the Maya Empire. The old capital, Antigua, retains the ruins of buildings wrecked in the great earthquake of 1773. In the National Development Plan 1971-75 approximately 11.2m. quetzales have been allocated to the development of tourist facilities, in particular in the El Petén region.

Sport

The main sports are football, baseball, swimming and basketball.

Public Holidays
